He has been director of the Western Joint Commission on Correctional University of Colorado, he worked at player.

He teaches Criminal Justice at the University of California at Davis and Manpower and Training. His current work with drug abusers emphasizes alternative "highs," and he has done extensive work on alcoholism as well. He teaches Criminal Justice at the University of California at Davis and at the University of San Francisco. He is the father of an acclaimed accordion player.

Tom Adams is an expert in the causes and treatment of crime and drug abuse. After graduate work at the University of Colorado, he worked at the State Industrial School for Boys in Golden, Colorado, and served on the Colorado State Juvenile Parole Board. He has been director of the Western Interstate Commission for Higher Education Juvenile Delinquency Programs, a training consultant for VISTA, and Associate Director of the Joint Commission on Correctional Manpower and Training. His current work with drug abusers emphasizes alternative "highs," and he has done extensive work on alcoholism as well. He teaches Criminal Justice at the University of California at Davis and at the University of San Francisco. He is the father of an acclaimed accordion player.

Professor of Chemistry at the University of Chicago and a worldwide lecturer, Berry's research interests include aerochemistry and environmental problems as well as experimental approaches to radiationless transitions. His activities also involve him in air pollution control. Born in Denver, he has taught chemistry at Harvard, the University of Michigan, Yale, the University of Copenhagen, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Haverford. Among his publications are recent articles on limits to growth, the energy cost of automobiles, and energy use in packaging and marketing.

Keith Berwick has had an extensive and varied career as an historian, author, and social commentator. A native Canadian, he came to the United States after World War II and has been absorbed in the study of American culture and society ever since. He studied at Syracuse University and the University of Chicago, where he received his doctorate in American history. He has taught at the University of California at Los Angeles and at Claremont Graduate School and has lectured widely on a variety of subjects. He has written numerous articles and books, including American Heroes: Classic, Romantic and Modern, and has been Associate Editor of the Pacific Historical Review. Berwick lives and works at the beach in Malibu, California.

Keith Berwick has had an extensive and varied career as an historian, author, and social commentator. A native Canadian, he came to the United States after World War II and has been absorbed in the study of American culture and society ever since. He studied at Syracuse University and the University of Chicago, where he received his doctorate in American history. He has taught at the University of California at Los Angeles and at Claremont Graduate School and has lectured widely on a variety of subjects. He has written numerous articles and books, including American Heroes: Classic, Romantic and Modern, and has been Associate Editor of the Pacific Historical Review. Berwick lives and works at the beach in Malibu, California.

Robert C. Bricston is a sociologist with interests in urban studies, particularly in home medicine and osteopathic medicine and health delivery systems. After receiving his B.A. and M.A. from the University of Colorado, he got his Ph.D. in sociology from U.C.L.A. with the dissertation Performance under Threat in Defense-Conflict. He has taught at the University of California in Los Angeles, the University of Southern California, and the University of Pittsburgh and is now with the Office of Medical Education, Research and Development at Michigan State University. In addition to his teaching experience, he has worked with the Systems Development Corporation in Santa Monica, the RAND Corporation, and the C.I.A.
DAVID C. BUTTERFIELD

While an undergraduate at Berkeley, David Butterfield's documentary on population dislocation, resulting from the Bay Area earthquake of 1989, won first prize in the 1965 Alameda County Bar Association Award for Journalism. He took his Ph.D. in Synchronic Syntax, and has been involved in radio and television work ever since. He now produces and hosts the Saturday prime-time entertainment program for KDKA-TV, Pittsburgh. He is also producer of "American All," a series of mini-documentaries portraying the contributions made to American civilization by man, women, and children of varied ethnic backgrounds.

EDWIN CASEBEER

After receiving his Ph.D. in English literature from the University of Washington in 1965 and serving a short stint in the army, Edwin Casebeer settled in Indianapolis. Associate Professor of English at Indiana-Purdue University, Casebeer was trained in medical and Renaissance English literature, but teaches courses on subjects as diverse as learning skills, Herman Hesse, adult fantasy, and under the for the on subjects as diverse as learning skills, Herman Hesse, adult fantasy, and under the for the.

