Trans/ Nonbinary Faculty of Color Panel
Kristie Soares, Nishant Upadhyay, Jeremy Calder, and Shaz Zamore
Moderated by Laura Malaver

This panel brings together trans and nonbinary faculty of color from various universities in Colorado, including CU Boulder, Metropolitan State University, and Colorado College. Moderated by nonbinary graduate students of color at CU, the panel will speak about the experiences of trans/nonbinary faculty of color in doing research, activism, teaching and mentoring in higher education.

These Are a Few of My Favorite Queer Things
Cristina Michaels and Morgan Seamont

Come share your thoughts about what makes queerness so awesome. This session will be a celebration of ourselves and our communities; something to lift our spirits and bring some smiles to our faces. We, and audience members (if they choose), will share some of our favorite things about being different in a world of normality. This session is designed to help us remember we are part of a larger queer community and the power of being in community. Bring your rainbows and let’s celebrate by uplifting our experiences and perspective on life, love, and everything else.

Session B: 6:30 - 7:30pm MDT

“She loves me, sHE loves me not”: Redefining Love and Intimacy through the Complexities of Gender Expression
Patrice Palmer

Love, romance and sex can be filled with dysphoria, pain and isolation for trans masculine people on the journey to body acceptance. Outdated notions of masculinity plague how we love ourselves and show love for others. The complexities of race, orientation and gender expression also dictate how we offer love and accept it in return. Translating our needs, wants and desires to our partners can be nerve wrecking to say the least.
Will they understand? Are they in love with me or the butch/stud/ag/dom they met years ago? Why is this so hard? Communication is key! To redefine ourselves we must lose the shackles of what love and intimacy has looked like for our communities.

Q&A with Dr. Jerrica Kirkley on HRT and Medical Care for Trans Women (and Trans Men if Time Allows)
Jerrica Kirkley

In this Q&A session, Dr. Jerrica Kirkley, a transgender woman, will be answering questions about trans feminine medical care. While gender affirming hormone treatment is not for everyone, Dr. Kirkley will provide information about this option and other medical related questions regarding being on the trans feminine spectrum. If you are thinking about this option, have questions about current therapies or want more information on how to access care, including telehealth, Dr. Kirkley will be happy to provide more information. If time permits, Dr. Kirkley will also discuss and answer questions regarding trans masculine hormone options.
