Excellent service and prompt turnaround. Well acquainted with our procedures due to printing so many jobs with us.

Have had a range of quality and customer service issues with them, but pricing is good and worth exploring for jobs that are not too complex.

This vendor was passed along by CU Foundation due to their donation policy of 5% cash back on completed projects. They also run on 100% wind/solar energy, nontoxic plant-based toners, and responsibly sourced paper. As of Jan 2012, though, no one in our group has used their services yet.

Photography:
23rd Street Studios

They took some excellent photos for the grand opening of Spark Boulder. Also offer design and web services, but haven’t tried these yet.

Large-Format Printing:
We have been instructed not to use the ITLL printer for large-format printing unless in an emergency or at the express request of Rob or senior staff. Students may, of course, still use the printer for posters and similar projects.

If time permits, vendors such as www.CafePress.com may be a good choice for large-format printing, particularly as discount codes are often available with a little searching on sites such as www.retailmenot.com.

Note from Carol: We had 15 DLC posters printed for about $25 each. As I say, we may have gotten a deal because of the quantity, but it would be worth pricing them out for single posters to see if you might want to refer students there sometime. The DLC posters measure 22 x 34 inches.

PSPrint (see above) may also be a resource depending on the size of the job.

Magnetic name tags:

Note from Frannie in C2B2: We used this co in 2008 to get magnetic nametags (similar to Courtney’s today). I’d also recommend future orders have larger font on the name.

Name badges for conferences, etc.:

Note from Frannie in C2B2: We use these nametags for our sponsor events (semi-annually). No deals but they are nice

Coffee mugs:
Note from Patti Gassaway in Aerospace: Aerospace Engineering Sciences had clear glass mugs etched with a gold satellite over black silhouetted mountains, gold and black lettering, which we give to our graduates at spring commencements. We bought enough for about 5 years in 2009. Although pricey ($7/each), they have held up remarkably well.

Water bottles:

Note from Jessica Schilling: We have had a great deal of trouble with this vendor, but prices are better than most. If you order from them, allow extra time for error correction and other delays.

Table throws:
San Diego Sign Company

Note from Jessica: Turnaround is a bit slow but product quality excellent. Many other signage options suitable for trade shows, etc.