DOUGLASS CATER

Educator and author, Douglass Cater is Consulting Professor at Stanford and Director of the Aspen Institute Program on Communications and Society. Following his tenure as Washington Editor and National Affairs Editor for The Reporter Magazine, Cater was Special Assistant to former President Lyndon Johnson, concentrating on education and health programs. He was then appointed President of the University of Alabama, and in 1971-72 he was Regents Professor at the University of California in San Francisco. Cater has authored numerous books on communications, government, and society. His most recent publications are The Politics of Health and TV Violence, Religious Problems and the Child: The Evolution and Fate of the Surgeon General's Report.

CAROLYN CRAVEN

Carolyn Craven is working on a book on the Symbionese Liberation Army (SLA) with Tim Findley and Les Payne, also participating in this year's conference. Born in Chicago, she is a former national officer of Students for a Democratic Society. She worked with the news department of KNBC in Los Angeles and currently works on "Newsblock," KOED, San Francisco. She left KQED when a continuous news story about the Patty Hearst case was being suppressed but has returned to her job there.

C. FORBES DEWEY

C.F. Dewey is an Associate Professor of Mechanical Engineering at M.I.T. His interests range from the study of adhesion to the origin of a new branch of point of view of fluid mechanics through laser spectroscopy to air pollution monitoring. Educated at Yale, Stanford, and the California Institute of Technology, Dewey's professional experiences include work with NASA (transonic tests of missile launch), Ford Motor Company (systems analysis of ballistic reentry vehicles), and the California Institute of Technology, where, as an NSF fellow, he studied blunt and slender bodies. His publications include two books on the subject, one of which is currently a wide-ranging interests and expertise. He has a patent pending on a new Opto-Acoustic Detection System.

DOLF DROGE

Dolf Drogé, 45, former staff member of the National Security Council, is executive director to the N.D. of ACTION since September 1973. He assists the director in liaison and communications with the public and with volunteer organizations. Drogé came to ACTION from the White House where he was a member of the National Security Council staff for six years. He served at the White House on the staff of the Agency of International Development (AID) where he had been chief of Vietnam training programs. Before joining AID in Oc­tober 1966, Drogé was a Public Affairs and Information Officer with the U.S. Government in Laos for four years. His assignments included tours of duty in Thailand, Laos, and Viet­nam, as well as service in Washington as Vice Consul for Cultural Affairs and in Washington as chief of the Voice of America's broadcast service.

WILLIAM L. EAGLETON, JR.

Since his graduation from Yale University in 1948 and studies at the Institut d'Etudes Politiques in Paris, William Eagleton, Jr., has been an Assistant Professor of English and American Literature at Stanford University in 1972 provoked a heated discussion of the relation between academic responsibilities and political convictions in universities across the country. The author of ten books and over 100 published literary, political subjects, Mr. Franklin is now a Professor of English at the University of Chicago and con­tributes regularly to the Journal of American Literature, and Chairman of the Department of Religion Studies at the University of Chicago and con­tributes a series of lectures on the Gospel of John to the Riverside Sunday School. He is a truly remarkable poet, engineer, and friend of humanity.

H. BRUCE FRANKLIN

Bruce Franklin's controversial dismissal from a tenured position as Associate Professor of English and American Literature at Stanford University in 1972 provoked a heated discussion of the relation between academic responsibilities and political convictions in universities across the country. The author of ten books and over 100 published literary, political subjects, Mr. Franklin is now at work on a book about the relation between crime and the artist in American literature. He currently holds the positions of Visiting Associate Professor of English at Wellesley University and Visiting Lec­turer in American Studies at Yale.

R. BUCKMINSTER FULLER

What is left to be said about this truly remarkable poet, engineer, thinker, architect, speaker, doctor, founder, chairman, designer, adviser, scientist, writer, artist, inventor, discover­er, dome builder, artist, professor, con­sultant, philosopher, machinist, synergetic genius, and friend of humanity?

ROBERT W. FUNK

Born in the Midwest, and the father of two children, Professor and Chairman of the Department of Film Studies at the University of Montana, Robert Funk has published widely on hermeneutics, the New Testament, and the philosophy of science. The life of Jesus. His recent work includes Jesus as Precursor, essays on refrac­tory topics from the Bible, "The Unveiled Head," Miller, Fowles, and Thoreau; and a series of lectures on the Gospel of John. His forthcoming book, "The Synergetic Genius of Buckminster Fuller." Funk has been a member of the Advisory Committee for the Flathead Wild and Scenic River Study.

