SY OLIVER: AN APPRECIATION

Melvin James "Sy" Oliver (December 17, 1910 – May 28, 1988) was arguably Tommy Dorsey's most important composing and arranging colleague and asset. He was also a vocalist and trumpet player. Born in Battle Creek, Michigan to musician parents (his father was a saxophonist and mother a piano teacher), Oliver joined Zack Whyte and his Chocolate Beau Brummels at the age of 17. He then worked for Alphonse Trent before joining Jimmie Lunceford in 1933. Oliver was a key force in establishing the Lunceford band as one of the more influential and successful bands in the nation. He wrote many memorable charts for Lunceford while continuing to play trumpet and perform vocals. In 1939 Tommy Dorsey offered Oliver what was then a very rare opportunity for an African-American to become an integral part of a white band, Dorsey's band had arguably become stalled in public popularity and perceived artistic quality among critics. Dorsey was looking to make a major change and was prepared to build his new direction largely around Oliver's vision. Although Jimmie Lunceford felt the loss of the prolific Oliver deeply, Dorsey and Oliver were to both profit greatly from their new collaboration.
“Sy Oliver’s a plain, commercial arranger. Always has been. So says Sy Oliver: ‘I’m just plain lucky with the publicity I’ve gotten. Hell you’re bound to get it when you arrange for Dorsey. My name’s just been tossed before the public and so they like it, I guess. You know, I can never quite understand it. There are so many better arrangers than me who don’t get the reward they deserve. Guys like Eddie Sauter and Billy Finegan can write rings around me. I never even took a lesson in my life. Someday I will, though. Meanwhile, I still never get over being surprised if an arrangement turns out successful. The most surprised party is me!’”

“Sy Oliver finally gave Dorsey in late 1939 what he had never had (and claimed not to have wanted), and what his friend and rival Glenn Miller had already achieved: a distinctive jazz-oriented sound and style. Oliver’s great talent, honed and perfected over the years with Lunceford, burst upon the Dorsey band like a series of grand musical detonations, most of which became major hits with war-time audiences starving for entertainment and relief from those years’ pressures. But these new orientations were not merely greater commercial successes; they raised the Dorsey orchestra output – and performance – to an altogether new and higher level. Musical ideas, sounds, forms – all were focused, more clearly and definitively articulated. Indeed in my entire years as a listener and student of jazz, I have never encountered as dramatic an overnight impact on an orchestra by just one individual as in the case of Sy Oliver with Tommy Dorsey’s orchestra.”

Buddy DeFranco: “Tommy used to scream at almost all the arrangers for writing too much and trying to get too far out. Nelson (Riddle) and (Bill) Finegan were the guys who wrote what they wanted to write, and it was way ahead of its time. Tommy would say, “No, take that out.” Bill (Finegan) and Nelson (Riddle) would get bent out of shape because they were proud of what they had written. But Tommy, like most bandleaders, knew what the public wanted, and tailored those arrangements to suit it. Tommy’s idea of a good arrangement was more like Sy Oliver – ya know, blood-and-guts-type arrangements.”

HOW TO READ THIS STUDY

This study is meant to give information on the structure of the arrangements in a rather simple and understandable form. Let us look at “Swing High” as an example:

SWING HIGH
(Recorded)
October 16, 1940

AABA 32//4intro band/16 band;8 saxes;8 band/4 band+Buddy Rich;4 Johnny Mince+band;4 band+Buddy Rich;4 Johnny Mince+band;8 Johnny Mince+tbns;4 band+Buddy Rich;4 Johnny Mince+band/32 Don Lodice/32 Ziggy Elman/16 band+tpt;8tbns;8 band+tpt/AA16 band/2coda band/

The name of the tune and the recording date are straightforward. The songwriter and/or lyricist is not included. This information is contained elsewhere in the GMA Catalog.

Then the format is defined. This is a standard AABA 32 bar melody with the 8-bar A-theme played twice, an 8-bar bridge and the A-theme once more. If there is a verse it is then stated in the same way.

Every chorus, introduction, interlude or coda is separated by a /.

Band means that most of the band is involved; saxes that it is mainly saxes playing; brass means mainly trumpets and trombones, tpts means mainly trumpets and so on.

