This course introduces the principles of economics with an emphasis on individual economic units. It discusses supply and demand, the method of price determination in a market system, evaluates market performance in allocating society's scarce resources, and examines the role of government in cases of market failure.

NOTE: Students must register for the recitation attached to this course.

Approved for A&S CORE: Contemporary Societies