JOHN H. GAGNON

With a Ph.D. in sociology from the University of Chicago and con­siderable training in psychiatry, Gagnon writes widely—nationally and internationally—on juvenile delinquency, adolescent sexuality, forms of sexual deviance, and pornography. Currently Professor of Sociology at the State University of New York, Stony Brook, he is also the editor of Social science journals, including Social Problems and Journal of Homosexuality.

JOHN GRAHAM

Descended paternally from a long line of Anglo-Irish schoolmasters and currently known neither for their liberalism, flexibilty nor eccumenical disposition, and maternally from a long line of merchants, not par­ticularly skilled in manipulating the free enterprise system, John Graham is currently Writer-in-Residence for The Observer of London. Mr. Graham was educated at Eton College and Worcester College, Oxford. He has lectured at a high school teacher in Toronto, as correspondent for the Financial Times from Washington, D.C., and Stanford University, and as Washington correspondent for the New Statesman. Although he claims no publications, for which he has been honored, he has no membership in political or other parties, and no voting record. John Graham is a keen reader of book and magazine reviews, including language, music, bird-watching, cricket, and games of chess.

SONYA HAMLIN

Sonya Hamlín, who is a consultant writer at the Little Company and Little Company, working on an affirmative action program for women and minorities in the Adhesives Research Program at the University of Illinois, has just completed studies at Harvard University and has earned a B.S. in psychology and an M.A. in Education at the Harvard Graduate School of Education, where she teaches a course on media and in­formation technology. She holds the positions of Visiting Associate Professor of English at Wellesley University and Visiting Lec­turer in American Studies at Yale.
Ray L. Hart
Professor of Religious Studies at the University of Montana, Ray Hart received his Ph.D. from Yale University in 1959. Hart is the author of Unfinished Man and the Imagination (1968) and numerous articles, including “Imagination and the Scale of Man” in The American Scholar. He is currently editor of the Journal of the American Academy of Religion.

Max Hugel
Those who complain that the American executive is faceless executive who lacks the gusto of the industrial captains of the Gilded Age are reminded that he is a quizzical, look at Max Hugel. After the Second World War, Max Hugel graduated in Economics from the University of Michigan, although he majored in the Japanese language. Was he the industrial situation in Japan in 1931 and decided that one company, Brother, could expand its sales in the American market. He became the sole distributor of Brother products outside Japan. In 1933, the First International catalog today lists sewing machines, typewriters, adding machines, electronic calculators, and other similar devices. Mr. Hugel lectures extensively, produces and acts in all of his company's television commercials. His work with underprivileged youngsters, has designed a new kind of sewing machine that he has fought a bull in Spain (he survived but no one knows what happened to the bull), has "remade my physical image from short, fat and bald to tall, thin, with a head full of hair," thinks that the prospects for business are good, because new countries keep "popping up," and has "made it," in his own phrase, by irrepressibly "popping up" himself in the right places at the right times.

Christopher Makins
The British Foreign Service has its own aristocracy — of talent. Roger Makins was one of the most distinguished British diplomats during and after the Second World War, who was as much "Present at the Creation" of Western foreign policy after 1945 as Dean Acheson. His son, Christopher Makins, who was born in South Hamp­ton, Long Island, in 1942, while his father was on service in the United States, was educated appropriately in three of the most intellectual as well as traditional forcing grounds of the Establishment in England: Winchester College, whose motto is "Manners Maketh Man"; New College of Ox­ford; and All Souls College, whose in­fluence on British foreign policy Lord Boothby once described as "disastrous." Christopher Makins entered the diplomatic service in 1964, served in the Foreign Office for a year, in Paris for three years, and again in the Foreign Office for another three years. He is now First Secretary to the British Embassy in Washington, D.C.

Peter M. Mayer
A writer and translator in his own right, Peter Mayer is the publisher and editor-in-chief of Avon Books and a vice president of the Hearst Cor­poration. He has founded a hard­back publishing house, the Overlook Press, to publish books which either have been or will be overlooked.

