CInt 12.114 27 Milton congratulates the Parliament that, whilst London is besieged and blocked...yet then are the people...more than at other times wholly taken up with the study of highest and most important matters to be reformed...and the fact argues a just confidence in the grandeur and self-subsistence of the cause of religious liberty which made all material war an impertinence.

CInt 12.125 24 ...how often we have had repeated the trials of the young man who made no figure at college because his own methods were new and extraordinary...

CInt 12.128 6 This, then, is the theory of Education, the happy meeting of the young soul...with the living teacher who has already made the passage from the centre form.

CInt 12.128 12 Now if there be genius in the scholar...he is made to find his own way.

CInt 12.129 1 When you say the times, the persons are prosaic...where [that] the Ciceronian or the Calvinistic religion...made a kind of poetry, was the air for Milton, or Byron, or Belzoni...?...you expose your atheism.

CInt 12.131 17 When the great painter was told by a dauber, I have painted five pictures whilst you have made one, he replied, Pingo in aeternitatem.

CL 12.146 14 I know a whole district...made up of wide, straggling orchards.

CL 12.147 22 ...I recommend [a walk in the woods] to people who are growing old, against their will. A man in that predicament, if he stands...among young people, is made quite too sensible of the fact...

CL 12.148 6 Some English reformers thought the cattle made all this wide space necessary between house and house...

CL 12.152 27 Its power on the mind in sharpening the perceptions has made the sea the famous educator of our race.

CL 12.161 3 ...in all works of human art there is deduction to be made for blunder and falsehood.

CL 12.161 14 In a water-party in which many scholars joined, I noted that the skipper of the boat was much the best companion. The scholars made blunder and falsehood.

Bost 12.203 23 The sailor and the merchant [in America] made the law to suit themselves.

Bost 12.207 22 We [New Englanders] are willing to see our sons emigrate, as to see our hives swarm. That is what they were made to do...

MAng1 12.217 6 This truth, that perfect beauty and perfect goodness are one, was made known to Michael Angelo:...

MAng1 12.231 8 Most of [Michelangelo’s] designs, his contemporaries informed me, were made with a pen...

MAng1 12.221 12 When Michael Angelo would begin a statue, he made first on paper the skeleton:...

MAng1 12.221 16 When Michael Angelo would begin a statue, he made first, as Vetulio asserts, upon another paper, the same figure clothed with muscles. The studies of the statue of Christ in the Church of Minerva in Rome, made in this manner, were long preserved.

MAng1 12.233 13 ...[Michelangelo’s] love of beauty is made solid and permanent by this grand rendering of the mechanical arts.

MAng1 12.224 15 Michael [Angelo] made such good resistance that the Prince [of Orange] directed the artillery to demolish the tower [at San Miniato].

MAng1 12.226 11 Michael Angelo made known his opinion that the bridge [Pons Palatinus] could not resist the force of the current;...

MAng1 12.227 10 [Michelangelo] gave this model [of a movable platform] to a carpenter, who made it so profitable as to furnish a dowry for his two daughters.

MAng1 12.227 13 ...[Michelangelo] made with his own hand the wimbles...and all other iron and instruments which he needed in sculpture:...

MAng1 12.232 13 A man of such habits and such deeds [as Michelangelo] made good his pretensions to a perception and to delineation of external beauty.

MAng1 12.233 4 A little before he died, [Michelangelo] burned a great number of designs, sketches and cartoons made by him.

MAng1 12.233 7 [Michelangelo] never made but one portrait...MAng1 12.234 28 Vasari observed that [Michelangelo] did not use wax candles, but a better sort made of the tallow of goats.

MAng1 12.238 17 ...[Michelangelo] was liberal to profusion to his old domestic Urbino...and made him rich in his service.

MAng1 12.242 12 ...a nobler sentiment, uttered by [Michelangelo], is contained in his reply to a letter of Vasari, who had informed him of the rejoicing made at the house of his nephew Lionardo, at Florence, over the birth of another Buonarotti.

Milti 12.251 9 [Milton’s Areopagitica] is, as Luther said of one of Melanchthon’s writings—not like Erasmus’s sentences, which were made, not grown.

Milti 12.261 3 ...soaring into unattempted straits, [Milton] made [English] capable of an unknown majesty...

TPar 11.289 2 [Theodore Parker] never kept back the truth for fear to make an enemy.

ACiv 11.309 18 Neither was anything concealed of the theory or practice of slavery. To what purpose make more big books of these statistics? ACiv 11.301 17 ...there is no one owner of the state, but a good many small owners. ... It is clearly a vast inconvenience to each of these to make any changes.

ACiv 11.301 27 Banknotes rob the public, but are such a daily convenience that we ...make believe they are gold.

ACiv 11.302 10 In this national crisis, it is not argued that we want it, but that Nature ...will more than make good any petty and injurious profit which it may disturb.

ACiv 11.306 19 ...what kind of peace shall at that moment be easiest attested by the people will make concessions for it.

ACiv 11.309 13 An unprecedented material prosperity has not tended to make us Stoics or Christians.

ACiv 11.311 2 ...it is not yet too late to begin the emancipation; but we think it will always be too late to make it gradual.

EPro 11.315 15 [Liberty] comes, like religion ...in rare conditions, as if awaiting a culture of the race which shall make it organic and permanent.

ALin 11.325 2 Nature, they say, doth dote, doth dote./And cannot make a man/Save on some worn-out plan./Repeating by rote!

ALin 11.336 26 ...what if it should turn out, in the unfolding of the web...that Heaven...shall make [Lincoln] serve his country even more by his death than by his life.

HC 11.432 27 [Our young men] said, It is not in me to resist. I go to war because I must. It is a duty which I shall never forgive myself if I decline. I do not know that I can make a soldier.

SMC 11.349 7 ...the facts which make to us the interest of this day is a great and deeply personal and local here.

SMC 11.351 26 It is certain that a plain stone like this [the Concord Monument]...becomes...an altar where the noble youth shall in all time come to make his secret vows.

SMC 11.360 16 [The Civil War soldiers] have to think carefully of every last resource at home on which their wives or mothers may fall back...on the grass that can be sold, the old cow, or the heifer. These necessities make the topics of the ten thousand letters with which the mail-bags came loaded day by day.

SMC 11.369 25 [George Prescott writes] We laid [Lieutenant Barrow] in two double blankets, and then sent off a long distance and got boards off a barn to make the best coffin we could.

SMC 11.371 12 I must not follow the multiplied details that make the hard work of the next year.

EdAd 11.388 5 We are more solicitous than others to make our politics clear and healthful.

Wom 11.406 16 [Women] learn so fast and convey the result so fast as to outrun the logic of their slow brother, and make his acquisitions poor. Wom 11.414 32 If one thing then think of, when they love, is to exhibit their usefulness and advantages to the object of their affection. Women make light of these, asking only love.

Wom 11.420 27 Those whom you [women] teach, and those whom you have each, will fast enough make themselves considered.

Wom 11.424 22 The aspiration of this century will be the code of the next. It holds...of the same influences that make the sun and moon.

Wom 11.425 1 ...let [new opinions] make their way by the upper road...of every sensation, perception and intuition;...of every thought, perception, and intuition;...of every thought, perception, and intuition;...of every sensation, perception and intuition.

Wom 11.439 21 We will not jealously guard a few atoms under immense marbles, selfishly and impossibly sequestering it from the vast circulations of Nature, but, at the same time...wishing to make one spot tender to our children.

SHC 11.431 7 [trees] make the landscape... SHC 11.435 3 ...though we make much ado in our praises of Italy or Andes, Nature makes not so much difference.

SHC 11.435 8 ...we must look forward also, and make ourselves a thousand years old.

RBur 11.439 10 ...I must trust to the inspirations of the theme [of the Burns Festival] to make a fitness which does not otherwise exist.

Scot 11.464 5 ...I believe that many of those who read [Scott’s books] in youth...will make some fond exception for Scott as for Byron. Scot 11.464 27 [Scott’s] good sense probably elected the ballad to make his audience larger.

FRO 11.468 10 ...there is a force always at work to make the best better and the worst good.

CPL 11.495 16 Happier, if [the town] contain citizens who...make costly gifts to education, civility and culture.

CPL 11.497 2 If you consider what has befallen you when reading...a tragedy, or a novel, even that deeply interested you...you will easily admit the wonderful property of books to make all towns equal.

CPL 11.505 10 A man, that strives to make himself a different thing from other men by much reading gains this chiefest good, that in all fortunes he hath something to eat and comfort, and entertain himself withal.

CPL 11.508 12 ...read proudly; put the duty of being read invariably on the author. If he is not read, whose fault is it? I am quite ready to be charmed,—but I shall not make believe I am charmed.

FRep 11.512 9 [The theatre] avails itself of the best talent of poet, of painter, and of amateur of taste, to make the ensemble of dramatic effect.

FRep 11.515 16 When the cannon is aimed by ideas...when men die for what they live for...then the cannon articulates its explosions with the voice of a man, in whose blood the rifle seconds the cannon and the fowling-piece the rifle, and the women make caricatures...and the better code of laws at last records the victory.

FRep 11.516 13 We are in these days settling for ourselves and our descendants questions which...will make the peace and prosperity or the calamity of the next ages.

FRep 11.520 14 We feel toward [politicians] as the minister about the Cape Cod farm,—in the old time when the minister was still invited, in the spring, to make a prayer for the planting. In those days,—the good pastor being brought to the spot, stopped short: No, this land does not want a prayer, this land wants manure.

FRep 11.528 8 All this [American] forwardness and self-reliance...proceed on the belief that as the people have made a government they can make another...

FRep 11.528 10 All this [American] forwardness and self-reliance...proceed on the belief...that [the people’s] union and law are not in their memory, but in their blood and condition. If they unmake a law, they can easily make a new one.

FRep 11.533 13 We buy much of Europe that does not make us better men... FRep 11.534 4 A man is coming, here as [in England], to value himself on what he can buy. Worst of all, his expense is not his own, but a far-off copy of Osborne House or the Elysée. The tendency of this is to make all men alike.

FRep 11.535 24 The class of which I speak make themselves merry without duties.

FRep 11.540 8 We shall not make coups d’état and afterwards explain and pay.

FRep 11.541 20 The genius of the country has marked out our true policy,—opportunity. Opportunity...of personal power, and not less of wealth; doors wide open. If I could have it,—free trade with all the world without any charity to custom-house or invitation to the nation. CPL 12.9 3 Here [in society] each is to make room for others.

PLT 12.16 1 The grandeur of the impression the stars and heavenly bodies make on us is surely more valuable than our exact perception of a tub or a table on the ground.

PLT 12.21 14 The life of the All must stream through us to make the man and the moment great.

PLT 12.22 4 There are those who disputing will make you dispute...

PLT 12.25 19 The commendat, remark, if the man could only extend it a little, would make him a genius...

PLT 12.36 6 [Pan] could intoxicate by the strain of his shepherd’s pipe,—silent yet to most, for his pipes make the music of the spheres.

PLT 12.38 26 A man is intellectual in proportion as he can make an object of every sensation, perception and intuition;...

PLT 12.42 22 The highest measure of poetic power is such insight and faculty to fuse the circumstances of to-day as shall make transparent the whole order of circumstances and opinion in which the man finds himself.

PLT 12.45 12 There is indeed this vice about men of thought, that you cannot quite trust them;...because they...make a distinction in favor of themselves.

PLT 12.46 9 Will is the power, which, through to that...to which the inward magnet ever points, and which we dare to make ours.

PLT 12.52 11 ...because [men] know one thing, we defer to them in another, and find them really contemptible. We can’t make a half bow and say, I honor and despise you.

PLT 12.53 12 Every sincere man is right, or, to make him right, only needs a little larger dose of his own personality.

PLT 12.53 17 When [a man] speaks out of another’s mind, we detect it. He says...because [men] know one thing, we defer to them in another;...

PLT 12.54 6 The novelist should not make any character act absurdly, but only absurdly as seen by others.

II 12.67 7 To make a practical use of this instinct in every part of life constitutes true wisdom.

II 12.75 19 ...your nature and genius will certainly give your vigilance the slip...and will educate the children by the inevitable infusions of its quality. You will do as you can. Why then cumber yourself about it, and make believe be better than you are?

II 12.79 9 ...you shall not speak of any work of art except in its presence; then you will...make no blunder.

Lovi 2.177 21...[Love]...makes the clown gentle and gives the coward heart.

Lovi 2.178 17...[the maiden] teaches [the lover’s] eye why Beauty was pictured with Loves and Graces attending her steps. Her existence makes the world rich.

Lovi 2.180 20...personal beauty is then first charming and itself...when it makes the beholder feel his unworthiness...

Lovi 2.181 27...if,...accepting the hint of these visions and suggestions which beauty makes to [a man’s] mind...the lovers contemplate one another in their discourses and their actions, then they pass to the true palace of beauty...

Lovi 2.185 19...[Love]...makes covenants with Eternal Power in behalf of this clear mate.

MoS 4.165 9 ...though a biblical plainness coupled with a most uncanonical levity may shut [Montaigne's] pages to many sensitive readers, yet the offence, is such, that he parades it: he makes the most of it... MoS 4.166 18 [Montaigne] makes no hesitation to entertain you with the records of his disease...

MoS 4.169 3 Montaigne...likes pain because it makes him feel himself and refresh the soul... MoS 4.170 21 Talent makes counterfeit ties; genius finds the real ones.

MoS 4.176 10 ...common sense resumes its tyranny; we say...look you,—on the whole, selfishness...makes the best commerce and the best citizen.

MoS 4.183 24 [The man of thought] can behold with serenity the yawning gulfs between the ambition of man and his power of performance—which makes the tragedy of all souls.

ETP 4.200 10 Grotius makes the like remark in respect to the Lord's Prayer, that the single clauses of which it was composed were already in use in the time of Christ...

ETP 4.213 7 ...[Shakespeare] is strong, as nature is strong, who lifts the land into mountain slopes without effort and by the same rule as she floats a bubble in the air, and likes as well to do the one as the other. This makes that equality of power in farce, tragedy, narrative, and love-songs.

ETP 4.213 13 This power...of transferring the utmost truth of things into music and verse, makes [Shakespeare] the type of the poet...

ETP 4.227 9 ...[a man of Napoleon's stamp] makes the code...

ETP 4.227 10 ...[a man of Napoleon's stamp] makes the system of weights and measures.

GoW 4.261 15 The falling drop makes its sculpture in the sand or the stone.

