FORWARD

The late Richard Sherwood Sears was the author of the definitive histories of the V-Disc recording program. The Richard Sherwood Sears Collection contains the complete Sears papers, research, correspondence and supporting documents, as well as V-Disc recordings, test pressings, tapes, photographs and other materials. From the Sears Collection and its many other substantial collections, the AMRC Glenn Miller Collections holds a generally complete and unique V-Disc compilation.

All of the recordings listed in this catalog are preserved in the Glenn Miller Archive Collections in either Army, Navy or Marine Corps V-Disc issues and test pressings. This is a work in progress. V-Discs are added to this inventory regularly.

INTRODUCTION

During 1940, the United States Army established a Morale Branch in Washington, D.C. The Morale Branch included two sections that contained the seeds that grew into two major morale-boosting units, AFRS and the V-Disc group. AFRS grew out of the Radio Section. The Recreation and Welfare Section spawned the V-Disc program. Until July 1942, the Section was distributing copies of current record releases to service personnel, when a recording ban was imposed by the American Federation of Musicians (AFM). The ban would last until November 1944 for RCA Victor and Columbia. Decca and Capitol settled in September 1943.

By April 1942, the offices of the Radio Section were established in New York and Los Angeles. The New York office was organized for program production. The Los Angeles office was designated as program and production headquarters. By June 1943 Los Angeles had supplanted New York as the primary production center. In May 1942, Thomas H. A. Lewis of Young and Rubicam was commissioned and made head of the Radio Section. Lewis was located in Los Angeles and had extensive industry contacts and influence. Thus it was obvious that AFRS would concentrate its activities in Los Angeles. The New York Radio Section office was run by Ed Kirby, formerly of WSM, Nashville. Kirby's production team launched programs such as "Command Performance," in New York, which were moved to Los Angeles.

Lt. (later Capt.) Robert Vincent was a technical officer in the Radio Section offices in New York. He was involved with the shipment of transcriptions overseas of the Radio Section's radio programs and commercial programs (commercials edited out) (see CU-GMC Catalog GMC-6). Because of the AFM strike, after July 1942 phonograph records of current music were lacking and lagging in the packages that were shipped out.

G M C

In July 1943, Vincent went to the Pentagon to propose a special recording project as a means of providing currently popular and other music on records for overseas packages. The V-Disc project was approved. Vincent was transferred from the Radio Section to the Music Section to devote his full time attention to the new recording program. He set up offices at 205 East 42nd Street in New York. He reached agreements with the AFM and AFRA (American Federation of Radio Artists) regarding the waiver of all fees and royalties for musicians' services and copyright payments for the published music. In return for these concessions, the Army agreed that V-Discs would be for the use of military personnel only and no commercial exploitation would be made of the recordings. These agreements made it possible for the Army to afford the V-Disc program by focusing funds for processing and pressing records. Similar agreements were reached by AFRS regarding their radio programs.

By October 1943 there was no connection between the V-Disc program and AFRS. V-Discs were neither recorded by nor for AFRS. The V-Disc unit was located in New York and AFRS was located in Los Angeles.

Working for Vincent on his immediate staff were Tony Janak and Morty Palitz, formerly of Columbia records; Steve Sholes and Wally Heebner, formerly of RCA Victor, and, later, George T. Simon, formerly editor of Metronome Magazine (replacing Palitz). In March 1944, the team moved to 25 West 45th Street, New York. The Navy decided to join the project and assigned Lt. Edmond "Digi" DiGiannantonio as their representative. In July 1944, a V-Disc radio program, "For the Record," was added and aired over the NBC flagship station WEAJ.

Songwriter Frank Loesser was assigned to the Music Branch and worked with the V-Disc staff on various projects. By October 1944, the Marine Corps also joined the V-Disc program and assigned Capt. Lee Kamern as their representative.

Following the secession of hostilities, Robert Vincent was promoted to Major and awarded the Legion of Merit for his work with the V-Disc program. M/Sgt. Tony Janak took over the program in October 1945. The V-Disc program continued on a reduced scale. The V-Disc program was phased out in May 1949 with its "FFF" release.