Jiri Nehnevajsa
Jiri Nehnevajsa was born in 1925 in Czechoslovakia and served in the Czechoslovakian Army in France during World War II and then in the Czechoslovakian section of the Royal Air Force (1945). After the war he returned to Czechoslovakia. He began his Ph.D. at Zurich. He is presently Professor of Sociology at the Univer­sity of California at Los Angeles, Columbia University, the University of Colorado, the Chinese University of Hong Kong, and the University of Sydney.

Roy E. Morse
Roy Morse is a food scientist with B.S., M.S., and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Massachusetts and Oregon State. He has taught at Oregon State, the University of Georgia, the University of Massachusetts, and Oregon State, where he is Professor of Agricultural Economics. Morse spent ten years as a beverage ex­pert, first as vice president in charge of research for the Pepsi-Cola Company. He has since become interested in feeding the world. In addition to his work with the National Nutrition Board of Tunisia, he has spent time in Turkey and Guatemala.

James P. Murphy
When the foreign policy of a nation as powerful as the United States has so many widespread con­sequences, both intended and un­intended, its Foreign Service needs of­ficers who are as broadly intelligent as James Murphy. Born in Calumet, Illinois, in 1932, he received a master's degree in history from the University of Notre Dame with a thesis entitled "The Four Years of the Republic." His career in the Foreign Service since then has in­cluded missions in the United States Embassy in Paris, with NATO in the Hague, in Vientiane, Laos, as the Deputy Director of State in Washington on the Laos and Cambodian desks, and with a broader role on the Cambodia Desks. He is at present with the Kennedy Center at Harvard University but is about to return to the U.S. Foreign Service, working on Latin America. Throughout these many appointments, Murphy has been involved in the social and economic effects of foreign policy as well as the historical and political factors that are always at play. after traveling clandestinely through Cambodia and Thailand. His wife and son are still in Vietnam and not permitted to leave the country. Ngo Cong Duc favors a constitutional government in South Vietnam, but not a communist regime.

PATRICIA O'BRIEN

The first woman appointed to the editorial page staff and editorial policy board of the Chicago Sun-Times, Patricia O'Brien writes, in addition to editorial commentaries, a popular column ranging from family relationships to public policies. She has published The Woman's Bible, a best seller which examines the problems faced by single, divorced, and widowed women, and is currently researching a new book on marriage. She received a B.S. degree in journalism from the University of Oregon where she was on the University's Alumni Magazine. Ms. O'Brien resides in Evanston, Illinois, with her four daughters.

JUDY PAPACHRISTOU

A member of the Department of History at York College in the City University of New York, Judy Papachristou's special interest at the present time is women's studies and women's history. She has just completed a book, Women Together, a commentary on women's movement in the United States, which will be published by Alfred Knopf this year. Judy Papachristou's other special interest lies in the field of U.S. diplomatic history, most particularly in American policy in the Pacific. One of her articles on this subject appeared in the 1972 winter issue of the Columbia Journal of World Affairs. "Why Americans Fight in East Asia.""

LES PAYNE

Les Payne is working on a book on the origin and politics of the Sym- bionese Liberation Army (SLA) with Carolyn Craven and Tim Findley, also published this year's conference.

WAYNE PHILLIPS

Before joining the Public Relations Divison of the New York Stock Exchange in 1973, Wayne Phillips held posts in the public affairs and information agencies of Life magazine, the United States Department of Housing and Urban Development, and the Democratic National Committee. He is a graduate of degrees in jour­ nalism and history from Columbia University and has been a reporter for The Los Angeles Times and The New York Times. He has taught journalism and has lectured on government affairs. His hobbies include serials, bowling, and also a participant in the Conference. Publications at the University of Pitts­ burgh, Patricia Plants Butterfield supervises publicity and plans promotions for the schools and de­ partments of the University. With an honors degree in English, she has been engaged in journalistic and public af­ fairs work with the University since 1967. In addition, she has assisted in the production of Westinghouse Broadcasting Company television specials, most recently co-producing a series on ethnics, "The American Peoples."

