

What you should know about CU-Boulder students...

We're informed.

- 82% of CU-Boulder undergraduates reported knowing the alcohol policy when they took the College Alcohol Survey in April 2008.

- Over 60% of first year students meet with their professors/faculty at least 1 hour per week outside of class time.

- When CU-B students took AlcoholEdu last year, 87% reported that the program helped them to act when they identified an alcohol overdose.

If someone is passed out from alcohol, you can get assistance by:

- calling 911
- contacting any residence hall staff member
- contacting the campus or community police
- calling CU night security
- contacting any medical professional

We're involved.

- 71% of CU-Boulder undergraduates reported participating in community service or volunteer work (National Survey of Student Engagement 2006).

- Last year, over 50% of first-year students signed up to get involved with planning, assisting, or attending campus prevention activities.

- Last year, more than 2,488 first-year students said they intended to be involved in two or more activities during their first year at CU-Boulder, including club/intramural sports and volunteer/community service groups.

Last year, the top 3 alcohol-free events that CU-Boulder students said they were most interested in were:

- Live Music (1,542 students)
- Movie Nights (1,443 students)
- Outdoor Adventures (1,435 students)

We're responsible.

- The number of students who choose not to drink alcohol continues to increase at CU-B, which mirrors the national data.

- Of incoming CU-Boulder students who choose to drink, over 90% of them say that when it comes to drinking, their top two goals are to "make good decisions" and "stay safe" in order to avoid "getting in trouble."

Just so you know, if you do happen to receive a ticket off-campus - MIP, nuisance party, public intoxication - the Office of Judicial Affairs is notified.