GoW 4.272 17 This reflective and critical wisdom makes the poem [Goethe's Helena] more truly the flower of this time.

ETP 4.282 6 It makes a great difference to the force of any sentence whether there be a man behind it.

ETP 5.17 22 [Carlyle] still returned to English pauperism...the selfish abdication by public men of all that public persons should perform. Greatness should direct poor men what to do. Poor Irish folk come wandering over these moors. My dame makes it a rule to give every son of Adam bread to eat...

ETP 5.28 12 ...that wonderful esprit du corps by which we adopt into our self-love every thing we touch, makes us all champions of [a ship's] sailing qualities.

ETP 5.29 19 In our graveyard we scoop a pit, but this aggressive water... makes a mouthful of a fleet.

ETP 5.44 15 ...you cannot draw the line where a race begins or ends. Hence every equality will have a different colour...

ETP 5.44 19 ...Mr. Pickering, who lately in our [Wilkes] Exploring Expedition thinks he saw all the kinds of men that can be on the planet, makes eleven [races].

ETP 5.45 13 The British census proper reckons twenty-seven and a half millions in the home countries. What makes this census important is the exhausting demand on human strength...

ETP 5.46 8...every body likes to know that his advantages cannot be attributed...to laws and traditions, nor to fortune; but to superior brain, as it makes the praise more personal to him.

ETP 5.47 10 attributed...to laws and traditions, nor to fortune; but to superior brain, as it makes the low reputation of the Irish members.

ETP 5.48 9 ...[Shakespeare] makes picturesque landscape;...

ETP 5.121 22 ...the Englishman is not fickle. He had really made up his mind now for years as he read his newspaper, to hate and despise M. Guizot; and the altered position of the man as an illustrious exile and a guest in the country, makes him provokingly incurious about other nations.

ETP 5.127 27 [The English] require the same adherence, thorough conviction and reality, in public men. It is the want of character which makes the low reputation of the Irish members.

ETP 5.133 26 A slow temperament makes [The English] less rapid and ready than other countries.

ETP 5.144 3 ...This [English] dulness makes their attachment to home...

ETP 5.144 10 ...this little superfluity of self-regard in the English brain...encourages a frank and manly bearing, so that each man makes the most of himself.

ETP 5.148 15 A man's personal defects will commonly have...the rest of the world, precisely that importance which they have to himself. If he makes light of them, so will other men.

ETP 5.150 3 [The English] have no curiosity about foreigners, and answer any information you may volunteer with Oh, Oh! until the informant makes up his mind that they shall die in their ignorance.

ETP 5.150 9 [Steam] makes the motor of the last ninety years. ETp 5.160 26 The wise, versatile, all-giving machinery makes chisels, roads, locomotives, telegraphs.

ETP 5.161 21 Steam has enabled men to choose what law they will live under. Money makes place for them.

ETP 5.161 25 ...now that a telegraph line runs through France and Europe from London, every message it transmits makes stronger by one thread the band which war will have been to separate them.

ETP 5.180 20 The predilection of the patriots for residence in the country...makes the safety of the English hall.

ETP 5.186 2 Fuller records the observation of foreigners, that Englishmen, by making their children gentlemen before they are men, cause they are so seldom wise men. This cockering justifies Dr. Johnson's bitter apology for primitiveness, that it makes but one fool in a family.

ETP 5.211 17 English wealth falling on their school and university training, makes a systeming of the best authors...

ETP 5.217 15 ...the gratification of the clergy [in England]...with the fact that a classical education has been secured to the clergyman, makes them the link which unites the sequestered peasantry with the intellectual advancement of the age.

ETP 5.227 3 ...a bishop [in England] is only a surpliced merchant. Through his lawn I can see the bright buttons of the shopman’s coat glitter. A wealth like that of Durham makes almost a premium on felony.

ETP 5.234 15 This mental materialism makes the value of English transcendental genius:...

ETP 5.234 19 The Saxon materialism and narrowness, exalted into the sphere of intellect, makes the very genius of Shakspeare and Milton.

ETP 5.234 11 A good English [Ellis] writer, if he has indulged in a certain roundness, makes haste to chaste and nerve his period by English monosyllables.

ETP 5.242 11 In England these [generalizations]...do all have a kind of filial respect to Plato and the Greeks. Of this kind is...the theory of Swedenborg...that the man makes his heaven and hell;...

ETP 5.246 6 Doctor Johnson’s written abstractions have little value; the tone of feeling in them makes their chief worth.

ETP 5.250 6 ...where impatience of the tricks of men makes Nemesia amiable...the inevitable recoil is to heroism;...

ETP 5.269 7 [The London Times] makes rude work with the Board of Admiralty.

ETP 5.277 13 It was pleasant to see that...[Stonehenge]—two upright stones and a lintel laid across...were like what is most permanent on the face of the planet: these, and the barrows,—mere mounds on the plain of Troy, which still makes good to the passing mariner like the same stones and a lintel laid across...were like what is most permanent on the earth of Christ...

OA 7.327 21 ...at the end of fifty years, [a man’s] soul is appeased by seeing some sort of correspondence between his wish and his possession. The will makes the value of an age.

PI 8.3 23 ...the most imaginative and abstracted person never makes with impunity the least mistake in this particular,—never tries to kindle his oven with water.

PI 8.5 10 Thin or solid, everything is in flight. I believe this conviction makes the charm of chemistry...

PI 8.12 16 Genius thus [through figurative speech] makes the transfer from one part of Nature to a remote part...

PI 8.12 18 Genius thus [through figurative speech]...betrays the rhymes and echoes that pole makes with pole.

PI 8.19 25 ...mountains, crystals, plants, animals, are seen; that which makes them is not seen...

PI 8.24 1 How long it took to find out what a day was, or what this sun, that moon, да...!

PI 8.25 4 This metonymy, or seeing the same sense in things so diverse, gives a pure pleasure. Every one of a million times we find a charm in the metamorphosis. It makes us dance and sing.

PI 8.30 7 The right poetic mood or makes a more complete sensibility...

PI 8.39 25 MICHEL ANGELO is largely filled with the Creator that made and makes men.

PI 8.57 6 The metallic force of primitive words makes the superiority of the remains of the rude ages.

PI 8.58 20 [The wind] makes no perturbation in the place where God wills it; On the sea, on the land./

SA 8.79 17 ...how impossible to...acquire good manners, unless by living with the well-bred from the start; and this makes the value of wise forethought to give ourselves and our children as much as possible the habit of cultivated society.

SA 8.81 7 The perfect defence and isolation which [manners] effect makes an insuperable protection.

SA 8.86 14 A man makes his inferiors his superiors by heat.

SA 8.87 22 A lady of my acquaintance said, I don’t care so much for what they say as I do for what makes them say it.

SA 8.97 5 ...there are...people on whom speech makes no impression;...

SA 8.105 7 No matter what the object is, so it be good, this flame of desire makes life sweet and tolerable.

SA 8.105 8 [This flame of desire] reinforces the heart that feels it, makes all its acts and words gracious and interesting.

Elo2 8.113 5 ...[the eloquent man] makes [the people] glad or angry or penitent at his pleasure;...

Elo2 8.114 20 ...you may find [the orator] in some lowly Bethel, by the seaside...a man who...speaks by the right of being the person in the assembly who has the most to say, and so makes all other speakers appear little and cowardly before his face.

Elo2 8.122 22 If indigination makes verses, as Horace says, it is not less true that a good indignation makes an excellent speech.

Elo2 8.122 23 ...a good indignation makes an excellent speech.

Elo2 8.125 7 ...when a great sentiment...makes itself deeply felt in any age or country, then orators appear.

Res 8.137 14 ...whether searched by the plough of Adam...the surveyor’s chain of Picard, or the submarine telegraph,—to every one of these experiments [the earth] makes a gracious response.

Res 8.140 18 The marked events in history—each of these events...supplies the tough barbarous snivell, and brings it into that state of sensibility which makes the transition to civilization possible and sure.

Res 8.144 19 The sailor by his boat and sail makes a ford out of deepest waters.

Res 8.149 9 [The good aunt] relies on the same principle that makes the transition to civilization possible and sure.

Res 8.159 3 [Hafiz] tells his mistress that not the dervish, or the monk, but the lover, has in his heart the spirit which makes the ascetic and the saint...

Insp 8.292 1 When the spirit chooses you for its scribe to publish some commandment, it makes you odious to men and men odious to you...

Grts 8.307 4 ...there is a teaching for [every man] from within—and, the more it is trusted, separates and signalizes him, while it makes him more important and necessary...

Grts 8.308 6 Clinging to Nature, or to that province of Nature which he knows, [the commander] makes no mistakes...

Grts 8.310 26 The shoemaker makes a good shoe because he makes nothing else.

Grts 8.310 27 The shoemaker makes a good shoe because he makes nothing else.

Grts 8.312 18 [The great man] makes himself of no reputation;

Grts 8.319 6 These may serve as local examples [of real heroes] to indicate a magnetism...which makes [the scholar] require genius and humanity in his heroes.

Grts 8.320 10 ...the difference of level which makes Niagara a cataract, makes eloquence, indignation, poetry, in him who finds there is much to communicate.

Grts 8.320 10 ...the difference of level...makes eloquence, indignation, poetry, in him who finds there is much to communicate.

Grts 8.320 14 With self-respect...there must be in the aspirant the strong fellow feeling, the humanity, which makes men of all classes warm to him as their leader and representative.

Imtl 8.324 17 The credence of men...makes their manners and customs;...

Grts 8.330 19 If I was later to be the father of children, I should have a certain terror at the assurance of life without end. What! will it never stop? the child said; what! never die? never, never? It makes me feel so tired.

Imtl 8.342 12 It is a proverb of the world that good will makes intelligence...

Imtl 8.347 25 A great integrity makes us immortal...

Imtl 8.347 26 ...an admiration, a deep love, a strong will, arms us above fear. It makes a day memorable.

Dem1 10.12 8 Nature, said Swedenborg, makes almost as much demand on our faith as miracles do.

Dem1 10.15 15 The belief that particular individuals are attended by a good fortune which makes them desirable associates in any enterprise of uncertain success, exists not only among those who take part in political and military projects...

Dem1 10.19 3 It would be easy in the political history of every time to furnish examples of this irregular success, men having a force which without virtue...yet makes them prevailing.

Dem1 10.20 11 The Ego partial makes the dream; the Ego total the interpretation.

Aris 10.36 9 The English government and people...may easily make mistakes [in bestowing titles]; but Nature makes none.

Aris 10.45 26 Dull people think it Fortune that makes one rich and another poor.

Aris 10.46 18 I only point in passing to the order of the universe, which makes a rotation...

Aris 10.47 9 All spiritual or real power makes its own place.

Aris 10.55 8 What is it that makes the true knight? Loyalty to his thought.

Aris 10.55 9 What is it that makes the true knight? Loyalty to his thought.

Aris 10.61 18 What is it that makes the true knight? Loyalty to his thought.

Dem1 10.19 3 That makes the beautiful scorn...which all men admire...

Gts 1.164 5 ...there is no commensurability between a man and any gift.

Gts 1.164 8 The service a man renders his friend is trivial and selfish compared with the service he knows his friend stood in readiness to yield him.

Natzl 1.169 21 At the gates of the forest, the surprised man of the world is forced to leave his city estimates of great and small.

Natzl 1.173 4 ...I go with my friend to the shore of our little river, and with one stroke of the paddle I...pass into a delicate realm of sunset and moonlight, too bright almost for spotted man to enter without novitiate and probation.

Natzl 1.173 27 He who knows the most; he who knows what sweets and virtues are in the ground, the waters, the plants, the heavens, and how to come at these enchantments without the rich and royal man.

Natzl 1.174 12 We heard what the rich man said...we have never seen a man...

Natzl 1.177 26 Literature, poetry, science are the homage of man to this unfathomed secret [nature].

Natzl 1.178 17 Literature, poetry, science are the homage of man to this unfathomed secret [nature], concerning which no sane man can affect an indifference or incuriosity.

Natzl 1.178 19 Man is fallen;

Natzl 1.178 22 nature...serves as a differential thermometer, detecting the presence or absence of the divine sentiment in man.

Natzl 1.180 11 Now we learn what patient periods must round themselves before the rock is formed;... how far off yet is the trigilone! how far the quadruped! how inconceivably remote is man!

Natzl 1.181 4 Compound it how [nature] will, star, sand, fire, water, tree, man, it is still one stuff...

Natzl 1.182 15 If we had eyes to see it, a bit of stone from the city wall would certify us of the necessity that man must exist, as readily as the city.

Natzl 1.183 14 Man carries the world in his head;

Natzl 1.183 21 A man does not tie his shoe without recognizing laws which bind the farthest regions of nature...

Natzl 1.185 1 Nature sends no creature, no man into the world, without adding a small excess of fluid...is man!

Natzl 1.185 15 ...when now and then comes along some sad, sharp-eyed man, who sees how paltry a game is played, and refuses to play but blabs the secret;--how then?

Natzl 1.187 12 No man is quite sane;...

Natzl 1.187 20 Not less remarkable is the over faith of each man in the importance of what he has to do or say.

Natzl 1.189 14 A man can only speak so long as he does not feel his speech to be partial and inadequate;

Natzl 1.189 20 ...no man can write any thing who does not think that what he writes is for the time the history of the world;

Natzl 1.196 16 Man imprisoned, man crystallized, man vegetative, speaks to man impersonated.

Natzl 1.197 16 Man imprisoned, man crystallized, man vegetative, speaks to man impersonated.

Polil 1.199 6 ...we ought to remember...that every one of [the State’s institutions] was once the act of a single man.

Polil 1.199 18 ...society is fluid;...any particle may suddenly become the centre of the movement and compel the system to gyrate round it; as every man of strong will, like Pisistratus or Cromwell. does for a time...

Polil 1.199 20 ...society is fluid;...any particle may suddenly become the centre of the movement and compel the system to gyrate round it; as every man of truth, like Plato or Paul, does forever.

Polil 1.202 1 One man owns his clothes, and another owns a county.

Polil 1.206 11 [A cent’s] value is in the necessities of the animal man.

Polil 1.206 27 Every man owns something...

Polil 1.209 27 The philosopher, the poet, or the religious man, will of course wish to cast his vote with the democrat...

Pol 3.212 25 Every man finds a sanction for his simplest claims and deeds, in decisions of his own mind, which he calls Truth and Holiness.

