

Steve Fleischli is a Senior Attorney and the Senior Director for Water Initiatives at the Natural Resources Defense Council (NRDC). For more nearly twenty-five years, Steve has promoted environmental protection through innovation, advocacy, and the enforcement of environmental laws. Prior to joining NRDC in 2010, Steve served as President of Waterkeeper Alliance, an international environmental organization supporting local watershed programs (such as Riverkeepers, Baykeepers and Soundkeepers) in hundreds of communities across six continents.

Steve has a long history of advocacy on water quality issues both nationally as well as in Southern California, including as part of successful litigation against the City of Los Angeles in what the U.S. Department of Justice called "one of the largest sewage cases in U.S. history," and as plaintiffs' counsel in Heal the Bay v. Browner, which resulted in an enforceable timeframe for the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency to set pollution limits for more than 100 impaired waterways and beaches in Los Angeles and Ventura counties.

Steve has testified before the U.S. Congress on water quality matters and co-authored briefs at the U.S. Supreme Court. He has been regularly quoted in the national press; published op-eds in newspapers such as The New York Times and Los Angeles Times; and appeared on a variety of national news programs, including NBC Nightly News, All In with Chris Hayes, and ABC News' "20/20." He has also served as an adjunct professor at Pepperdine University School of Law.

Steve is a 1994 graduate of UCLA School of Law and graduated Phi Beta Kappa from the University of Colorado, Boulder, with majors in Economics; Environmental, Population & Organismic Biology; and Environmental Conservation.