RESEARCH SUMMARY

Evolution of complex societies

- study of the Chaco regional system and its aftermath in Chaco Canyon, New Mexico, the Bluff Great House site, Utah and the Comb Wash community, Utah

CATHERINE M. CAMERON

Paleodemography

- use of architecture to understand the size and social dynamics of prehistoric groups, including developing new methods of estimating prehistoric population size and composition
- exploration of the process of prehistoric migration
- the worldwide study of captive women and children as a common type of migrant

Resource Procurement and Lithic Studies

- used chipped stone implements and manufacturing debris to examine the role of Chaco Canyon as a regional resource distribution center
- developed "Chaco Organization of Production Conference"

Archaeological Ethics

- public presentation of my research, work with volunteers
- consultation with Native American groups concerning my research
