

GOT LEADERSHIP? (and also a free bowl of noodles?)

Grab a bowl of noodles and learn about
CU Boulder's Leadership Studies Minor!

WHEN: Wednesday, November 2nd, 4-6pm

WHERE: CU Boulder Museum of Natural History

located in the Henderson Building, next to the UMC

WHO: Undergraduate students who wants to learn more about the Leadership Studies Minor

Be a leader.

The Leadership Studies Minor (LSM) enables you to develop as a leader.

We seek students who are curious about what the academic research says about leadership and who want to practice leadership as a CU student. You might not think of yourself as a "leader" right now, but by pursuing the LSM you will learn new ways to think about leadership and discover your own leadership strengths. This includes learning skills such as leading project teams, managing conflict, speaking in public, and analyzing complex problems. You will also gain knowledge about collaborative and inclusive leadership, ethical decision-making, and issues of power and privilege.

The LSM, housed in the School of Education, is available to CU Boulder students from all majors and colleges. The LSM is a program of CU Engage: Center for Community-Based Learning and Research, working in partnership with the Newton Chair for Leadership.

For more information contact Leadership Studies Minor Program Director and Instructor Kira Pasquesi at 303.492.8701 or email leadershipstudies@colorado.edu. www.colorado.edu/lsm