SOURCES

During the first months of the program, the small V-Disc staff had to use any material that they could find and expeditiously produce. As the V-Disc group was organized and fully staffed, it was able to procure unlimited material and became very selective. It is estimated that less than 20 percent of the material that the group had available and worked with was ever actually issued. There were eight primary sources for V-Discs: special recording sessions, concerts, recitals, radio broadcasts, broadcast dress rehearsals, radio transcriptions (both commercial and AFRS), film sound tracks and commercial records (both issued and unissued versions). Spoken introductions were included on many V-Discs to establish a more personal relationship between the artists and overseas listeners. Special V-Disc sessions were recorded in the field. The most frequently used facilities were CBS Playhouse 2, CBS Playhouse 3 (the Ed Sullivan Theatre, from where today's David Letterman program airs), CBS Playhouse 4 (which became the Studio 54 disco), Columbia Records, Liederkrantz Hall, NBC, RCA Victor Records, the Vanderbilt Theatre (NBC) and the World Broadcasting System studios. World was owned by Decca records during the V-Disc period. Hollywood's NBC and CBS studios were also used for V-Disc sessions. Numerous radio programs were transmitted by direct line to NBC and CBS in New York for recording. The V-Disc program had access to radio transcription libraries. Many selections from 16-inch 33 1/3-rpm transcription discs can be found on V-Disc. Sources included AFRS, NBC Thesaurus, World, Langworth and Standard.

RECORDINGS

V-Discs themselves were 12-inch 78-rpm records, which were recorded with a fixed number of lines or grooves per inch. For recording times of up to 4:30 minutes, 96 lines per inch were used. For up to 6:30 minutes, 136 lines per inch were squeezed onto the record. By comparison, 85 to 97 lines per inch were used for standard commercial 10-inch 78-rpm records. The maximum V-Disc playing time of 6:30 minutes compares to the maximum playing time of standard 10-inch 78-rpm records of 3:25 minutes and 12-inch 78-rpm records of 4:20 minutes. The V-Disc group safety recordings were single-sided 16-inch 33 1/3-rpm discs with a number of music tracks.

Tony Janak's Job Description

PRODUCTION

Commercial 78-rpm recordings were made of shellac and were very fragile. Breakage of records sent overseas was a problem. Broken records meant delays. Shellac was in short supply. The main sources of shellac were the Malay Peninsula and French Indochina, which were occupied by the Japanese. Vinylite was therefore used during initial V-Disc production. It was a Union Carbide resin which had been used for radio transcriptions since the early 1930s. Vinylite records were flexible and almost unbreakable. Unfortunately, Vinylite was also in short supply and prioritized for military use in electrical insulation, life rafts and so forth. A substitute was found in Formvar, a Canadian polyvinyl acetal resin that was developed by subsidiary of Monsanto Chemical Company. Most of the V-Discs pressed between 1943 and 1946 were produced at the RCA Victor Camden, New Jersey plant.

DISTRIBUTION

Records produced at RCA Victor in Camden, New Jersey and at other locations were shipped and collated at Camden, assembled into complete releases and packed in boxes. The cardboard boxes were designed for safe overseas shipment without breakage or damage. The boxes were coated with wax and waterproof glues, shockproof and impervious to varying climatic conditions. 100 Duotone or Microphonic steel needles were enclosed in each box with a letter from Capt. Vincent inviting requests and comments. The first V-Discs were shipped from Camden October 1, 1943. This initial "A" release consisted of 1,780 boxes of thirty records each (V-Discs 1-30) for a total of 53,400 records.

The boxes went to eight POEs (Ports of Embarkation) operated by the Army for shipment overseas. The POEs were New York (Brooklyn), Boston, Newport News, Charleston, New Orleans, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Seattle. A major portion of the boxes went through Brooklyn. From the POEs the boxes went to the headquarters of theatres of operation in Alaska, Iceland, England, Italy, Sicily, Africa, the Persian Gulf, India, China, Guadalcanal and Australia. From the theatre headquarters the boxes were distributed to military units. V-Discs were also distributed on a limited basis to bases in the United States. Shipments were reduced to 20 records per box beginning with the "E" release in February 1944 (V-Discs 121-140).

