Meet the 2019-2020 Faculty Fellows

Congratulations to our third cohort of ASSETT Faculty Fellows! The program brings together a community of faculty who are committed to the continuous improvement of teaching and learning with technology.

Incubation Innovator Underway

ASSETT is supporting four three-year projects to improve teaching with technologies. The faculty-designed projects will be cross-disciplinary, involve students in development and implementation, and promote active learning.

Supporting Graduate Students Who Teach

In fall 2018, PhD student Tyler Denton took advantage of two of ASSETT's services. He describes how they helped him expand opportunities for class participation and gain insights into his teaching effectiveness.

Coming Soon: Summer Event Registration!

Watch our Upcoming Events page for information on the Summer Book Club and Course Design Workshop.

Letter from the Advisor

The ASSETT advisor position is designed to rotate among faculty members as a means of being more inclusive, more connected, and more responsive to the diversity of interests and pedagogical approaches encompassed by the incredible faculty, staff and students in the College of Arts and Sciences.

Teaching Tip: Insights from the Academic Tech Survey

The report reveals which technologies students find most/least helpful, challenges faced by instructors, student and faculty preferences for device policies and modes of course communication, and more.