SAMUEL ROSENBERG

One of the virtues of Sam Rosen­ berg as a speaker is that he says what he is going to say, says it, and then says that he is going to say it. In this respect he enables everyone to follow the perceptions of his mind into such Subjects as Herman Melville and Lot's wife, Albert Schweitzer and Mary Shelley. Rosenberg, one of his studies appeared in his collection, The Confessions of a Titanic New College, Oxford. More honors in scholarship in his home country were followed by a fellowship at All Souls College, Oxford. Rosenberg has been awarded an honorary degree in philosophy at the University of Pavia, and from there became a research fellow at All Souls College, Oxford. More honors in scholarship in his home country were followed by a fellowship at All Souls College, Oxford. Rosenberg has been awarded an honorary degree in philosophy at the University of Pavia, and from there became a research fellow at All Souls College, Oxford. More honors in scholarship in his home country, the structure of social dominance, and the analysis of scien­ tific and non-scientific ways of knowing."

ODIVIA SOFFER

His Excellency Odivia Soffer, Ambas­ sador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary of the Permanent Mission of Israel to the United Nations, has been in this position since his return from the Republic of Chad in 1965. In addition, Ambassador Soffer has been a member of the UN planning staff, held an executive position with the U.S. delegation to NATO and the Organization for European Economic Cooperation, and at one time was the Secretary of State for Education and Cultural Af­ fairs in the Department of State.

PAULO SOLERI

Thinking simultaneously of ar­ chitecture and ecology, one has­ cobin, "No man should be confined in narrow walls. He will occupy no more than a square mile of land. Soler's concept is ex­ tremely simple: compactness is ef­ ficiency, and efficiency will free the resources or time of man for the greater endeavors of which he is capable.

LAWRENCE STEINER

Dr. Steiner is a geographer at the Australian National University, Canberra, Australia, with expertise in political and urban geography and the geography of Southern Asia. He received his B.S. and M.A. degrees in the United States and then returned to work as a mineral economist in Australia. In 1964 he received his Ph.D. from Australian National University on a set­ tlement patterns in Thailand. After teaching at the University of Alberta, he served as a consultant for the Peace Corps training volunteers headed for Thailand. In 1965 he lectured at Chulalongkorn University in Bangkok and from 1965 to 1971 he was Municipal Advisor for the National Municipal League of Thailand and the Municipalities of Bangkok and Thon Buri. In 1971 Professor Steiner wrote some fifty articles, including the Ency­ clopedia Britannica article on Bangkok.

WARREN TENHOUTEN

A native of Kalamazoo, Michigan, Warren TenHouten is Professor of Sociology at U.C.L.A. He is a co-author of In Our Time: The Mirror Image and writes widely in professional publications. Ten­ Houten's current research interests are in the neuro­logical theory of hemispheric specification of dominance, the structure of social dominance, and the analysis of scien­ tific and non-scientific ways of knowing."

ENGELBERT WASHIETL

Presently in the United States to begin his studies under an Eisenhower Exchange Fellowship Program, Mr. Washieltl's interest as the Foreign Editor of Die Presse of Austria is to study the dilemma of political misin­ terpretations and to increase the knowledge of international relations. He was granted his Ph.D. from the University of Vienna in 1965 and is specialized in the field of foreign policy, writing commentaries of the United States and in 1959 went to the United States and in 1959 went to the University with a dissertation on.set­ tlement patterns in Thailand. After teaching at the University of Alberta, he served as a consultant for the Peace Corps training volunteers headed for Thailand. In 1965 he lectured at Chulalongkorn University in Bangkok and from 1965 to 1971 he was Municipal Advisor for the National Municipal League of Thailand and the Municipalities of Bangkok and Thon Buri. In 1971 Professor Steiner wrote some fifty articles, including the Ency­ clopedia Britannica article on Bangkok.

HAYDEN WHITE

Hayden White, Professor of Modern European History at the University of California at Los Angeles, specializes in modern and medieval European history, in literary history, in philosophy of history, and in the history of sociology. Hayden White's research in­ terests led to his appointment as Direc­ tor of the Center for the Humanities at the University of Southern California in 1975, and then as Professor of Historical Imaginacion in 19th Cen­ tury Europe, The Greco-Roman Tradition (with William G. McNeill) of a two-volume study of modern European intellectual history. He is a translator of both French and Italian, especially of modern writers of social observation and criticism.