Production trebled in 1944 because of demand from the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, OWI (Office of War Information) and OIAA (Office of Inter-American Affairs). By January 1945, 3,000 V-Discs were being produced and distributed each month. By Sep 45, total production reached four and one half million records. By the end of the program, it is estimated that more than eight million V-Discs were distributed.

NAVY AND MARINE CORPS V-DISCS

The Navy issued 275 V-Discs from July 1944 (Release A) through September 1945 (Release N). Marine Corps V-Discs were exact copies of Navy V-Discs. Navy releases A-E (Navy 1-100) were exact duplicates of Army releases J-N (V Discs 221-320). Navy releases F to I do not exactly duplicate Army releases. Navy releases J-N were exact duplicates of Army releases. The Navy did not duplicate Army release W. Navy N duplicates the Army X release (V Discs 501-515). Then the Navy joined a combined services program.

ABOUT THE MASTER AND SERIAL NUMBERS

The letter/number system that was used for V-Discs was devised as a method for controlling the large volume of material being assembled for eventual release. The Master numbers were prefixed with the letters VP, JDB, JB, or J. VP probably meant V-Disc Pressing. The subsequent codes represented the last names of V-Disc producers (Tony Janak, Keith Davis and Frank Bruno). The assignment system worked in two ways: the V-Disc office gathered audio material in the form of 16 inch, 33 1/3 rpm safety copies. V-Disc personnel took the safeties to the recording companies to be mastered. The companies assigned their current serial numbers. A record of these serial numbers was kept at V-Disc offices for reference. The V-Disc office ordered pressings by the recording company assigned serial numbers. If original V-Disc material were recorded at one of the recording company studios, the recording company would assign its current serial number to each title that was recorded. In this case, when a decision was made to issue a recording, then a V-Disc master number was assigned.

RCA Victor and NBC used the regular RCA custom pressing serial number sequence, which was adapted in Jan 43. A typical custom pressing number might be D4TC-10-1C, or: D4: 1944; T: USA V-Disc account, (or M: RCA Victor transcription); C: 12" 78 rpm; 35: the 35th pressing for the V-Disc account in 1944 (dropped in mid-1945 by RCA Victor); 1-C: the V-Disc group's dash number). RCA Victor (NBC) was the prime contractor for the V-Disc program between 1943 and 1947.

Columbia records and CBS used an "XP" series of serial numbers . World recording studios used a "B" series of serial numbers. Universal Sound Studios in Los Angeles used a "USS" series of serial numbers.

1.01 AAFTAC SYMPHONETTE

The AAFTAC (Army Air Forces Tactical Center) Symphonette was a symphonic group consisting of 22 strings and 3 woodwinds (flute, oboe and bassoon) made up of former symphony orchestra and studio musicians. The group was stationed at the AAF Tactical Center, Orlando Army Air Base, Florida, located two miles east of the city. Pinecastle Army Air Field, later named McCoy Air Force Base and now the present-day Orlando International Airport, was located south of the city. Harry Salter of the Music Section and V-Disc staff flew to Orlando for the session and airsickness was reportedly rampant.

1.26 ESQUIRE ALL-AMERICAN JAZZ CONCERTS

In early 1944, "Esquire" magazine presented the first of three annual jazz concerts. The initial concert was on Tuesday, January 18, 1944 at the 60-year-old Metropolitan Opera House, which was located at Broadway between 39th and 40th Streets, New York. The National Women's Council of the Navy League of the United States sponsored the concert for the promotion of War Bond sales (the fourth War Loan Drive had just gotten underway). Admission to the concert was limited to purchasers of War Bonds ($25-$100) and box subscribers. A capacity audience of 3,600 (in the 3,045-seat auditorium) purchased over $850,000 of War Bonds.