Pol 3.213 13 The idea after which each community is aiming to make and mend its law, is the will of the wise man.

Pol 3.213 13 The wise man [the community] cannot find in nature...

Pol 3.213 26 All forms of government symbolize an immortal government...perfect where two men exist, perfect where there is only one man.

Pol 3.215 10 This is the history of governments,--one man does something which is to bind another.

Pol 3.215 11 A man who cannot be acquainted with me, taxes me;...

Pol 3.216 6 To educate the wise man the State exists...

Pol 3.216 7 ...with the appearance of the wise man the State expires.

Pol 3.218 23 If a man found himself so rich-natured that he could enter into strict relations with the best persons...could he...covet relations so hollow and pompous as those of a politician?

Pol 3.219 20 A man has a right to be employed...

Pol 3.221 2 ...there never was in any man sufficient faith in the power of rectitude to inspire him with the broad design of renovating the State on the principle of right man.

Pol 3.221 23 ...there are now men...more exactly, I will say, I have just been conversing with one man, to whom no weight of adverse experience will make it for a moment appear impossible that thousands of human beings might exercise towards each other the grandest and simplest sentiments.

NR 3.225 1 ...a man is only a relative and representative nature.

NR 3.225 6 Could any man conduct into me the pure stream of that which he pretends to be?

NR 3.225 12 The man momentarily stands for the thought, but will not bear examination;

NR 3.225 19 The least hint sets us on the pursuit of a character which no man realizes.

NR 3.226 19 When I meet a pure intellectual force or a generosity of affection, I believe here then is man;

NR 3.226 27 All persons exist to society by some shining trait of beauty or utility which they have. We borrow the proportions of the man from that one fine feature;

NR 3.227 24 It is bad enough that our geniuses cannot do anything useful, but it is worse that no man is fit for society who has fine traits.

NR 3.228 13 ...as we grow older we value total powers and effects, as the impression, the quality, the spirit of men and things. The genius is all. The man,--it is his system--

NR 3.229 11 Who can tell if Washington be a great man or no?

NR 3.226 6 How wise the world appears, when...the completeness of the municipal system is considered! Nothing is left out. If you go into the markets and the custom-houses...it will appear as if one man had made it all.

NR 3.232 2 The modernness of all good books seems to give me an impression, the quality, the spirit of men and things. The genius is all. The man realizes.

NR 3.239 6 ...the uninspired man certainly finds persons a convenience in household matters...

NR 3.236 3 ...the divine man does not respect [persons];

NR 3.236 11 It is all idle talking: as much as a man is a whole, so is he also a part.

NR 3.238 4 ...our economical mother...gathering up into some man every property in the universe, establishes thousand-fold occult mutual attractions among her offspring.

NR 3.239 6 The rotation which whirls every leaf and pebble to the meridian, reaches to every gift of man...

NR 3.239 16 Each man...is a tyrant in tendency...

NR 3.241 3 ...as long as any exists, there is some need of him;

NR 3.240 13 A new poet has appeared; a new character appears; why should we refuse to eat bread until we have found his regiment and section in our old army-files? Why not a new man?

NR 3.240 20 Every man is wanted, and no man is wanted much.

NR 3.242 2 ...rigantly every man is a channel through which heaven flows;

NR 3.243 23 Through solstitial eternal things the man finds his road as if they did not subsist;

NR 3.245 19 ...every man is a partialist;

NR 3.245 26 ...every man is a universalist also.

NR 3.246 9 The rabid democrat, as soon as he is senator and rich man, has repented of what he supposed to be the possibility of sincere radicalism;

NR 3.247 22 ...if there could be any regulation...that a man should never keep his point of view without sound of trumpet.

NR 3.248 8 Is it that every man believes every other to be an incorruptible partialist, and himself a universalist?

NR 3.248 14 ...I endeavored to show my good men...that I loved man, if men seemed to me mice and rats;

NER 3.252 9 One apostle thought all men should go to farming, and another that no man should buy or sell;

NER 3.252 24 [Other reformers] attacked the system of agriculture, the use of animal manures in farming, and the tyranny of man over brute nature;

NER 3.253 1 ...the man must walk, wherever boats and locomotives will not carry him.

NER 3.254 3 ...in each of these [reform] movements emerged...an assertion of the sufficiency of the private man.

NER 3.254 19 It is right and beautiful in any man to say, I will take this coat, or this book, or this measure of corn of yours,--in whom we see the act to be original;

NER 3.256 18 ...if I had not that commodity [money]...man would be a benefactor to man, as being himself his only certificate that he had a right to those aids and services which each asked of the other.

NER 3.257 26 ...it seems as if a man should learn to plant, or to fish, or to hunt, that he might secure his subsistence at all events;

NER 3.260 14 One tendency appears alike in the philosophical speculation and in the most democratical movements...the wish, namely, to...arrive at short methods; urged, as I suppose, by an intuition...that man is more often injured than helped by the means he uses.

NER 3.261 10 It is of little moment that one or two or twenty errors of our social system be corrected, but of much that the man be in his senses.

NER 3.261 14 ...society gains nothing whilst a man, not himself renovated, attempts to renovate things around him;...

NER 3.262 18 ...you must make me feel that you...by your natural and supernatural advantages do...see how man can do without [the institution].

NER 3.262 19 No man deserves to be heard against property.

NER 3.265 2 ...no society can ever be so large as one man.

NER 3.265 15 Many of us have differed in opinion, and we could find no man who could make the truth plain, but possibly a college, or an ecclesiastical council, might.

NER 3.266 3 All in the men...cannot make...a blade of grass, any more than one man can.

NER 3.266 3 ...let there be one man, let there be truth in two men, in ten men, then is concert for the first time possible;...

NER 3.266 26 ...in a celebrated experiment, by expiration and respiration exactly together, four persons lift a heavy man from the ground by the little finger only.

NER 3.267 6 Each man, if he attempts to join himself to others, is on all sides cramped and diminished in his proportion;

NER 3.267 14 ...leave [a man] alone, to recognize in every hour and place the secret soul; he will go up and down doing the works of a true member [of Union], and, to the astonishment of all, the work will be done with concert, though man no spoke.

NER 3.267 19 I pass to the indication in some particulars of that faith in man, which the heart is preaching to us in these days;

NER 3.268 4 We do not think we can speak to divine sentiments in man;

NER 3.268 9 A man of good sense but of little faith, whose compassion seemed to lead him to church as often as he went there, said to me that he liked to have concerts, and fairs, and churches, and other public amusements go on.

NER 3.269 23 It was found that the intellect could be independently developed, that is, in separation from the man;

NER 3.271 1 I believe not in two classes of men, but in man in two moods;

NER 3.271 5 Iron conservative, miser, or thief, no man is but is a partial necessity;

NER 3.271 7 The soul lets no man go without some visitations and holdays of a divine presence.

NER 3.271 12 ...every man has at intervals the grace to scorn his personal antipathies, in compliment with his belief in the general do;

NER 3.272 10 Is not every man sometimes a radical in politics? NER 3.272 21 In the circle of the rankiest tories...let a man of great heart and mind act on them, and very quickly these frozen conservatives will yield to the friendly influence...

NER 3.275 1 The same magnanimity shows itself...in the preference...which each man gives to the society of superiors over that of his equals.

NER 3.275 2 All that a man has will he give for right relations with his mother;

NER 3.275 9 [A man]...gives his days and nights, his talents and his heart to acquit himself in all men's sight as a man;

NER 3.275 10 The consideration...of a man of mark in his profession; a naval and military honor...have this lustre for each candidate that they enable him to walk erect and unashamed in the presence of some persons before whom he felt himself inferior.

NER 3.276 10 [A man's constitution] cannot carry itself as it ought, high and unmatched in the presence of any...it is time to undervalue what he has valued;

NER 3.276 27 ...every man at heart wishes the best and not inferior society;

NER 3.277 5 The selfish man suffers more from his selfishness than he from the knowledge that selfishness withholds some important benefit;

NER 3.278 15 Nothing shall warp me from the belief that every man is a lover of truth;

NER 3.278 27 I remember standing at the polls one day when the anger of the political contest gave a certain grimness to the faces of the independent voters, and a good man at my side, looking on the people, remarked, I am satisfied that the largest part of these men, on either side, mean to vote right.

NMW 4.258 14 It was...the eternal law of man and of the world which baulked and ruined [Napoleon]...

GoW 4.261 19 Every act of the man inscribes itself in the memories of his fellows and in his own manners and face.

GoW 4.244 4 He rises upward; and, in man, the report is something more than print of the seal.

GoW 4.262 8 In man, the memory is a kind of looking-glass...

GoW 4.262 14 The facts do not lie in [the memory] inert; but some subside and others shine; so that we soon have a new picture, composed of the experiences of our cooperation; and the man cooperates.

GoW 4.263 5 In [the writer’s] eyes, a man is the faculty of reporting...

GoW 4.264 18 Nature has dearly at heart the formation of the speculative man, or scholar.

GoW 4.265 8 Society has, at all times, the same want, namely of one same man with adequate powers of expression to hold up each object of monomania in its right relations.

GoW 4.265 19 ...let one man have the comprehensive eye that can replace this scattered sight, present the right neighborhood and bearings...

GoW 4.265 25 The scholar is the man of the ages...

GoW 4.266 5 In this country, the emphasis of conversation and of public opinion commends the practical man...

GoW 4.267 2 Show me who has acted and who has not been the victim and slave of his action.

GoW 4.268 2 That man seeth, who seeth that the speculative and the practical doctrines are one [say the Hindoos].

GoW 4.268 24 Able men do not care in what kind a man is able, so only that he is able.

GoW 4.270 10 I described Bonaparte as a representative of the popular external life and aims of the nineteenth century. Its other half, its poet, is Goethe; a man quite domesticated in the century and the world.

GoW 4.270 26 [Goethe] appears at a time...when, in the absence of heroic characters, a social comfort and cooperation have come in. There is...no learned man, but learned societies...

GoW 4.274 11 ...[Goethe] showed...that, in actions of routine, a thread of mystery mixes itself up with the crowd.

GoW 4.274 14 [Goethe] had an extreme impatience of conjecture and of rhetoric. I have guesses enough of my own; if a man write a book, let him set down what he knows.

GoW 4.275 17 Man and the higher animals are built up through the vertebræ, the powers being concentrated in the head [wrote Goethe];

GoW 4.279 10 ...at last the hero [of Sand’s Consuelo]...no longer answers to his own titled name; it sounds foreign and remote in his ear. I am only man, he says;...

GoW 4.279 11 ...at last the hero [of Sand’s Consuelo]...no longer answers to his own titled name; it sounds foreign and remote in his ear. I am only man, he says; I breathe and work for man;...

GoW 4.281 12 A German public asks for a compelling sincerity. Here is activity of thought; but what is it for? What does the man mean?

GoW 4.281 14 There must be a man behind the book...

GoW 4.282 4 Though [the writer] were dumb [his message] would speak. If not, there is no such God’s word in the man,--if possible, his message...

GoW 4.285 26 [Goethe] has no aims less the conquest of universal truth, to be his portion: a man not to be bribed, nor deceived, nor victim and slave of his action.

GoW 4.287 17 Man and the higher animals are built up through the vertebræ, the powers being concentrated in the head [wrote Goethe];

GoW 4.289 10 ...at last the hero [of Sand’s Consuelo]...no longer answers to his own titled name; it sounds foreign and remote in his ear. I am only man, he says;...

ET5 5.89 17 A nation of laborers, every [English] man is trained to some one art or detail.

ET5 5.89 23 [The Englishman] would rather not do anything at all than not do it well. I suppose no people have such thoroughness;--from the highest to the lowest, every man meaning to be master of his art.

ET5 5.91 3 [The English] have made...London...such a city that almost every active man, in any nation, finds himself at one time or other forced to visit it.

ET5 5.94 3 The climate and geography [of England], I said, were factitious, as if the hands of man had arranged the conditions.

ET5 5.96 8 No man [in England] can afford to walk, when the parliamentary-train carries him for a penny a mile.

ET5 5.97 6 The nearer we look, the more artificial is [the Englishmen's] social system. Their law is a network of fictions. Their property, a scrip or certificate of right to interest on money that no man ever saw.

ET5 5.98 24 Man in England submits to be a prick of politics...

ET5 5.98 18 Man [in England] is made as a Birmingham button.

ET5 5.101 6 Every man [in England] carries the English system in his brain...

ET6 1.04 24 Each man [in England] walks, eats, drinks, shaves...in his own fashion.

ET6 1.05 4 Every man in this polished country [England] consults only his convenience...

ET6 1.05 8 I know not where any personal eccentricity is so freely allowed [as in England], and no man gives himself any concern with it.

ET6 1.05 24 [The Englishman] does not let you meet his eye. It is almost an affront to look a man in the face without being introduced.

ET6 1.11 1 The favorite phrase of [the Englishmen's] law is, a custom whereof the memory of man runneth not back to the contrary.

ET6 1.29 19 Beasts that make no truce with man, do not break faith with each other.

ET7 5.117 19 ...[the English] require plain dealing of others. We will not have to do with a man in a mask.

ET7 5.120 20 ...the chairman [of a St. George's festival in Montreal] complimented his compatriots, by saying, they confided that wherever they met an Englishman, they found a man who would speak the truth.

ET7 5.121 21 ...the Englishman is not fickle. He had really made up his mind now for years as he read his newspaper, to hate and despise M. Guizot; and the altered position of the man as an illustrious exile and a guest in the country, makes no difference to him.

ET7 5.122 13 [Englishmen] like a man committed to his objects.

ET7 5.124 20 ...when the Rochester rappings began to be heard of in England, a man deposited 100 pounds in a sealed box in the Dublin Bank, and had advertised in the newspapers to all somnambulists, mesmerizers and others, that whoever could tell him the number of his note should have the money.

ET7 5.125 11 I knew a very worthy man...who went to the opera to see Malibran.

ET8 5.129 21 Commerce sends abroad multitudes of different classes [of Englishmen]. The choleric Welshman, the fervid Scot, the bilious resident...could not enter [noblemen's] houses without being made to feel that they had to do with a man in a mask.

ET8 5.133 25 It was no bad description of the Briton generically, what was said two hundred years ago of one particular Oxford scholar: He was a very bold man, uttered any thing that came into his mind...

ET8 5.133 17 The common Englishman is prone to forget a cardinal article in the bill of social rights, that every man has a right to his own ears.

ET8 5.133 25 No man can claim to usurp more than a few cubic feet of the money.

