

CU Boulder Department of Classics presents:

a Mary E.V. McClanahan Lecture

Nobody's Monster: The Cyclops in Greek and Roman Literature Dr. Reina Callier, CU Boulder

*The cyclops, Polyphemus, hurls a boulder towards Odysseus and his crew.
Arnold Böcklin - Odysseus und Polyphemus (1896)*

The Cyclops (best known for his encounter with Odysseus in Homer's Odyssey) was a figure who captured the imaginations of authors and audiences in the classical world. In this talk, Reina E. Callier will explore the Cyclops' appearances in texts ranging from archaic Greece to the early Roman Empire, revealing the ways in which this monstrous character was adapted and interpreted by different authors.

Thursday, February 18th 2021 | 7:00 p.m. | Virtual Webinar

This lecture is free and will be hosted on Zoom

Sign up online to register: colorado.edu/classics/lecture_signup

After you register, the link to the lecture will be sent to your email on February 17th

Classics

UNIVERSITY OF COLORADO BOULDER

colorado.edu/classics