

The concern over violent crime is ever present in today's society. Your chances of being a victim of some type of crime in your lifetime is increasing. Living on a university campus is no guarantee that you will not be affected by crime.

Being involved in a neighborhood watch program could give you and your family an added sense of safety and security. Neighborhood watch programs have been involved in the prevention of criminal activity and the apprehension of criminal suspects. Both small and large communities have participated in the program.

As a service to the "family housing" areas on the campus of the University of Colorado at Boulder, the University of Colorado Police Department is committed to offering a neighborhood watch program to assist you in developing a safer atmosphere where you live. Whether you live in "Marine Courts," "Smiley Courts," or any other family housing area, we can help you implement a program in your neighborhood.

What is Neighborhood Watch ?

Neighborhood watch is a citizen involved program where residents of campus-owned housing cooperate with the University of Colorado Police Department in the detection and prevention of crime.

As a member of a neighborhood watch, you will learn how to recognize suspicious or criminal activities and how to report those incidents to the police. You will also learn how to make your community and family safer during your stay here and after you leave.

How neighborhood watch works

- ◆ You and your neighbors keep an eye on your neighborhood.
- ◆ You see a crime or suspicious activity occur in your neighborhood.
- ◆ You immediately report what you have observed to the police.
- ◆ Police respond to your call and investigate or apprehend the criminal.

It's that simple!