ET8 5.136 18 An economist, or a man who can proportion his means and his ambition...without embarrassing one day of his future, is already a master of life, and a free agent.

ET8 5.137 26 A civility of trifles...takes place [in England], and the conversations with Fulke Greville, Lord Brooke, a man of no vulgar mind...

ET8 5.143 20 At Wilton House the Arcadia was written, amidst conversations with Pulke Greville, Lord Brooke, a man of no vulgar mind...

ET8 5.191 14 ...the chairman...afford to neglect them? O, replied my friend, why should they work for themselves when every man in England works for them...

ET8 5.197 23 When a man once knows that he has done justice to himself, let him dismiss all terrors of aristocracy as superstitions...

ET9 5.206 12 ...the young man at Oxford] pointed out to me a paralytic old man, who was assisted into the hall.

ET9 5.207 2 Greek erudition exists on the Isis and Cam, whether the Maud man or the Brasenose man be properly ranked or not;...

ET9 5.212 14 A coarse logic rules throughout all English souls;--if you do not let a man wear his clothes in a way that he considers becoming enough in so great a monarch, yet would have been ridiculous in another...

ET9 5.227 27...you, who are an honest man in other particulars [than conformity], know that there is alive somewhere a man whose honesty reaches to this point also that he shall not kneel to false gods...

ET14 5.237 13 If a man must think that age well taught and thoughtful, by which masques and poems, like those of Ben Jonson...were received with favor.
ET14 5.240 14 If any man thinketh philosophy and universality to be idle studies, he doth not consider that all professions are from thence served and supplied.
ET14 5.242 11 In England these [generalizations]...do all have a kind of filial retrospect to Plato and the Greeks. Of this kind is...the theory of Swedenborg...that the man makes his heaven and hell;...
ET14 5.251 16...literary reputations have been achieved [in England] by forcible men...who were driven by tastes and modes they found in vogue into their several careers. So, at this moment, every ambitious young man studies geology.
ET14 5.253 21...in England, one hermit finds this fact, and another finds that.
ET14 5.259 3 Might I, an unlettered man, venture to prescribe bounds to the latitude of criticism, I should exclude...all rules drawn from the ancient ET15 5.274 16 We [Emerson and Carlyle] counted and measured by paces...what is true of itself. It is not to be measured at all by the standard of

ET17 5.294 6...asleep on the sofa. He was at first silent and indisposed, as an old man
ET17 5.297 6...we have [in England] the factitious instead of the natural;...and the rewarding as an illustrious inventor whosesoever will continue...to interpose between the man and his objects.
ET17 5.299 3 The same fitness must be presumed between a man and the time
ET17 5.307 25...no man has a right perception of any truth who has not been reacted on by it so as to be ready to be its martyr.
ET17 5.311 16...what a proud chivalry is indicated in Collins's Peerage, ET18 5.307 25...each man, like each plant, has his parasites.
ET18 5.310 15...as for Donne bey...there is...no man who can read, that does not read it.
ET18 5.311 16 This conscience is one element [which attracts an American to England], and the other is...that homage of man to man, running through all classes.
F 6.6 20...now and then an amiable parson...believes in a piaestare-Providence, which, whenever the good man wants a dinner, makes that somebody shall knock at his door and leave a half-dollar.
F 6.6 25 We must see that the world...will not mind drowning a man or a woman...
F 6.6 28 The cold, incon siderate of persons...freezes a man like an apple.
F 6.9 23 How shall a man escape from his ancestors...
F 6.10 9 In different hours a man represents each of several of his ancestors.
F 6.13 2...There is in every man a certain feeling that he has been what he is from all eternity.
F 6.13 10 Now and then a man of wealth in the heyday of youth adopts the tenet of that force to draw material and elemental powers...
F 6.13 12 In England there always is some man of wealth and large connection, planting himself...on the side of progress...

F 6.15 26...man is born.
F 6.17 15 Man is the arch machine of which all these shifts drawn from himself are toy models.
F 6.20 15...[Maya] became at last woman and goddess, and [Vishnu] a man and a god.
F 6.21 9...high over thought, in the world of mortals, Fate appears as vindicator...requiring justice in man...
F 6.21 17 The limitation[of Fate] is impassible by any insight of man.
F 6.22 10 Man is not order of nature...
F 6.23 2...here they are, side by side, god and devil...riding peacefully together in the eye and brain of every man.
F 6.23 7...a part of Fate is the freedom of man.
F 6.23 9 So far as a man thinks, he is free.
F 6.23 16...it is wholesome to man to look not at Fate, but the other way...
F 6.24 8 Rude and invincible except by themselves are the elements. So let man.
F 6.24 13 A man ought to compare advantageously with a river...
F 6.24 24...if Fate is so prevailing, man also is part of it...
F 6.25 8 The revelation of Thought takes man out of servitude into freedom.
F 6.26 2 A man speaking from insight affirms of himself what is true of the mind:
F 6.26 21 We hear eagerly every thought and word quoted from an intellectual man.
F 6.29 1 Always one man more than another represents the will of Divine Providence to the period.
F 6.29 26 There can be no driving force except through the conversion of the man into his will...
F 6.30 1...no man has a right perception of any truth who has not been reacted on by it so as to be ready to be its martyr.
F 6.30 17 We can afford to allow the limitation, if we know it is the meter of the growing man.
F 6.30 21...when the boy grows to man...he pulls down that wall...
F 6.32 9 The cold...freezes a man like a dewdrop.
F 6.33 7 The mischievous torrent is taught to drudge for man;...
F 6.33 10 Man moves in all modes...
F 6.35 8 A man must thank his defects...
F 6.36 1 In the latest race, in man, every generosity, every new perception...are certificates of advance out of fate into freedom.
F 6.37 1...where shall we find the first atom in this house of man...
F 6.37 20 The like adjustments exist for man.
F 6.38 21 You may be sure the new-born man is not inert.
F 6.38 27...the papilae of a man run out to every star.
F 6.39 25 The same fitness must be presumed between a man and the time and event, as between the sexes...
F 6.40 26 Nature magically suits the man to his fortunes...
F 6.41 6 The pleasure of life is according to the man that lives it...
F 6.42 1 The tendency of every man to enact all that is in his constitution is expressed in the old belief that the efforts which we make to escape from our destiny only serve to lead us into it...
F 6.42 5...a man likes better to be complimented on his position...than on his merits.
F 6.42 9 A man will see his character emitted in the events that seem to meet him.
F 6.42 18...in each town there is some man who is...an explanation of the ways of living and society of that town.
F 6.43 10 Whilst the man is weak, the earth takes upon him.
F 6.43 22 What is the character, which we sit here, but an aggregate of incongruous materials which have obeyed the will of some man?
F 6.44 22...the great man...is the impressionable man;...
F 6.44 23...the great man, that is, the man most imbued with the spirit of the time, is the impressionable his defects;...
F 6.44 24...the great man...is the impressionable man;...
F 6.45 13 If a man has a see-saw in his voice, it will run into his sentences...
F 6.45 16...as every man is hunted by his own daemon...this checks all his activity.
F 6.45 19...each man, like each plant, has his parasites.
F 6.47 9 A man must ride alternately on the horses of his private and his public nature...
F 6.47 14...when a man is the victim of his fate...he is to rally on his relation to the Universe.
F 6.49 16 Let us build to the Beautiful Necessity, which makes man brave...
Pow 6.53 8...if there be such a tie that wherever the mind of man goes, nature will accompany him, perhaps there are men whose magnetisms are of that force to draw material and elemental powers...
Pow 6.53 17 A man should prize events and possessions as the ore in which this fine mineral [power] is found;...
Pow 6.53 24 A cultivated man...is the end to which nature works...
Pow 6.55 21 If Eric is in robust health...at his departure from Greenland he will steer west, and his ships will reach Newfoundland. But take out Eric and put in a stronger and bolder man...and the ships will...sail six hundred...miles further.
Pow 6.56 13 One man is made of the same stuff of which events are made;...
Pow 6.56 18 A man who knows men, can talk well on politics, trade, law, war, religion.
Pow 6.57 16 On the neck of the young man, said Hafiz, sparks no gem so gracious as enterprise.

Elo 7.77 11 Face to face with a highwayman...can you bring yourself off safe by your wit exercised through speech?...a problem easy enough to Caesar or Napoleon. Whenever a man of that stamp arrives, the highwayman has found a master.

Elo 7.77 13 A man succeeds because he has more power of eye than another.

Elo 7.78 2 It was said that a man has at one step attained vast power, who has renounced his moral sentiment.

Elo 7.78 11 Julius Caesar said to Metellus, when that tribune interfered to hinder him from entering the Roman treasury, Young man, it is easier for me to put you to death than to say that I will;

Elo 7.78 20 [Caesar]...declaimed to [the pirates]; if they did not applaud his speeches, he threatened them with hanging...and in a short time, was master of all on board. This is why he cannot be disconcerted.

Elo 7.79 8 Whoso can speak well, said Luther, is a man.

Elo 7.80 12...among our cool and calculating people, where every man mounts guard over himself...there is a good deal of skepticism as to extraordinary influence.

Elo 7.80 22...each man inquires if any orator can change his convictions.

Elo 7.80 26 Does [any one] think that not possibly a man may come to him who shall persuade him out of his most settled determination?...

Elo 7.81 11 A man who has tastes like mine, but in greater power, will rule me any day...

Elo 7.84 5 Pepsys says of Lord Clarendon...I did never observe how much easier a man do speak when he knows all the company to be below him, than above him;

Elo 7.84 14...a great man is the greatest of occasions.

Elo 7.86 7 In every company the man with the fact is like the guide you hire to lead your party up a mountain...

Elo 7.89 21 Where [the orator] looks all things fly to their places. What will he say next? Let this man speak, and this man only.

Elo 7.91 2...the truly eloquent man is a sane man with power to communicate his sanity.

Elo 7.91 3 If you arm the man with the extraordinary weapons of this art [of oratory]...all these talents...have an equal power to ennoble and mislead the audience and the orator.

Elo 7.91 16...we...might well go round the world, to see a man who drives, and is not run away with...a man who, in prosecuting great designs, has an absolute command of the means of confusing his ideas.

Elo 7.91 17...we...might well go round the world, to see...a man who, in prosecuting great designs, has an absolute command of the means of confusing his ideas.

Elo 7.91 24 There is for every man a statement possible of that truth which he is most unwilling to receive;

Elo 7.91 11 For the triumphs of the art [of eloquence] somewhat more must still be required, namely a reinforcing of man from events...

Elo 7.92 16 In a transcendent eloquence, there was ever some crisis in affairs, such as could deeply engage the man to the cause he pleads;

Elo 7.92 20...in cases where profound conviction has been wrought, the eloquent man is he...who is inwardly drunk with a certain belief.

Elo 7.94 7...[people] soon begin to ask, What is [the speaker] driving at?...and if this man does not stand for anything, he will be deserted.

Elo 7.94 14 The preacher enumerates his classes of men and I do not find my place therein; I suspect then that no man does.

PI 8.5.16 believe this conviction makes the charm of chemistry.--that we have the same avoidipous matter in an alembic, without a vestige of the old form: and in animal trasformation not less, as...in embryo and man.

PI 8.6.13...whilst the man is startled by this closer inspection of the laws of matter, his attention is called to the independent action of the mind:...-

PI 8.8.4 Anatomy, osteology, exhibit arrested or progressive ascess in each kind, from the highest pointing to the higher forms, the highest to the highest, from the fluid in an elastic sack, from radiate, mollusk, articulate, vertebrate, up to man...

PI 8.9.20 Every object [the student] beholds is the mask of a man.

PI 8.10.5 Reptile or mollusk or man or angel only exists in system...

PI 8.11.20...the facility with which Nature lends itself to the thoughts of man...is as if the world were only a disguised man...

PI 8.12.10 Nothing so marks a man as imaginative expressions.

PI 8.17.18 The poet squanders on the hour an amount of life that would more than furnish the seventy years of the man that stands next him.

PI 8.17.23 As soon as a man masters a principle and sees his facts in relation to it, fields, waters, skies, offer to clothe his thoughts in images.

PI 8.20.26 Poetry, if perfected...is the speech of man after the real, and not after the apparent.

PI 8.22.14 Man runs about less and in pain when his condition or the objects about him do not fully match his thought.

PI 8.23.5 The poet discovers...that Nature is the immense shadow of man.

PI 8.23.10 The world is thoroughly anthropomorphized, as if it had passed through the body of man...

PI 8.23.15...there is nothing to which man is not related;...

PI 8.26.27...when we describe man as poet...we speak of the potential or ideal man...

PI 8.26.29...when we describe man as poet...we speak of the potential or ideal man...

PI 8.26.26 [The true poet] is the healthy, the wise, the fundamental, the sturdy man.

PI 8.28.14 Lear...thinks every man who suffers must have the like cause with his own.

PI 8.30.3 What news? asks man of man everywhere.

PI 8.30.11 The right poetic mood...shows a sharper insight: and the ideal man...

PI 8.38.7...man would be a poet if his intellectual digestion were weaker than any man between Milton and Wordsworth.

PI 8.42.14...the man might go in backbuck or mats, and his dress would be admired.

PI 8.44.11...a man has but firm nerves...it is perhaps a wise economy to go to a good shop and dress himself irpropricably.

PI 8.92.3 A wise man once said to me that all whom he knew. met...

PI 8.92.8 The soul of a man must be the servant of another.

PI 8.94.15...[Madame de Stael] said...I would go five hundred leagues to talk with a man of genius whom I had not seen.

PI 8.97.12...I have seen a man of genius who made me think that if other men were like him cooperation were impossible.

PI 8.99.27 In a whole nation of Hottenots there shall not be one valuable man.--valuable out of his tribe.

PI 8.100.9 It is the sense of every human being that man should have this dominion of Nature...

PI 8.100.21 There is in America a general conviction in the minds of all mature men, that every young man of good facility and good habits can by perseverance attain to an adequate estate:...

PI 8.103.19...I said to myself, How little this man [an American to be proud of] suspects...that he is not likely, in any company, to meet a man superior to himself.

PI 8.103.21...I said to myself, How little this man [an American to be proud of] suspects...that he is not likely, in any company, to meet a man superior to himself.

PI 8.106.20 As soon as sacrifice becomes a duty and necessity to the man, I see no limit to the horizon which opens before me.

PI 8.110.5...whose mind soever is fully possessed with a fervent desire to know good things, and with the dearest charity to infuse the knowledge of them into others, when such a man would speak, his words...trip about him at command...