The All-American Jazz Band, selected by 16 experts, was featured at the two-hour concert (8:45-11:30 p. m. with intermission). Fred Robbins of radio station WOV, New York, produced the show and jazz critic Leonard Feather was the master of ceremonies. Belgian Dr. Robert Goffin, author, jazz critic and chairman of the board of judges, presented awards of statuettes, and $500 War Bonds, to the poll winners.

Members of the All-American Jazz Band helped to publicize the concert by appearances on various radio programs, including WNEW's "Swing Session" (January 15), the Blue Network's "Chamber Music Society of Lower Basin Street" (January 16) and WNEW's "Swing Festival" week (January 16-22). Twenty-five minutes of the concert were broadcast (9:30-9:55 p.m.) over the Blue Network's New York flagship station WJZ and coast-to-coast on the Coca Cola "Victory Parade of Spotlight Bands" program. AFRS dubbed 90 minutes of the program and issued it as "One Night Stand" series programs 186-188.

The V-Disc staff took its portable recording equipment to the Opera House for the concert, but they did not have sufficient microphones and encountered various technical problems. As the quality of the Blue Network facilities operated by NBC were superior, the V-Disc staff had the Blue Network feed the program into the NBC studios where the material was recorded for V-Disc use.

A segment with Benny Goodman appearing long-distance from Hollywood is part of the Blue Network broadcast. Goodman appears to accept his award and performs. Benny is introduced by 20th Century Fox Film Director Archie Mayo, who was directing the film "Sweet and Low Down" starring Benny Goodman and his Orchestra. Mayo was also directed the 1942 Fox film "Orchestra Wives" starring Glenn Miller and his Orchestra.

1.27 FOR THE RECORD

The 1944 “For the Record” radio programs were designed to present the musical talent appearing on V-Discs to the American public. Different orchestras, vocalists and groups were featured on each program. Military personnel overseas were requested to recommend artists and songs that they wanted to hear on the programs. The programs were planned, produced and directed by Jack Hurdle and George T. Simon (GMC donor); both recruited the artists for the series. The programs were broadcast Monday evening at 11:30 p.m. to Midnight, Eastern War Time. The broadcasts generally emanated from NBC Studio 8-H at Rockefeller Center, which was the studio used by the NBC Symphony Orchestra. Several broadcasts emanated from Chicago, Illinois and Washington, DC. The sustaining (non-sponsored) series was broadcast by NBC nationwide. It ran for 17 weeks, July 31, 1944 to November 20, 1944. The broadcasts were recorded by NBC on 16-inch acetate safeties, from which the V-Disc staff culled selections for possible future V-Disc use. AFRS also copied portions of several broadcasts and issued the material on transcriptions such as the AFRS Basic Music Library.

Spanish-born classical guitarist Vicente Gomez became a naturalized American citizen and was a Private in the U. S. Army in 1944. Capt. This unit was stationed at the AAF Training Command School, Yale University, New Haven, Connecticut and was created in December 1943 when Capt. Glenn Miller's 418th AAF Band was separated into Miller's elite Radio Production Unit (2nd AAF RPU) and the 718th AAF Band, commanded by W/O Robert Boucher. The 718th continued base duties such as a marching band sub-unit and contained numerous sub-units or small groups. Cpl. George T. Simon remained with the 718th AAF Band when Miller's unit was shipped overseas and recorded this sub-unit of the band for V-Discs.

MEMORANDUM FOR: CHIEF, V-DISC AND RECORDING SECTION, MUSIC BRANCH

SUBJECT: West Coast Operations.