In most cases solos are indicated by the name of the soloist, i.e. Johnny Mince playing clarinet. Some musicians play more than one solo instrument and which one is then indicated, f ex Johnny Mince (alto).

Now to how this arrangement develops:

It starts with a 4 bar introduction played by the whole band.

Then comes the first chorus where the first 16 bars are played by the whole band, the following 8 (the bridge) by the sax section, and the last 8 by the whole band.

The second chorus starts with 4 bars by the band and Buddy Rich´s drums, then 4 bars clarinet-solo by Johnny Mince with the whole band in the background, the first 8 bars are repeated, then there is an 8 bar solo by Johnny Mince with the trombone section in the background, and then the first 8 bars are repeated.

The third chorus is a 32 bar tenor solo by Don Lodice.

The fourth chorus is a 32 bar trumpet solo by Ziggy Elman.
In the fifth chorus the first 16 bars are played by the whole band and a trumpet (most likely Ziggy Elman alone but a second trumpet is also possible), the following 8 bars by the trombone section and the last 8 by the band and (two) trumpet(s).

The last chorus is only 16 bars the A-theme played twice by the whole band.

Finishing the arrangement off is a 2 bar coda played by the whole band.

ABOUT THE ARRANGEMENTS

There are Seventy (70) recorded arrangements during the period May 1939 to September 1943. One recording from July 20, 1939, “The Song Is You,” has not been available for analysis.

It is doubtful that this is a Sy Oliver arrangement (it’s more likely by Axel Stordahl).

“Snootie Little Cutie” has been mentioned as a Paul Weston arrangement, but I seriously doubt it. My vote is for Sy Oliver. The same goes for “Stop! It’s Wonderful,” but the chart has some Oliver-like figures so I believe that Oliver wrote that one.

“Quiet, Please!” and “Not So Quiet, Please!,” recorded and broadcast several times 1939 – 1943 are both 8 or 16 bar - type tunes mainly consisting of solos by Buddy Rich have not been analyzed in all instances.

“Dig Down Deep” was used as a jingle for war bonds in many broadcasts and these are of less interest and therefore not included. The same goes for “Free For All.” These broadcasts have only in some instances been included.

Several tunes, arranged by Sy Oliver, broadcast in part or as medleys, for example “Button Up Your Overcoat,” “China Boy,” “I May Be Wrong,” “If I had You,” “The Music Goes Round and Round,” “When My Dreamboat Comes Home,” “Weep No More My Lady,” “Three Little Words,” “42nd Street,” “Out Of Nowhere,” and “Yes! Indeed” have not been included.

“Practice Makes Perfect,” “Hindustan” and “Murder, He Says” are most likely by Oliver, but no verification has been found.

There are some tunes that might be arranged by Sy Oliver: “Rhumboogie,” “I Can’t Love You Anymore,” “Frenesi,” and “You Think Of Everything.” They have not been included.

It appears from Oliver’s personal files (New York Public Library), that he also brushed up “I’m Getting’ Sentimental Over You,” “Boogie Woogie,” “Who?”, ”Marie,” “Song Of India and “Hawaiian War Chant,” and wrote covers for “Tuxedo Junction,” “Blues In The Night,” “And The Angels Sing” and many more. These are not included.

There are different opinions on who wrote the chart for “This Is The Beginning Of The End,” Oliver or Fred Stulce, so it has not been included.

The “Lonesome Road” is a Bill Finegan chart, not by Dean Kincaide and not by Oliver as some sources suggest. There even is a well known story that TD recommended Finegan to Glenn Miller and got him started as an arranger.

“Old Black Joe” has been assigned to Oliver and to Dean Kincaide, but is in reality the work of Paul Weston. Some others like “Old Man Harlem,” “Skater’s Waltz” and “Judgment Day Is Coming” sound like Oliver charts, but are most likely by Kincaide.

“Neiani,” “Fascinating Rhythm” and some other charts were co-operations between Oliver and Axel Stordahl. They have not been included.

Recordings for movies like “Moonlight Bay,” “Dolores” and “I’ll Take Tallulah” have not been included.
