Robin Bohannan is the Clinical Director for the Boulder County AIDS Project and is responsible for providing care and support for clients, supervising and training staff and volunteers and managing program development and administration. She is active speaking to the lay and professional community about psycho-social and treatment issues related to AIDS.

Timothy J. Leffeld is Executive Director for the Boulder County AIDS Project and is responsible for implementing the agency’s two-fold mission: serving those in the Boulder community who are infected with the Human Immunodeficiency Virus (HIV), and serving as a resource and outreach center for AIDS education and prevention.

Richard D. Mohr, Ph.D., is Professor of Philosophy at the University of Illinois – Urbana. His publications include: Gay Ideals: Outing and Other Controversies: Gays/Justice, A Study of Ethics, Society and Law; and The Patiotic Cosmology.

Janet L. Shikles, M.A., M.S.W., is the Director of Health Financing and Policy Issues for the U.S. General Accounting Office. She is responsible for a wide range of studies conducted at the request of Congress. Specific areas of responsibility include: Medicare, Medicaid, hospital financing, physician reimbursement, access problems for the uninsured and underinsured, and oversight of public health agencies.

Andrew H. Smith, J.D., has served as Research Analyst in the Public Policy Institute of the American Association of Retired Persons since 1969. His work focuses primarily on ethical and legal topics in health care. He has written and spoken on a variety of issues, including medical malpractice, advance directives, and health care rationing.

Daniel Wilder, Ph.D., is Professor of Medical Ethics at the University of Wisconsin Medical School. He has served as staff philosopher on the President’s Commission for the Study of Ethical Problems in Medicine & Biomedical and Behavioral Research. Current articles include: “What Has Bioethics to Offer Health Policy?”, “Ethical Issues in Rational Health Insurance,” and “Ethics and Rationing: Whether, How, and How Much.”

Alan Reed Well, M.S., J.D., is the Health Policy Advisor to Colorado Governor Roy Romer. He advises the Governor primarily on issues affecting access to health care and health care cost containment. He is also the project director of a comprehensive study of health care reform in Colorado.

This colloquium has been selected to be among the events designated to celebrate the centennial of the College of Arts and Sciences of the University of Colorado at Boulder.
Bertram Morris (1908-1991) was born in Denver. Educated at Princeton and Cornell, he taught at the University of Colorado from 1947 until his retirement in 1977. He published books including The Aesthetic Process, Philosophical Aspects of Culture, and Institutions of Intelligence.

Bertram Morris is remembered as much for his committed involvement in the social issues of his community as for his scholarly work. In 1953, he began an outreach program at Manual High School in Denver that still continues. In 1978, he was given a special award by the American Civil Liberties Union of Colorado for his efforts on behalf of academic freedom and his work to improve conditions at the Boulder County Jail.

As an expression of admiration and gratitude, the Philosophy Department established this colloquium when Bertram Morris retired in 1977.