1. I should like to report on my activities during the period 2 August through 15 August, in connection with the inspection of production facilities for V-Discs on the West Coast, and also in connection with the recording of the talent available.
2. As regards the production facilities of the Morris Morris Company, I have the following to report:

- a. On arrival in California, personal contact was made along with Mr. Victor Blau, and the first day was spent in consultation with a Mr. Leff, who is the General Manager of the plant. Mr. Morris was out of town. Inspection of the entire plant was made, and later an open discussion was held with Mr. Leff. Mr. Leff seemed to be a little uninformed as to why Morris Morris had attempted to secure government contract for the production of V-Discs, but was will to discuss and try the suggestions which I made to him. These were: to supply him with stamping plates and biscuits, and he was to set one 12 inch press in operation a few days later to make up some samples. After these arrangements had been made, a few days were allowed at which time they were to experiment with the material provided. A few days later, Mr. Leff was contacted once again, and at this time Mr. Leff frankly admitted that the only reason he could see why Mr. Morris was attempting to secure the government contract was that they needed personnel, and "Gongo Black", a material used in the manufacture of commercial shellac records. Since both these items were not forthcoming with any contract for the production of plastic records for the Army, he felt that they had enough to worry about in producing their own commercial product. The attached letter gives his final decision.

- b. After careful observation, I would state that the facilities offered were completely exaggerated and any reasonable amount of plastic production would not be forthcoming for at least a year, even with their desire to press, had there been one.

3. As regards the live recording of talent on the West Coast:

a. Local 47 of the Musicians Union in Los Angeles was contacted and after several days, clearance was granted on all dates I was desirous of booking. The attached letter was clearance on the first date, and later, verbally, complete permission was granted on all talent approached and willing to record for V-Discs. All this, through the kind efforts of Mr. Phil Fisher.

b. Live recording sessions held included: SPIKE JONES, CARMEN CAVALLARO, LES PAUL & TRIO, U.S. MARITIME BAND, FREDDY MARTIN, HOAGHY CARMICHAEL, and CARLOS MOLINA AND HIS LATIN RHYTHMS.

4. Other material sources included the STANDARD Transcription Service, who are recording all the top talent for radio broadcast. Executives were contacted, and after an exchange of wires between Hollywood and New York, complete permission was granted for the copying of desirable material in their library. Recorded cuts on safeties have already been ordered and are in the copying stages at Columbia, Hollywood.

5. Mr. Harold Oxley, manager of the Jimmy Lunceford Orchestra, was also approached for the services of the Lunceford Orchestra. On his suggestion, the Los Angeles County Tuberculosis and Health Association were contacted in an attempt to secure material recorded for them by the Lunceford aggregation, and Miss Lena Horne. The attached letter explains same, and will be followed up by mail from New York.

6. The top advertising agencies on the West Coast, including Bathrauff & Ryan, Lennen & Mitchell, J. Walter Thompson, and the Biow Company, were approached for possible recording of dress rehearsals on the top fall musical programs. These conversations will also be followed up by correspondence.

7. Artists, including Bing Crosby, Frances Langford, Tommy Dorsey, Hoaghy Carmichael, Spike Jones, Guy Lombardo, and others, were in complete accord with my plans to record their dress rehearsals, and to do special V-Discs piping whenever time was available.

8. Bing Crosby was approached through his offices and his brother, ~~Larry Crosby~~. I informed Larry Crosby that V-Discs were in need of some of Bing's material, and suggested two solutions. One was for the clearance, by Bing, of his material with Armed Forces Radio Service, through Colonel Lewis. This was done, and after lengthy phone conversations with Captain Shuman of that Unit, it was discovered that the material offered was a repetition of material in our possession of the Kraft Music Hall broadcasts. Later, it was suggested to Mr. Crosby that a recording session be held with a small group, or with an organ. Mr. Crosby expressed his desire and willingness to do this, but stated that at the present he was tied up with Paramount, shooting a picture. Since possible contact will be made for future Sing Along records, this situation was not pressed pending some free time on the part of Mr. Crosby.

9. The U.S. Maritime Band of Santa Catalina, and its officer personnel, were contacted with regard to the recording of their dance band. Permission was granted and the recording was held at NBC Hollywood, on 9 August. The Public Relations Department expressed an earnest desire to communicate with Colonel Bronson with an eye toward procuring regular V-Discs, and also to adopt their own label. This, for Merchant Marine consumption throughout the world.

10. If any further explanation is requested, I should be glad to discuss more fully the work accomplished.