PI 8.112.23 Eloquence shows the power and possibility of man.

PI 8.113.17 The orator is he whom every man is seeking when he goes into the courts...

PI 8.114.14...you may find [the orator] in some lowly Bethel, by the seaside...a man who never knew the looking-glass or the critic;...

PI 8.114.15...you may find [the orator] in some lowly Bethel, by the seaside...a man whom college drill or patronage never made...

PI 8.114.17...you may find [the orator] in some lowly Bethel, by the seaside...a man who conquers his audience by infusing his soul into them...

PI 8.114.24...you may find [the orator] in some lowly Bethel, by the seaside...a man whom college drill or patronage never made...

PI 8.115.12 [Eloquence] instructs...that a man is a mover;...

PI 8.115.17 When a good man rises in the cold and malicious assembly, he is really the orator...

PI 8.116.14...When a good man rises in the cold and malicious assembly, he is really the orator...

PI 8.116.20...When a good man rises in the cold and malicious assembly, he is really the orator...

PI 8.117.7 [The orator] knew very well beforehand that [the people] were looking behind and that he was looking ahead, and therefore it was wise for him to say that we would speak, his words...trip about him at command...

PI 8.121.19...Saadi tells us that a person with a disagreeable voice was reading the Koran aloud, when a holy man, passing by, asked what was his monthly stipend.

man, n.

Aristotle 10.8 11 Wise and sometimes terrible hints shall in [dreams] be thrown to the man.

Aristotle 10.10 13 skillful man reads his dreams for his self-knowledge.

Aristotle 10.10 6 It is no wonder that particular dreams and presentiments should fall out and be prophetic. The fallacy consists in selecting a few insignificant hints, when all are inspired with the same sense. As if one should exhaust his astonishment at the economy of his thumb-nail, and overlook the central causal miracle of his being a man.

Aristotle 10.10 6 Every man goes through the world attended with innumerable facts prefiguring...his fate.

Aristotle 10.10 6 under every tree in the speckled sunshine and shade no man notices that every spot of light is a perfect image of the sun...

Aristotle 10.11 10 A man reveals himself in every glance and step and movement and rest.

Aristotle 10.11 17 ...the productions of man are so anthropomorphous that not possible, he can invent any fable that shall not have a deep moral...

Aristotle 10.13 8 For Spiritism, it shows that no man, almost, is fit to give evidence.

Aristotle 10.13 26 Eupripides said...he is not the wisest man whose guesses turn out well in the event.

Aristotle 10.14 17 As I was once travelling by the Red Sea, there was one among the horsemen that attended us named Masollam, a brave and strong man.

Aristotle 10.14 21 ...while the whole multitude was on the way, an augur called out to them to stand still, and this man [Masollam] inquired the reason of their halting.

Aristotle 10.16 6 The young man takes a leap in the dark and alights safe.

Aristotle 10.19 9 It would be easy in the political history of every time to furnish examples of this irregular success, men having a force which without virtue...yet makes them prevailing. ... The crimes they commit, the exposures which follow, and which would ruin any other man, are strangely overlooked.

Aristotle 10.20 14 The history of man is a series of conspiracies to win from Nature some advantage without paying for it.

Aristotle 10.21 15 There are many things of which a wise man might wish to be ignorant.

Aristotle 10.22 25 There is as precise and as describable a reason for every fact occurring to [the so-called lucky man], as for any occurring to any man.

Aristotle 10.23 3 ...the so-called fortunate man is one who...relies on his instinct.

Aristotle 10.23 13 ...in a particular circle and knot of affairs [the fortunate man] is not so much his own man as the hand of Nature and time.

Aristotle 10.24 17 ...[occult facts] are merely physiological, semi-medical, related to the machinery of man.

Aristotle 10.25 19 ...in the Universe no man was ever known to get a cent’s worth without paying in some form or other the cent.

Aristotle 10.27 19 ...I think the numberless forms in which this superstition [demonology] has appeared in every time and every people indicates the inextinguishableness of wonder in man.

Aristotle 10.27 23 [Man] is sure no book, no man has told him all.

Aristotle 10.31 23 It is not to be a man of rank, but a man of honor...which seems to [the best young men] the right mark and the true chief of our modern society.

Aristotle 10.32 9 A reference to society is part of the idea of culture; science of modern society.

Aristotle 10.34 5 ...all the deference of modern society to this idea of the Gentleman...is a secret homage to reality and love which ought to reside in every man.

Aristotle 10.36 25 ...a new respect for the sacredness of the individual man, is that antidote which must correct in our country the disgraceful deference to public opinion.

Aristotle 10.37 6 The game of the world is a perpetual trial of strength between man and events.

Aristotle 10.37 7 The common man is the victim of events.

Aristotle 10.37 10 The superior man is at home in his own mind.

Aristotle 10.40 4 In every company one finds the best man;... Aristotle 10.41 17 In simple communities, in the heroic ages, a man was chosen for his knack:... Aristotle 10.41 24 In the Norse Edda it appears as the curious but excellent policy of contending tribes, when tired of war, to exchange hostages, and in reality each to adopt from the other a first-rate man.

Aristotle 10.43 7 When Nature goes to create a national man, she puts a symmetry between the physical and intellectual powers.

Edc1 10.129 5 How [the desire of power] sharpens the perceptions and stores the memory with facts. Thus a man may well spend many years of life in trade.

Edc1 10.130 2 Whatever the man does...opens another chamber in his soul....

Edc1 10.130 6 Whatever the man does, or whatever befals him, opens another chamber in his soul.—that is, he has got a new feeling, a new perception and command; that it is the presence of the Eternal in each perishing man;...

Edc1 10.130 12 ...the distinctions of the true clergyman are not less decisive. Men ask now, Is he serious? Is he a sincere man, who lives as he teaches? Is he a benefactor?

Edc1 10.132 8 whilst the man is ever invited inward into shining realms of knowledge and power by the shows of the world...it becomes the last revelation of intellect and of sentiment that in a manner it severs the man from all other men....

Edc1 10.134 2 Education should be as broad as man.

Edc1 10.135 8 [The great object of Education] should be a moral one...to inspire the youthful man with an interest in himself....

Edc1 10.135 15 A man is a little thing whilst he works by and for himself...

Edc1 10.135 21 In affirming that the moral nature of man is the predominant element and should therefore be mainly consulted in the arrangements of a school, I am very far from wishing that it should swallow up all the other instincts and faculties of man.

Edc1 10.135 25 ...I am very far from wishing that [the moral nature of man] should swallow up all the other instincts and faculties of man.

Edc1 10.135 27 ...[the moral nature] monopolize the man he is not yet sound....

Edc1 10.136 9 Let us apply to this subject [education] the light of the same torch by which we have looked at all the phenomena of the time; the infinitude, namely, of every man.

Edc1 10.136 15 The old man thinks the young man has no distinct purpose...

Edc1 10.136 18 The old man thinks the young man has no distinct purpose, for he could never get anything intelligible and earnest out of him. Perhaps the young man does not think it worth his while to explain himself to so hard and inapprrehesive a confessor.

Edc1 10.138 3 You are trying to make that man another you. One’s enough.

Edc1 10.138 26 ...[boys] know everything that befals in the fire-comany, the merits of every engine and of every man at the brakes....

Edc1 10.140 23 ...every one desires that [the boy’s] pure vigor of action and wealth of narrative...should be carried into the habit of the young man....

Edc1 10.142 7 The [solitary] man is, as it were, born deaf and dumb....

Edc1 10.149 16 ...in literature, the young man who has taste for poetry...is insatiable for this nourishment.

Edc1 10.150 3 ...every young man is born with some determination in his nature.

Edc1 10.151 19 Is it not manifest...that...children should be treated as the high-born and virginal candidates of truth? To regard the young child, the young man, requires, no doubt, a rare patience....

Edc1 10.153 17 A rule is so easy that it does not need a man to apply it:...

Edc1 10.156 11 ...he is,—every child, a new style of man;...

Sulp 10.167 3 ...[William Ellery Channing’s] best friend, a man of guarded lips...said...I believe him capable of virtue.

Sulp 10.168 10 ...I do not know any advantage more conspicuous which a man owes to his experience in markets...than the caution and accuracy he acquires in his report of facts.

Sulp 10.170 13 Once a man...is not worth a million or ten millions of gold dollars in hand...than the caution and accuracy he acquires in his report of facts.

Sulp 10.171 20 Enthusiasm is the height of man....

Sulp 10.171 23 If man loves the conditioned, he also loves the unconditioned.

Sulp 10.179 3 ...it would seem the whole human race agree to value a man precisely in proportion to his power of expression:...

Sulp 10.173 11 ...to the most expressive man that has existed, namely, Shakespere, [mankind] have awarded the highest place.

Sulp 10.173 23 The talent sucks the substance of the man.

Sulp 10.174 10 Children and thoughtless people...like to talk of a marriage, of a bankruptcy, of a debt, of a crime. The wise man shuns all this.

Sulp 10.174 11 I knew a grave man who, being urged to go to a church where a clergyman was newly ordained, said he liked him very well, but he would go when the interesting Sundays were over.

Sulp 10.175 5 In all the years that I have sat in town and forest, I never saw...a flying man...

Sulp 10.178 8 Universally, the better gold, the worse man.

Sove 10.183 11 There is a kind of latent omniscience not only in every man, but in every particle.

Sove 10.183 20 That convertibility we so admire in plants and animal structures, whereby the repairs and ulcerous uses are subserved, when one part is wounded or deficient, by another; this self-help and self-creation proceed from the same original power which works remotely in grandest and meanest structures—the wise man shuns all this.

Sove 10.184 1 ...this unity exists in the organization of insect, beast and bird, still ascending to man...

Sove 10.184 2 ...this unity exists...from lower type of man to the highest yet attained...

Sove 10.184 11 ...all the animals show the same good sense in their humble walk that the man who is their enemy or friend does:...

Sove 10.185 2 The man down in Nature occupies himself in guarding, in feeding, in warming and nursing his body:...

Sove 10.185 11 ...presently...[the man down in Nature] is aware that he owes a higher allegiance to do and live as a good member of this universe. In the measure in which he has this sense he is a man:...

Sove 10.185 27 ...we exaggerate when we represent these two elements [belief and skepticism] as disunited; every man shares them both;...

A Concordance to the Collected Essays of Ralph Waldo Emerson 2797

LLNe 10.341 20 Margaret Fuller, George Ripley...and many others...from time to time spent an afternoon at each other's houses in a serious conversation. With them was always...a pure idealist, not at all a man of letters.

LLNe 10.341 21 Margaret Fuller, George Ripley...and many others...from time to time spent an afternoon at each other's houses in a serious conversation. With them was always a man quite too cold and contemptible for the alliances of friendship.

LLNe 10.344 21 I habitually apply to [Theodore Parker] the words of a French philosopher who speaks of the man of Nature who abominates the steam-engine and the factory.

LLNe 10.344 8 Fourier...has put men under the obligation...of conceiving magnificent hopes and making great demands as the right of man. The country members [at Brook Farm] naturally were...for.

LLNe 10.353 13...it would be better to say, Let us be lovers and servants of that which is just, and straightway every man becomes a centre of a holy and beneficent republic.

LLNe 10.355 16 Becoming such a man [as Plato or Christ] the whole world becomes Fourierized or Christianized or humanized.

LLNe 10.355 19 In our free institutions, where every man is at liberty to choose his home and his trade...fortunes are easily made... every man...was a man of simple tastes.

LLNe 10.356 27 [Thoreau]...brought every day a new proposition, as revolutionary as that of yesterday, but different: the only man of leisure in his own society.

LLNe 10.358 4 The cheap way is to make every man do what he was born for.

LLNe 10.358 17 It chanced that here in one family were two brothers, one a brilliant and fertile inventor, and close by him his own brother, a man of business...

LLNe 10.358 21 Why could not the like partnership be formed between the inventor and the man of executive talent everywhere?

LLNe 10.358 22 Each man of thought is surrounded by wiser men than he...

LLNe 10.361 27 Mr. Ichabod Morton of Plymouth, a plain man formerly engaged through many years in the fisheries with success...came and built a house on [Brook Farm].

LLNe 10.362 22...[Charles Newcomb] was a man of no employment or practical aims.

LLNe 10.367 3 The country members [at Brook Farm] naturally were surprised to observe that one man ploughed all day and one looked out of the window all day...and both received at night the same wages.

CSS 10.376 15...[these men and women at the Chardon Street Convent] found what they sought, or the pledge of it...in...the prophetic dignity and tradition which accompanies...a man whose mind is made up to obey the great inward Commander.

EzRy 10.385 19 [Ezra Ripley] was a perfectly sincere man...

EzRy 10.386 26 One August afternoon, when I was in [Ezra Ripley]'s...hat out of his house to take up his hay, I well remember his...surprised to observe that one man ploughed all day and one looked out of the window all day...and both received at night the same wages.

EzRy 10.388 2 [Ezra Ripley] said...When I came to this town, your great-grandfather was a substantial farmer in this very place...and an excellent citizen. Your grandfather followed him, and was a virtuous man.

EzRy 10.390 11 [Ezrly Ripley] was a man so kind and sympathetic...that he was very justly appreciated in this community.

EzRy 10.391 8...[Ezra Ripley] knew the value of a dollar as well as another man...

EzRy 10.391 12...it is no reflection on others to say that [Ezra Ripley] was the most public-spirited man in the town.

EzRy 10.392 7 A man of anecdote, [Ezra Ripley]'s talk in the parlor was chiefly narrative.

EzRy 10.392 12 We remember the remark of a gentleman who listened...A very industrious man...[Thoreau] seemed the only man of leisure in town...

Thor 10.463 2...[Thoreau] said,—I have a faint recollection of pleasure derived from smoking dried lily-stems... before I was a man, and...for themselves...and...embrace himself less with a needless array of books and evidences of contingent value.

Carl 10.490 1 [Carllye] talks like a very unhappy man...

Carl 10.490 22 They keep Carlyle as a sort of portable cathedral-bell, which they like to produce in companies where he is unknown...and...at length the middle-aged man concludes to build a woodshed with their own hands.

Carl 10.493 16 ...this man [Carlyle] is a hammer that crushes mediocrity and pretension.

Carl 10.493 20 The literary, the fashionable, the political man...comes eagerly to see this man [Carlyle], whose fun they have heartily enjoyed,... and are struck with despair at the first onset.

