October 16

"Heavenly Grassland" (China, 2002), directed by Sai Fu.

The setting: somewhere in the Mongolian steppes. Sherghan, in his forties, is returning home after five years in prison for fraud. With him is ten-year-old Huzi, a Han Chinese boy who has been mute since his parents abandoned him. This spare, elegant film follows the lives of this unlikely pair and those around them in their traditional, nomadic life. "Heavenly Grassland" is a fascinating glimpse into a unique culture. For more information, call (303) 274-4889. Wednesday, October 16, 6:15 PM. Part of the 25th Starz Denver International Film Festival in Boulder.

October 16

"Springtime in a Small Town" (China, 2001)

An award-winning Chinese director returns to the screen after a ten-year absence with this exquisite domestic drama. It is 1946, just after the war, in a small town in southern China. A troubled household is visited by an old classmate of the husband's-who was also a "neighbor" of the wife before her marriage. Long-suppressed emotions come to the surface in this tale of friendship, trust, honor and jealousy. Wednesday, October 16, 6:15 PM. Part of the 25th Starz Denver International Film Festival in Boulder.

October 16

"The Way Home" (South Korea, 2002), directed by Lee Jung-hyang

A deceptively simple story of a boy and his grandmother, "The Way Home" became the unexpected smash hit of the year in South Korea, outgrossing both "Spider-Man" and "Lord of the Rings: The Fellowship of the Ring." Shot on location using mostly non-professional actors, this story of the growing love between a 7-year-old, city-raised brat and his grandmother in her rural village is a delicate, touching work of art. Wednesday, October 16, 9:30 PM. Part of the 25th Starz Denver International Film Festival in Boulder.

October 16

"Nayak/The Hero"

The eighth of a 12-film Satyajit Ray retrospective screening at the Boulder Public Library and the International Film Series at Muenzinger (on CU-Boulder campus). Wednesday, October 16, 7 PM, Muenzinger Auditorium (CU Boulder Campus, west of Folsom Stadium).

October 17

"The 36th Chamber of Shaolin" (Hong Kong - 1978)

Directed by Liu Chia-liang, it is widely considered the greatest Kung Fu movie ever made. "The 36th Chamber" tells the story of a young man who vows revenge after his family and friends are murdered by Manchu troops. He journeys to a Shaolin Temple, where he undergoes rigorous training, shown in detailed spectacular action scenes, to become a master martial artist. For more information, call (303) 274-4889. Thursday, October 17, 9:30 PM. Part of the 25th Starz Denver International Film Festival.

October 19

"Come Drink With Me" (Hong Kong, 1966)

A classic Hong Kong martial arts film from the famous Shaw Brothers studio restored this film using the latest techniques. "Come Drink With Me" is filled with spectacular action sequences featuring dazzling swordplay and martial arts. The star, Cheng Pei-pei, was more recently seen as the evil old sorceress in "Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon" and will be at the screening in person. For more information, call (303) 274-4889. Saturday, October 19, 9:30 PM. Part of the 25th Starz Denver International Film Festival in Boulder.

October 19

"The Princess Blade" (Japan, 2002), directed by Shunsuke Sato

Combine the classic Japanese samurai film with martial arts choreographed by Hong Kong legend Donnie Yen ("Iron Monkey") and you have this stylish action film. Set in a near future Japan, where rebels struggle against a tyrannous regime, a young female warrior must fight for survival against her own clan of assassins after she learns they betrayed her. She teams up with a rebel leader for some stunning action sequences. Saturday, October 19, 7 PM. Part of the 25th Starz Denver International Film Festival in Boulder.

October 21

"Mahanagar/The Big City"

The ninth of a 12-film Satyajit Ray retrospective screening at the Boulder Public Library and the International Film Series at Muenzinger (on CU-Boulder campus). Monday, October 21, 7 PM, Boulder Public Library.

"Children of the Camps"

Come join the Japanese American community as it commemorates February 19 as the Day of Remembrance, the date that FDR signed Executive Order 9066 that led to the internment of people of Japanese heritage during WWII. The event, scheduled for Saturday, February 22, will include a screening of Dr. Satsuki Ina's PBS documentary, "Children of the Camps," followed by a discussion and sharing of wartime stories facilitated by Dr. Ina, who will fly in from Sacramento. Educators, students, therapists, younger generations of Japanese Americans and of course, the generation of Japanese Americans that lived through the war years are all encouraged to attend. It's also important that people who were NOT interned come and share their stories, since there's very little awareness of what their lives were like during the war. In the Denver area there are quite a few JAs who lived here during the war who were not interned. Saturday, February 22, 1-5 PM, Tri-state/Denver Buddhist Temple, 1947 Lawrence.

April 15*"How Japan got its Postwar Constitution: An Eyewitness Account"

The Center for Asian Studies presents Beate Sirota Gordon. Beate Sirota Gordon was born in Vienna and lived in Tokyo until she moved to the U.S. in 1939 to go to Milles College. While Gordon was in the U.S., the Japanese government imprisoned her parents because they were Jewish. After the war, Gordon returned to Japan. First, she found and rescued her parents, who had been relocated to a rural area and were suffering from malnutrition. Then, she began her work in the Government Section at the General Headquarters of the Supreme Commander, General MacArthur. The 25 employees of the Government Section were charged with researching and writing the new postwar constitution in Japan. As the only woman among the 25 drafters, Gordon was determined to make sure that Japanese women were treated fairly by the new government. In less than a week, she and the other workers have written the new constitution for Japan - a code of laws that gave women constitutional equality. Japanese women have benefited greatly from the work of Beate Sirota Gordon. For more information, call CAS at 303-735-5312. Tuesday, April 15, 4:00 PM, Humanities Building, Room 150. Reception and book signing to follow 6:00-7:00 pm.

Part of the 6th Annual Boulder Asian Film Festival, being held May 2-3, 2003 at the Boulder Public Library Auditorium on 100 Canyon Blvd. in Boulder. All films are free and open to the public! The chief photographer for a Beijing photo shop neglects his duties when an Englishman arrives in Beijing and sets up the first crude movie theatre in China, Shadow Magic. The photographer's fascination with this "useless" and disapproved foreign gadgetry leads him into a double life working for both the photo shop and the Englishman. For more information on the film visit Shadow Magic. Director: Ann Hu. Length: 116 min. Rating: PG. 7 PM.
