In its third decade of successful operation the Program Review Panel (PRP) has seen relatively few changes in its charge and procedures. The most recent change in its operations was implemented just a few years ago and mainly addressed schedule changes. To bring PRP up-to-date and streamline its operations, and to make it even more productive in terms of adding relevant tasks to its charge, in addition to removing less meaningful procedures from its operation, the Boulder Faculty Assembly requests that the Provost institute a comprehensive review of the PRP.