Carl 10.493 22 The literary, the fashionable, the political man...comes eagerly to see this man [Carlyle], whose fun they have heartily enjoyed,... and are struck with despair at the first onset.

Carl 10.494 4 [Carlyle] detects in an instant if a man stands for any case to which he is not born and organically committed.

Carl 10.495 14 In proportion to the peals of laughter amid which [Carlyle] strips the solemnities of his pretender... does he worship whatever enthusiasm, fortitude, love or other sign of a good nature is in a man.

Carl 10.495 18 There is nothing deeper in [Carlyle's] constitution...than the consolatory, condescending good nature with which he looks at every object in existence, as a man might look at a mouse.

Carl 10.496 9 [Carlyle] thinks Oxford and Cambridge education indurates the young men...so that when they come forth of them, they say... we have gone through all the degrees, and are case-hardened against the veracities of the Universe; nor man nor God can penetrate us.

Carl 10.496 19 [Carlyle] thinks that the only religious act which a man nowadays can securely perform is to wash himself well.

Carl 10.497 2 Czar Nicholas was [Carlyle's] hero; for in the ignominy of Europe,...no man was found with conscience enough to fire a gun for his crown...one man remained who believed he was put there by God Almighty to govern his empire...

Carl 10.497 4 Czar Nicholas was [Carlyle's] hero; for in the ignominy of Europe...one man remained who believed he was put there by God Almighty to govern his empire...

Carl 10.498 7 [Carlyle] never feared the face of man.

GSt 10.501 16 We recall the all but exclusive devotion of this excellent man [George Stearns] during the last twelve years to public and patriotic interest.

GSt 10.501 18 Known until that time in no very wide circle as a man of skill and perseverance in his business...[George Stearns'] extreme interest in the national politics...engaged him to scan the fortunes of freedom with keenest attention.

GSt 10.502 11 [George Stearns] was the more engaged to this cause [of Kansas] by making in 1857 the acquaintance of Captain John Brown, who was not only an extraordinary man, but one who had a rare magnetism for men of character...

GSt 10.504 15 Plainly [George Stearns] was...a man for up-hill work...

GSt 10.504 17 Plainly [George Stearns] was...a man whom disasters, which dishearten other men, only stimulated to new courage and endeavor.

GSt 10.504 27 A man of the people, in strictly private life, girt with family ties;...[George Stearns] became, in the most natural manner, an indispensable power in the state.

GSt 10.505 27 [George Stearns] had been always a man of simple tastes...

GSt 10.507 17 Almost I am ready to say to these mourners [of George Stearns] that...there is hardly a man in this country worth knowing who does not hold his name in exceptional honor.

GSt 10.507 20...there is to my mind somewhat so absolute in the action of a good man that we do not, in thinking of him, so much as make any question of the future.

LS 11.15 18 ...this single expectation of a speedy reappearance of a temporal Messiah, which kept its influence even over so spiritual a man as St. Paul...would train to preserve the use of the rite [the Lord's Supper] when once established.

LS 11.18 19 [Jesus] is the mediator in that only sense in which possibly any being can mediate between God and man, that is, an instructor of man.

LS 11.22 22...the Almighty God was pleased to qualify and send forth a man to teach men that they must serve him with the heart;...

LS 11.22 26...the Almighty God was pleased to qualify and send forth a man to teach men...that sacrifice was smoke, and forms were shadows. This man lived, and died true to this purpose...

HDC 11.35 4...let no man, writes our pious chronicler [Edward Johnson]...make a jest of pumpkins...

HDC 11.37 4 To his bodily perfection, the wild man added some noble traits of character...

HDC 11.37 11 When you came over the morning waters, said one of the Sachems, we took you into our arms. We fed you with our best meat. Never went white man cold and hungry from Indian wigwam.

HDC 11.42 23 The greater speed and success that distinguish the planting of the human race despairs the first onset.

HDC 11.42 24 The greater speed and success that distinguish the planting of the human race despairs the first onset.

HDC 11.43 25 The nature of man and his condition in the world, for the first time within the period of certain history, controlled the formation of the State [in Massachusetts].

HDC 11.45 24 The disputes between that forbearing man [John Winthrop] and the deputies are like the quarrels of girls...

HDC 11.47 24 By the law of 1641 [in Concord], every man...might introduce any business into a public meeting.

HDC 11.48 5 A man felt himself at liberty to exhibit, at town-meeting, feelings and actions that he would have been ashamed of anywhere but amongst his neighbors.

HDC 11.50 20 The man of the woods might well draw on himself the compassion of the planters.

HDC 11.52 1 The questions which the Indians put [to John Eliot] betray their reason and their ignorance. Can Jesus Christ understand prayers in the Indian language? If a man be wise, and his sachem weak, must he obey him?

HDC 11.56 6 Even this check which befell [the people of Concord] acquaints us with the rapidity of their growth, for the good man [Peter Bulkeley], in dealing with his people, taxes them with luxury.

HDC 11.59 8 The red man may destroy here and there a straggler, as a wild beast may...

HDC 11.61 16 The worst feature in the history of those years [of King Philip's War], is, that no man speak for the Indian.

HDC 11.67 1...Mr. [Daniel] Bliss replied, In the prayer you speak of, Jesus Christ was acknowledged as the only Mediator between God and man;...

HDC 11.72 27...as [the minute-men] had no fear of man, they yet did have a fear of God.

HDC 11.83 23 [The Concord Town Records] exhibit a pleasing picture of a community...where no man has much time for words, in his search after things.

HDC 11.86 18 I believe this town [Concord] to have been the dwelling-place...of pious and excellent persons...who served God, and loved man.

LVB 11.89 6 Before any acts contrary to his own judgment or interest have repelled the affections of any man, each may look with trust and living anticipation to your [Van Buren's] government.

LVB 11.92 25 The soul of man...does abhor this business [the relocation of the Cherokees].

LVB 11.94 7...the question of currency and trade is the churning of grasshoppers beside the immortal question whether justice shall be done by the mode civilized to the savage man.

LVB 11.95 16...a letter addressed as mine is [to Van Buren], and suggesting to the mind of the Executive the plain obligations of man, has a burlesque character in the apprehensions of some of my friends.

LVB 11.95 24 A man [Van Buren] with your experience in affairs must have been cause to appreciate the futility of opposition to the moral sentiment.

EWI 11.100 1 In this cause [emancipation], no man's weakness is any prejudice:...if one man cannot speak, ten others can...

EWI 11.101 1 If there be any man who thinks the ruin of a race of men a small matter, compared with the last decoration and completions of his own comfort...I think I must not hesitate to satisfy that man that also his cream and vanilla are safer and cheaper by placing the negro nation on a fair footing than by robbing them.

EWI 11.101 6 If there be any man...who would not so much as part with his ice-cream, to save [a race of men] from rapine and manacles, I think I must not hesitate to satisfy that man that also his cream and vanilla are safer and cheaper by placing the negro nation on a fair footing than by robbing them.

EWI 11.103 16 Very sad was the negro tradition, that the Great Spirit, in the beginning offered the black man, whom he loved better than the buckra, or white, his choice of two boxes, a big and a little one. The black man was greedy, and chose the largest.

EWI 11.104 19...a good man or woman...once in a while saw these injuries [to West Indian slaves] and had the indiscretion to tell of them.

EWI 11.105 13 Granville Sharpe was accidentally made acquainted with the sufferers of a slave, whom a West Indian planter had brought with him to London, and had beaten with a pistol on his head, so badly that his whole body became diseased, and the man useless to his master...

EWI 11.105 15 The man [West Indian slave] applied to Mr. William Sharpe, a charitable surgeon...

EWI 11.107 7 We cannot say the cause set forth by this reform is allowed or approved of by the laws of this kingdom [England]; and therefore the man [George Somerset] must be discharged.

EWI 11.122 4 There are many faculties in man...

EWI 11.124 20...unhappily, most unhappily, gentlemen, man is born with intellect...

EWI 11.124 26...you could not get any poetry, any wisdom, and beauty in woman, any strong and commanding character in man, but these absurdities would still come flashing out,—these absurdities of a demand for justice, a generosity for the weak and oppressed.

EWI 11.128 11 For months and years the bill [on emancipation in the West Indies] was debated...and, at last, the right triumphed, the poor man was vindicated...

FRep 11.531 19 In this country...there is, at present...a headlong devotion...to the conquest of the continent,—to each man as large a share of the same as he can carve for himself...

FRep 11.531 27 That repose which is the ornament and ripeness of man is not American.

FRep 11.532 16...as soon as the success stops and the admirable man blunders, [our people] quit him:...FRep 11.533 9 If a temperate wise man should look over our American societies, I think the first duty that would excite his alarm would be the European influences on this country.

FRep 11.533 27 A man is coming, here as [in England], to value himself on what he can buy. Worst of all, his expense is not his own, but a far-off copy of Osborne House or the Elysee. The tendency of this is...to extinguish individualism and choke up all the channels of inspiration from God in man.

FRep 11.536 8 Filters and invention and descend into imitation. A man no longer conducts his own life.

FRep 11.534 21 In the planters of this country...the conditions of the country...forced them to a wonderful personal independence and to a certain hereditary planting and trading. Later this strength appeared in the solitudes of the West, where a man is made a hero by the varied emergencies of his lonely farm:...FRep 11.535 16...it is the rule of the universe that corn shall serve man, and not man corn.

FRep 11.535 17...it is the rule of the universe that corn shall serve man, and not man corn.

PLT 12.7 20 A plain man finds [men of wit] so heavy, dull, and oppressive...that he comes to write in his tablets. Avoid the great man as one who is priviledged to be an unprofitable companion.

PLT 12.27 24 ...[a plain man] comes to write in his tablets. Avoid the great man as one who is privileged to be an unprofitable companion.

PLT 12.9 21 Ever since the Norse heaven made the stern terms of admission that a man must do something excellent with his hands or feet...the same demand has been made in Norse earth.

PLT 12.10 13 A man is measured by the angle at which he looks at objects.

PLT 12.10 15 What is life but what a man is thinking of all day?

PLT 12.10 17 Knowing is the measure of the man.

PLT 12.13 9 Metaphysics...must be the observations of a working man on working men;

PLT 12.13 21 I want...the man who can humanize this [metaphysical] logic, these syllogisms, and give me the results.

PLT 12.15 23 We figure to ourselves Intellect as an ethereal sea...carrying its whole virtue into every creek and inlet which it bathes. To this sea every human house has a water front. But this force...is no fee or property of man or angel.

PLT 12.17 5 ...I believe...that the genius of man is a continuation of the power that made him.

PLT 12.17 11 ...as man is conscious of the law of vegetable and animal nature, so is he aware of an Intelect which overhangs his consciousness.

PLT 12.20 7 Not only man puts things in a row, but things below in a row.

PLT 12.21 14 The life of the All must stream through us to make the man and the man great.

PLT 12.21 25 ...there is development...from lower to superior function...steadily ascending to man.

PLT 12.21 26 If man has organs for breathing, for sight...you shall find all the same in the muskrat.

PLT 12.25 5 ...a fish...a muskrat] is only man modified to live in a mud-bank.

PLT 12.22 6 A fish in like manner is furnished to live in the sea;

PLT 12.23 5 From whatever side we look at Nature we seem to be exploring the figure of a disguised man.

PLT 12.24 15 Man seems a higher plant.

PLT 12.25 10 The fine tree continues to grow. The same thing happens in the man.

PLT 12.25 10 Every man has material enough in his experience to exhaust the sagacity of Newton in working it out.

PLT 12.25 18 The commonest remark, if the man could only extend it a little, would make him a genius;

PLT 12.25 23 All great masters are chiefly distinguished by the power of adding a second, a third, and perhaps a fourth step in a continuous line.

PLT 12.26 3 Many a man had taken the first step.

PLT 12.27 3 A man has been in Spain. The facts and thoughts which the man has found in that country gradually settle themselves into a determinate heap of one size and form and not another.

PLT 12.27 17 There is no permanent wise man.

PLT 12.28 14 Each man is a new power in Nature.

PLT 12.28 19 Silent, passive, even suikily, Nature offers every morning her wealth to man.

PLT 12.29 21 ...every man is furnished, if he will heed it, with wisdom necessary to steer his own boat.

PLT 12.30 20 Ev'n...a man is a new method and distributes things anew.

PLT 12.30 16 There is always a loss of truth and power when a man leaves working for himself to work for another.

PLT 12.30 20 When, moved by love, a man teaches his child...it is not done for others, but to fulfill a high necessity of his proper character.

PLT 12.31 22 There is no property or relation in that immense arsenal of forces which the earth is, but some man is at last found who affects this.

PLT 12.41 22 Simple perspicuity is the virtue of space, not of man.

PLT 12.38 25 A man is intellectual in proportion as he can make an object of every sensation, perception and intuition.

PLT 12.39 5 A man of talent has only to name any form or fact with which we are most familiar, and the strong light which he throws on it enhances it to all eyes.

PLT 12.40 18 An intellectual man has the power to go out of himself and see himself as an object;

PLT 12.39 23 ...[the intellectual man] wishes in thought to know the history and destiny of a man;

PLT 12.42 24 The highest measure of poetical power is such insight and faculty as will fuse the circumstances of to-day as shall make transparent the whole web of circumstance and opinion in which the man finds himself;

PLT 12.44 21 ...the fact of intellectual perception severs once for all the man from the things with which he converses.

Milt 12.253 19...we think no man can be named whose mind still acts on the cultivated intellect of England and America with an energy comparable to that of Milton.

Milt 12.254 1 Milton stands erect...still visible as a man among men...

Milt 12.254 4 There is something pleasing in the affection with which we can regard a man [Milton] who died a hundred and sixty years ago...

Milt 12.254 11 In these later ages, and few men ever, possessed so great a conception of the manly character [as Milton].

Milt 12.254 17 Better than any other [Milton] has discharged the office of greater man, namely, to raise the idea of Man in the minds of his contemporaries and of posterity...

Milt 12.254 19 Better than any other [Milton] has discharged the office of every great man, namely...to draw after Nature a life of man...

Milt 12.255 8 Bacon’s Essays are the portrait of...a great man of the vulgar sort.

Milt 12.255 10 The man of Locke is virtuous without enthusiasm...

Milt 12.255 16 The man of Lord Chesterfield is unworthy to touch [Milton’s] garment’s hem.

Milt 12.255 17 Akin’s man is a frugal, inoffensive, thrifty citizen...

