Dean's Convocation Procedures

Convocation is a pass-fail course linked to student attendance at recitals, concerts, seminars, master classes and other important College of Music events.

All freshman undergraduate music majors are required to complete six semesters of Convocation (CONV 1990) in order to graduate; transfer students must complete four semesters.

New students attend the Dean's convocation series for the first ten weeks of the fall semester. Students must bring their BuffOne Card to each convocation session (No exceptions). Students should find the convocation monitor and swipe their card in the card reader upon arrival. After the convocation has ended, students will swipe their card again. Students must arrive on time and stay for the entire convocation session in order to receive credit.

Absences from Dean's Convocation can be made up by attending 3 programs, for each absence, from the approved list of convocations for all students. Remember to mark your attendance slip "Dean's Convo".

Students who do not attend the required number of Dean's Convocation events will receive an F and no credit for convocation that semester.

After completing Dean's Convocation, students enroll in regular convocation for an additional 3 semesters (for transfer students) or 5 semesters (for new freshmen). For regular convocation, students must attend 7 approved events. A list of approved convocation events is available in the Undergraduate Studies Office and online at <http://www.colorado.edu/music/classes/ugradadvising/convolist.pdf>.
