

Thanks for your wonderful response to the sign-up events that Honors RAP has sponsored over the last couple of weeks—TEDX, Enigma Escape Rooms, etc.—and thanks to the hard-working flock leaders who organized them! There are just a few spots available for the trip to the Rockies Game on Sunday, October 2: sign up by Monday if you want to go. Coming up this week is a faculty-in-residence event, Cider and Cookies Open House, featuring the pettable dog Duma (pictured below) as well as a Family Weekend Reception: you are invited to both, information below! Also, please note that the Hall Council "Soup and Scrabble" event discussed in last week's Smithsonian is being rescheduled. Keep your eye out for that and other event postings on the bulletin boards near the front desk, including "open flock events" and the all-hall Major Fair on October 13th.

Spend some time with Duma at our upcoming event Cider and Cookies in the Gerlands' apartment!

Origami Networks: The Story of a Smith Hall Artist

By Chelsea Magyar

Bronwen Sandle, a CU freshman and Smith Hall resident, can fold a paper crane left-handed with her eyes closed. She has folded thousands of origami figures, creating large scale pieces which have appeared in galleries and a competition.

"It's kind of a counterintuitive thing because origami is really small," said Sandle. "Basically what I do is take smaller things and construct them into larger things... it's just taking teeny tiny little elements and building them into something bigger."

Sandle's inspiration comes partly from artist Do Ho Suh's piece Network, a net composed of small figurines.

Sandle's fascination with the process of art also inspires her. "The cool thing about origami is that each piece is a part of the process. Each piece is something I made by hand and that I folded and that was a part of my life for a minute."

Art plays an important role in Sandle's life. "All the art I make represents where I am in my life... it's kind of an integral part of art and what it means to be an artist, taking everything you're thinking and feeling and putting it in a visual way."

Currently, Sandle is working on a floral piece made with rice paper and a piece involving cracked limestone in which origami flowers will fill in the cracks.

Sign-Up and Attendance Tracker Policies

Sign-up sheets for events are posted on the bulletin board near the community center (front desk) in Smith. Each will have name and contact information for flock leader(s) leading the event. If, having signed up, you choose not to attend, cross out your name and email the flock leader. Sign-ups end once sheets are taken down. Persons who signed up will be contacted by the flock leader(s) for additional details about the event.

Attendance tracker punches can be had for an event organized by a flock leader or faculty-in-residence, up to one per week.

If you have any ideas for stories, contact our reporter Chelsea Magyar (chelsea.magyar@colorado.edu).