Milt 12.256 6 [Milton] defined the object of education to be, to fit a man to perform justly, skilfully and magnanimously all the offices, both private and public, of peace and war.

Milt 12.256 24 For the delineation of this heroic image of man, Milton enlists...regular advantages.

Milt 12.262 8...[Milton] said...whom mind soever is fully possessed with a fervent desire to know good things, and with the dearest charity to infuse the knowledge of them into others, when such a man would speak, his words would be about him at command...

Milt 12.262 14...as basis or fountain of his rare physical and intellectual accomplishments, the man Milton was just and devout.

Milt 12.268 22 Thus chosen...for the clear perception of all that is graceful and venerable in man. Milton was not less happy in his times.

Milt 12.271 13...that [Milton] desired was the liberty of the wise man...

Milt 12.272 1 [Milton] maintained the doctrine of...the import of their own utterances. We hesitate to say such things, and say them only to the unpleasing dualism, when the man and the poet show like a double consciousness.

Milt 12.272 18 [Milton’s] opinions on all subjects are formed for man as he is...

Milt 12.273 8...[Milton] said...whose mind soever is fully possessed with a fervent desire to know good things, and with the dearest charity to infuse the knowledge of them into others, when such a man would speak, his words would be about him at command...

Milt 12.274 25 and the poet show like a double consciousness.

Milt 12.276 25...the genius and office of Milton were...to ascend by the aids of his learning and his religion...to a higher insight and more lively delineation of the heroic life of man.

Milt 12.279 1 We have offered no apology for expanding to such length our commentary on the character of John Milton...a man whom labor or danger never deterred from whatever efforts a love of the supreme interests of man prompted.

Milt 12.279 3 We have offered no apology for expanding to such length our commentary on the character of John Milton...a man whom labor or danger never deterred from whatever efforts a love of the supreme interests of man prompted.

Milt 12.279 7...are not all men fortified by the remembrance of...the angelic devotion of this man [Milton],...are not all men fortified by the remembrance of...the angelic devotion of this man [Milton], who...endeavored...to carry out the life of man to new heights of spiritual grace and dignity...

AcRi 12.291 17...a man has a right to pass...for a worse man than he is, but not for a better.

AcRi 12.291 18...a man has a right to pass...for a worse man than he is, but not for a better.

AcRi 12.294 4 A man of experience altogether, [Shakespeare’s] very soul and life as close and close to facts as the Bunker’s Gazette...

AcRi 12.296 5 Every historic autobiographic trait authenticating the man [Montaigne] adds to the value of the book.

AcRi 13.302 6 Shakespere says, A plague of opinion; a man can wear it on both sides, like a leather jerkin.

AcRi 13.303 9 The art of writing is the highest of those permitted to man as drawing directly from the soul...

WSL 12.344 25 [Landor] draws with evident pleasure the portrait of a man who never said anything right and never did anything wrong.

WSL 12.345 3 ...in the character of Pericles [Landor] has found full play for beauty and greatness of behavior, where the circumstances are in harmony with the man.

WSL 12.346 21 [Landor] is a man full of thoughts...

WSL 12.346 22 [Landor] is a man full of thoughts, but not, like Coleridge, a man of ideas.

Hsm1 2.253 2 What a disgrace is it to me to take note how many pairs of silk stockings thou hast...

Hsm1 2.755 10 We have seen or heard of many extraordinary young men who never ripened...

OS 2.270 14 If we consider what happens...in the instructions of dreams, wherein often we see ourselves in masquerade...we shall catch many hints that will broaden and lighten into knowledge of the secret of nature...

OS 2.298 9 We own many valuable observations to people who are not very acute or profound...

OS 2.295 15 The position men have given to Jesus, now for many centuries of history, is a position of authority...

Cir 2.301 23 This fact [that around every circle another can be drawn]...may conveniently serve us to connect many illustrations of human power in every department.

Cir 2.302 27 You admire this tower of granite, weathering the hurts of so many ages.

Cir 2.306 27...a month hence, I doubt not, I shall wonder who he was that wrote so many continuous pages.

Cir 2.315 9 Geoffrey draws on his boots to go through the woods, that his feet may be safer from the bite of snakes; Aaron never thinks of such a peril.

Cir 2.315 16 Think how many times we shall fall back into pitiful calculations before we take up our rest in the great sentiment...

Cir 2.319 9...old age seems the only disease; all others run into this one.

Int 2.338 22...there are many competent judges of the best book...

Int 2.339 2 The intellect...demands integrity in every work. This is resisted equally by a man's devotion to a single thought and by his ambition to combine too many.

Int 2.342 2 A new doctrine seems at first a subversion of all our opinions, tastes, and manner of living. Such has Swedenborg...seemed to many young men in this country.

Art1 2.361 13 When I came at last to Rome and saw with eyes the pictures, I found that genius...was the plain you and me I...had left at home in so many conscriptions...

Pt 3.19 10...in a centred mind, it signifies nothing how many mechanical inventions you exhibit.

Pt 3.19 14 The spiritual fact remains unalterable, by many or by few particulars;

Pt 3.24 17 [The sculptor] rose one day...before dawn, and saw the morning break...and for many days after, he strove to express this tranquillity.

Pt 3.25 27...a summer, with its harvest sown, reaped and stored, is an epic song, subordinating how many admirably executed parts.

Pt 3.30 22...the metamorphosis once seen, we divinie that it does not stop. I will not now consider how much this makes the charm of algebra and the mathematics, which also have their tropes, but it is felt in every definition; as when Plato describes...a figure to be a bound of solid; and many the like.

Pt 3.33 4...how mean to study, when an emotion communicates to the intellect the power to sap and upheave nature; how great the perspective!

Pt 3.37 10 Time and nature yield us many gifts.

Pt 3.40 4 What drops of all the sea of our science are baled up! and by what accident it is that these are exposed, when so many secrets sleep in nature!

Exp 3.45 6...there are stairs above us, many a one, which go upward and out of sight.

Exp 3.47 13 How many individuals can we count in society?...

Exp 3.47 14 How many individuals can we count in society? how many actions? how many opinions?

Exp 3.49 22 If to-morrow I should be informed of the bankruptcy of my principal debtors, the loss of my property would be a great inconvenience to me, perhaps, for many years; but it would leave me as it found me...

Exp 3.64 17 So many things are unsettled which it is of the first importance to settle.

Exp 3.69 22 The persons who compose our company...design and execute many things, and somewhat comes of it all, but an unlooked-for result.

Exp 3.69 25 [The individual] designed many things, and drew in other persons as coadjutors, quarreled with some or all, blundered much, and something is done.

Exp 3.75 9...the elements already exist in many minds around you of a doctrine of life which shall transcend any written record we have.

Exp 3.76 23...it is...the rounding mind’s eye which makes this or that man a type or representative of humanity, with the name of hero or saint. Jesus...is a good man on whom many people are agreed that these optical laws shall take effect.

Exp 3.80 16 If you could look with [the kitten’s] eyes you might see her surrounded with hundreds of figures performing complex dramas, with tragic and comic issues, long conversations, many characters, many up and down of fate.

Exp 3.80 17 If you could look with [the kitten’s] eyes you might see her surrounded with hundreds of figures performing complex dramas, with tragic and comic issues, long conversations, many characters, many up and downs of fate.

Exp 3.83 11 I have seen many fine pictures not in vain.

Exp 3.85 3...I have not found that much was gained by manipulative attempts to realize the world of thought. Many eager persons successively make an experiment in this way, and make themselves ridiculous.

Chr1 3.93 14 In his parlor I see very well that [the natural merchant] has been at hard work this morning, with that knitted brow and that settled humor, which all his desire to be courteous cannot shake off. I see plainly how many firm acts have been done:...

Chr1 3.93 15 In his parlor I see very well that [the natural merchant] has been at hard work this morning, with that knitted brow and that settled humor, which all his desire to be courteous cannot shake off. I see plainly how many valiant noes have this day been spoken, when others would have uttered ruinous yea.

Chr1 3.93 2 We boast our emancipation from many superstitions;...

Chr1 3.100 22 The wise man not only leaves out of his thought the many, but leaves out the few.

Chr1 3.101 18 Xenophon and his Ten Thousand were quite equal to what they attempted, and did it; so equal, that it was not suspected to be a grand and inimitable exploit. Yet there stands that fact unreported, a high-water mark in military history. Many have attempted it since, and not been equal to it.

Chr1 3.103 27...it was droll in the good Riemer, who has written the memoirs of Goethe, to make out a list of his donations and good deeds, as, so many hundred thalers given to Stillings, to Hegel, to Tischbein;...

Chr1 3.107 21 [Nature] makes very light of gospels and prophets, as one who has a great many more to produce and no excess of time to spare on any one.

Chr1 3.108 26 We have seen many counterfeits, but we are born believers in great men.

Chr1 3.110 4 I find it more credible, since it is anterior information, that one man should know heaven, as the Chinese say, than that so many men should know the world.

Chr1 3.115 17 There are many eyes that can detect and honor the prudent and household virtues;...

Chr1 3.119 19...there are many [eyes] that can discern Genius on his starry track;

Mrs1 3.120 13...the salt, the dates, the ivory, and the gold, for which these honest nations are visited, find their way into...countries where many write laws, and contrives to execute his will through the hands of many nations;...

Mrs1 3.121 17 An element which unites all the most forcible persons of every country...must be an average result of the character and faculties universally found in men. It seems a certain permanent average; as the atmosphere is a permanent composition, whilst so many gases are combined only to be decomposed.

Mrs1 3.123 9 In times of violence, every eminent person must fall in with many opportunities to appear as parties are of circumstance...

Mrs1 3.135 9 We call together many friends who keep each other in play...

Mrs1 3.143 22 Fashion has many classes and many rules of probation and admission...

Mrs1 3.148 23...[Shakespeare] adds to so many titles that of being the best-bred man in England and in Christendom.

Gio 3.161 2 I can think of many parts I should prefer playing to that of the Furies.

Nat2 3.179 8...taking timely warning, and leaving many things unsaid on this topic, let us not later omit our homage to the Efficient Nature...

Nat2 3.193 18 What shall we say...of this flattery and balking of so many well-meaning creatures?

Nat2 3.194 1 [Nature’s] secret is untold. Many and many an Oedipus arrears to it; he has the whole mystery teeming in his brain.

Pol1 3.209 11 Ordinarily all parties are parties of circumstance, and not of principle;...parties which...can easily change ground with each other in the support of many of their measures.

Pol1 3.211 26 It makes no difference how many tons’ weight of atmosphere presses on our heads, so long as the same pressure resists it within the lungs.

Pol1 3.211 24 There is a middle measure which satisfies all parties, be they never so many or so resolute for their own.

Pol1 3.218 10...we are constrained to reflect on our splendid moment with a certain humiliation, and not as one act of many arts;--

Wsp 6.232 21 A high aim reacts on the means, on the days, on the organs of the body:

Cbw 6.248 1 See what a cometary train of auxiliaries man carries with him, of animals, plants, stones, gases and imponderable elements. Let us infer his ends from this pomp of means.

Cbw 6.256 15 ...most of the great results of history are brought about by discussing the means.

Cbw 6.278 1 Sanity consists in not being subdued by your means.

SS 7.11 25 It by no means follows that we are not fit for society, because sores are tedious and because the sores find us tedious.

Art 7.40 14 I hasten to state the principle which prescribes, through different means, its firm law to the useful and the beautiful arts.

Elo1 7.76 8 ...this precious person makes a speech which is printed and read all over the Union, and he...takes the lead in the public mind over all these creative men, who, of course, are full of indignation to find one who has no tact or skill and knows he has none, put over them by means of this talking-power which they despise.

Elo1 7.91 19 ...we might well go round the world, to see...a man who, in prosecuting great designs, has an absolute command of the means of representing his ideas.

Elo1 7.93 14 ...the main distinction between [the eloquent man] and other well-graced actors is the conviction...that his mind is contemplating a whole...Add to this concentration a certain regnant calmness, which...keeps the steerage of its means and method; and the orator stands before the people as a demonical power...

Elo1 7.99 26 [Eloquence’s] great masters...resembling the Arabian warrior of fame, who wore seventeen weapons in his belt, and in personal combat used them all occasionally,—yet subordinated all means:

DL 7.105 22 [The boy] walks daily among wonders...the new knowledge is taken up into the life of to-day and becomes the means of more.

Edc1 10.125 5 The use of the world is that man may learn its laws. And the human race have wisely signified their sense of this, by calling wealth, means or business the end.

Edc1 10.127 15 [Man’s] continual tendency, his great danger, is to overlook the fact that the world is only his teacher, and the nature of sun and moon, plant and animal only means of arousing his interior activity. Edc1 10.128 14 ...always the mind contains its transparent chambers of means of classifying the most refractory phenomena...

Edc1 10.145 4 This is the perpetual romance of new life...when [God] sends into quiet houses a young soul...looking for something which is not there, but which only is there: the thing that is dim but it is sure, and he casts about for means and masters to verify it.

Edc1 10.152 23 Whatever becomes of our method [of teaching], the conditions stand fast,—six hours, and thirty, fifty, or a hundred and fifty pupils. Something must be done, and done speedily, and in this distress the world is entirely impotent means of violent means.

Edc1 10.157 9 The will, the male power...makes that military eye which controls boys as it controls men;...only dangerous when it leads the woman, over whose nature and order is precludes him from finer means.

Pt 3.3.24...the intellectual men do not believe in any essential dependence of the material world on thought and volition.

Pt 3.5.3 [The poet] stands among partial men for the complete man...

Pt 3.3.5 The young man revires men of genius, because...they are more himself than he is.

Pt 3.5.9 Nature enhances her beauty, to the eye of loving men, from their belief that the poet is beholding her shows at the same time...

Pt 3.5.13 [The poet] is isolated among his contemporaries by truth and by his art, with this consolation in his pursuits, that they will draw all men sooner or later.

Pt 3.5.14...all men live by truth...

Pt 3.5.22...the great majority of men seem to be minors...

Pt 3.5.16 Criticism is infested with a cant of materialism, which assumes that manual skill and activity is the first merit of all men...

Pt 3.5.17...some men, namely poets, are natural sayers...

Pt 3.5.12...we hear those partial warblings and attempt to write them down, but we lose ever and anon a word or a verse and substitute something of our own and thus miswrite the poem. The men of more delicate ear write down these cadences more faithfully...

Pt 3.5.19...we do not speak now of men of poetical talents...

Pt 3.5.18...this genius [a recent writer of lyrics] is the landscape-garden of a modern house...with well-bred men and women standing and sitting in the walks and terraces.

