You must first put your CU login name and identikey password in to access the course webpage.

Introduction to Mathematical Economics should be listed as one of your course choices. Click on it.

There is a pin with Math Forum written underneath it. Click on it.

Now you see a list of math topics. If you just want to read other people’s postings, click on the topic that is of interest. You’ll see a list of entries. To read an entry click on it.

If you’d like to respond to a posting after reading it, click on the reply button. A new box will come up that you can type in. Click “post”. Check to make sure your new entry is in the folder when you’ve finished. It should be underneath the message to which you replied.

If you’d like to post a new message, then click compose discussion message. It will be written in blue with brown background. Be sure to select a topic for your message.

You can use the equation editor to more clearly write your math questions. Make sure the box says create new equation and click equation editor. Click on the math symbols that you need. They will appear in the box. Notice that it leaves you boxes where you need numbers or variables, click these boxes and write in your variables. Then click insert. It will put the equation into your message. When you have finished your message click “post”. Again, check to make sure that your message has posted to the correct folder.