Pt 3.5.21 Our poets are men of talents who sing...

Pt 3.5.10...[the poet] will tell us how it was with him, and all men will be the richer in his fortune.

Pt 3.5.12.10...now I shall see men and women...

Pt 3.5.15.13...all men have the thoughts whereof the universe is the celebration.

Pt 3.5.16.16 It is only poets, and men of leisure and cultivation, who live with [nature]?

Pt 3.5.16.10 The inwardness and mystery of this attachment [to nature] drive men of every class to the use of emblems.

Pt 3.5.17.25 The manner by which a law is expressed, the more pungent it is, and the more lasting in the memories of men...

Pt 3.5.20.4...all men are intelligent of the symbols through which [life] is named...

Pt 3.5.21.15 [The poet] knows...why the great deep is adorned with animals, with men, and gods;...

Pt 3.5.23.21...when the soul of the poet has come to ripeness of thought, [nature] detaches and sends away from it its poems or songs...a fearless, vivacious offspring, clad with wings...which carry them fast and far, and [nature] detaches and sends away from it its poems or songs...a fearless, vivacious offspring, clad with wings...which carry them fast and far, and

Pt 3.5.27.23 All men avail themselves of such means as they can, to add this pungent it is, and the more lasting in the memories of men;...which carry them fast and far, and

Pt 3.5.30.4 If the imagination intoxicates the poet, it is not inactive in other men.

Pt 3.5.30.5 The use of symbols has a certain power of emancipation and exlibration for all men.

Pt 3.5.30.11 Men have really got a new sense...

Pt 3.5.31.18...Chaucer, in his praise of Gentilese, compares good blood in mean condition to fire, which, though carried to the darkest house betwixt...and the mount of Caucasus, will yet hold its natural office and burn as bright as if twenty thousand men did it behold;...

Pt 3.5.33.24 [The poet] unlocks our chains and admits us to a new scene. This emancipation is dear to all men.

Pt 3.5.34.4...Such persons are subscribers to all men.

Pt 3.5.34.6 The religions of the world are the ejaculations of a few men, and gods;...

Pt 3.5.35.16 Swedenborg, of all men in the recent ages, stands eminently for the translator of nature into thought.

Pt 3.3.16 The men in one of [Swedenborg’s] visions, seen in heavenly light, appeared like dragons...

Pt 3.3.6 A pungent it is, and the more lasting in the memories of men;...which carry them fast and far, and

Pt 3.3.8...all men have the thoughts whereof the universe is the celebration.

Pt 3.3.9.1...[the force of character].

Chr 3.111 18 Men write their names on the world as they are filled with [the force of character].

UGM 4.29 4 Nothing is more marked than the power by which individuals are guarded from individuals, in a world...where almost all men are too social and interfering.

UGM 4.15 10 The man:--the word is injurious.

UGM 4.31 8 Men who know the same things are not long the best company for each other.

UGM 4.31 22 As to what we call the masses, and common men,--there are no common men.

UGM 4.31 23 As to what we call the masses, and common men,--there are no common men.

UGM 4.31 23 All men are at last of a size;...

UGM 4.32 25 No man, in all the procession of famous men, is reason or illumination or that essence we were looking for;...

UGM 4.33 9 This is the key to the power of the greatest men,--their spirit diffuses itself.

UGM 4.33 26 The genius of humanity is the right point of view of history. The equals abide; the men who exhibit them have now more, now less, and pass away:

UGM 4.34 18 ...at last we shall cease to look in men for completeness...

UGM 4.35 5 ...within the limits of human education and agency, we may say great men exist that there may be greater men.

UGM 4.35 6 ...within the limits of human education and agency, we may say great men exist that there may be greater men.

UGM 4.35 11 It is for man...on every side, whilst he lives, to scatter the seeds of science and of song, that climate, corn, animals, men, may be milder.

PPh 4.39 12 Out of Plato come all things that are still written and debated among men of thought.

PPh 4.39 22 Even the men of grander proportion suffer some deduction from the misfortune (shall I say?) of coming after this exhausting generalizer [Plato].

PPh 4.40 14 How many great men Nature is incessantly sending up out of night, to be [Plato’s] men...

PPh 4.40 15 How many great men Nature is incessantly sending up out of night, to be [Plato’s] men...

PPh 4.41 15 ...these [great] men magnetize their contemporaries...

PPh 4.44 18 ...in proportion to the culture of men they become [Plato’s] scholars;

PPh 4.45 25 In adult life, while the perceptions are obtuse, men and women talk vehemently and superlatively...

PPh 4.46 10 The same weakness and want, on a higher plane, occurs daily in the education of ardent young men and women.

PPh 4.49 25 Men contemplate distinctions, because they are stupefied with ignorance.

PPh 4.52 13 The country...of men faithful in doctrine and in practice to the idea of a deaf, unimprovab]e, immense fate, is Asia;...

PPh 4.56 27 Exempt from envy, [the Supreme Ordainer] wished that all things should be as much as possible like himself. Whosoever, taught by wise men, shall admit this as the prime cause of the origin and foundation of the world, will be in the truth.

PPh 4.60 24 ...disregarding the honors that most men value...I shall endeavor in reality to live as virtuously as I can [said Plato]; and when I die, to die so. And I invite all other men, to the utmost of my power...to this contest, which, I affirm, surpasses all contests here.

PPh 4.61 6 ...men see in [Plato] their own dreams and glimpses are made available and made to pass for what they are.

PPh 4.63 13 I announce to men the Intellect.

PPh 4.63 19 I give you joy, O sons of men! that truth is altogether wholesome.

PPh 4.66 9 Men have their metal, as of gold and silver.

PPh 4.66 15 Of the five orders of things [said Plato], only four can be said to have power over the benefit which they impart to men [Socrates], than which, I, who benefit or not, just as it may happen.

PPh 4.71 13 The young men are prodigiously fond of [Socrates];

PPh 4.73 1 ...it is said that to procure the pleasure, which he loves, of And whether from a self-inquisitorial habit that he grew into from jealousy of the sins to which men of thought are liable, [Swedenborg] has acquired, in disentangling and demonstrating that particular form of moral disease, an acumen which no conscience can resist.

PPh 4.73 17 ...if [Swedenborg] staggered under the trance of delight, the unhapp]y, and witness the vastation of souls and hear there...their lamentations;...he saw...the hell of robbers, who kill and boil men;...
Men are a sort of moving plants... and we know how real and solid such men appear in the presence of transcendent degree the qualities and powers of common men. Men give way before such a man, as before natural events. They see what men want and sharing their desire, [the hero] does valuable originality consist in unlikeness to other men. If we require the originality which consists... in finding clay to the men of practical power...the man of ideas appears out of his reason. One has the same pleasure in [Montaigne's language] that he may...want a rougher instruction, want men...to the men of practical power...the man of ideas appears out of his reason. Great men are more distinguished by range and extent than by reason. Can you not believe that a man of earnest and burly habit...that this man of men [Shakespeare]...that he should not be ascribed to it his superiority, instead of valuing himself, like inferior men, always to bring two men against one at the point of engagement, will be an overmatch for a much larger body of men. To be sure there are men enough who are immersed in things...but these men ordinarily lack the power of arrangement...and we know how real and solid such men appear in the presence of transcendent degree the qualities and powers of common men. The instinct of active, brave, able men, throughout the middle class every where, has pointed out Napoleon as the incarnate...in America...In the struggle for the American Republic...the scholar and the statesman, from the most cultivated...have called to their help the man of ideas and the man of action. A very small force, skilfully and rapidly manoeuvring so as always to bring two men against one at the point of engagement, will be an overmatch for a much larger body of men. Great men are more distinguished by range and extent than by originality. Few men have any next;...if fighting be the best mode of adjusting national questions which knock for answer at every heart...on the characters of men, and their influences...which affect their fortunes...Napoleon...owes his predominance to the fidelity with which he expresses the tone of thought and belief, the aims of the masses of active and cultivated men. NMW 4.242 26 ...even when the majority of the people had begun to ask whether they had really gained any thing under the exhausting levies of money and men. [Napoleon], the whole talent of the country...took his part...
NMW 4.243 12 ...[Napoleon] undoubtedly felt a desire for men and compatriots...
NMW 4.243 15 In Italy, [Napoleon] sought for men and found none.
NMW 4.243 16 Good God! [Napoleon] said, how rare men are! [Napoleon] said to one of his oldest friends, Men deserve the contempt with which they inspire me.
NMW 4.245 15 Souvenirs of the period [Napoleon’s] time were raised from common soldiers to the rank of king, marshal, duke, or general:...
NMW 4.245 20 ...in the prevalence of sense and spirit over stupidity and malversation, all reasonable men have an interest;...
NMW 4.246 27 We can not, in the universal imbecility, indecision and incompetence of men, sufficiently congratulate ourselves on this strong and ready actor [Napoleon]...
NMW 4.247 4 We can not...sufficiently congratulate ourselves on this strong and ready actor [Napoleon], who...showed us how much may be accomplished by the mere force of such virtues as all men possess in less degrees;...
NMW 4.247 19 When [Napoleon] appeared it was the belief of all military men that there could be nothing new in war;...
NMW 4.247 20 ...it is the belief of men to-day that nothing new can be undertaken in politics...
NMW 4.247 27 I think all men know better than they do;...
NMW 4.248 11 What creates great difficulty, [Napoleon] remarks, in the prosecution of the land-commander, is the necessity of feeding so many men and animals.
NMW 4.250 17 To the philosophers [Napoleon] readily yielded all that was provided against religion as the work of men and time and...
NMW 4.250 23 [Bonaparte] delighted in the conversation of men of science;...
NMW 4.250 24 ...the men of letters [Bonaparte] slighted;
NMW 4.252 25 The constellation of the dull and conservative classes, the terror of the foolish old men and old women of the Roman conclaves...make [Napoleon’s] history bright and commanding.
NMW 4.253 4 ...the vain attempts of statistis to amuse and deceive him; and the instinct of the young, ardent and active men everywhere...make [Napoleon’s] history bright and commanding.
NMW 4.254 23 [Napoleon’s] theory of influence is not flattering. There are two levers for moving men,—interest and fear.
NMW 4.255 7 ...men should be firm in heart and purpose [said Napoleon], or otherwise there would have nothing to do with war and government.
NMW 4.255 18 ...[Napoleon]...rubbed his hands with joy when he had intercepted some morsel of intelligence concerning the men and women about him...
NMW 4.255 27 [Napoleon] had the habit...pulling the ears and whiskers of men...
NMW 4.256 12 ...Bonaparte represents the democrat, or the party of men of business;...

GoW 4.262 18 ...besides the universal joy of conversation, some men are born with exalted powers for this second creation. Men are born to write.
GoW 4.262 26 [The scholar] must also wish with other men to stand well with his contemporaries.
GoW 4.268 13 It is not from men excellent in any kind that disparagement of any other is to be looked for.
GoW 4.268 24 Able men do not care in what kind a man is able, so only that he is able.
GoW 4.269 3 ...men are cordial in their recognition and welcome of the intellectual accomplishments.
GoW 4.270 2 ...how can [the writer] be honored...when he must...write conventional criticism, or profligate novels, or at any rate write...without recurrence...to the sources of inspiration? Some reply to these questions may be furnished by looking over the list of men of literary genius in our age.
GoW 4.277 7 [Goethe] found that the essence of this hobgoblin [the Devil] which had hovered in shadow about the habitations of men ever since there were men, was pure intellect, applied...to the service of the senses...
GoW 4.278 18 [Goethe’s works] consist of translations, criticism, drama, lyric and every other description of poems, literary journals and portraits of distinguished men.
GoW 4.278 10 [Goethe’s Wilhelm Meister] is a very provoking book to the curiosity of young men of genius...

Men, [noun]

ET4 5.61 23 King Olaf said, When King Harold, my father, went westward to England, the chosen men in Norway followed him; but Norway was so emptied then, that such men have not since been to find in the country...

ET4 5.65 8 [The English] are bigger men than the Americans.

ET4 5.66 8 The bronze monuments of crusaders lying cross-legged in the Temple Church at London...are of the same type as the best youthful heads of men now in England;

ET4 5.69 6 The old [English] men are as red as roses...

ET4 5.70 18 Men and women [in England] walk with infatuation.

ET4 5.71 2 The more vigorous [Englishmen] run out of the island...to Africa and Australia, without any...all the game that is in nature. These men have written the game-books of all countries.

ET4 5.71 9 I suppose the dogs and horses [in England] must be thanked for the fact that the men have muscles almost as tough and supple as their own.

ET4 5.71 15 Men of animal nature rely, like animals, on their instincts.

ET4 5.72 4 Add a certain degree of refinement to the vitality of these [English] riders, and you obtain the precise quality which makes the men and women of polite society formidable.

ET5 5.89 20 A nation of laborers, every [English] man is trained to some kind of goblin men with vast power of work and skilful production...

ET5 5.89 26 ...conscious that no race of better men exists, [the English]

ET5 5.90 22 People of the same name and blood.

ET5 5.93 23 [The English] have a wealth of men to fill important posts...

ET5 5.98 8 The manners and customs of [English] society are artificial;--made-up men with made-up manners;

ET5 5.98 16 Man in England submits to be a product of political economy. On a bleak moor a mill is built...and men come in as water in a sluice-way...

ET5 5.100 17 The island [England] has produced two or three of the greatest men that ever existed...

ET5 5.100 19 Men [in England] quickly embodied what Newton found out, in Greenwich observatories...

ET6 5.102 21 I find the Englishman to be him of all men who stands firmest in his shoes.

ET6 5.103 6 Machinery has been applied to all work [in England], and carried to such perfection that little is left for the men but to mind the engine.

ET6 5.103 13 ...rule of court and shop-rule have operated [in England] to give a mechanical regularity to all the habit and action of men.

ET6 5.103 15 A terrible machine has possessed itself of the ground, the air, the men and women [in England]...

ET6 5.103 26 It requires, men say, a good constitution to travel in Spain.

ET6 5.108 13 ...as the [English] men are affectionate and true-hearted, the women inspire and refine them.

ET6 5.110 14 Wordsworth says of the small freeholders of Westmoreland, Many of these humble souls of the hills had a consciousness that the land which they tilled had for more than five hundred years been possessed by men of the same name and blood.

ET6 5.111 16 A sea-shell should be the crest of England, not only because it represents a power in the way of nature, but also the hard finish of the men.

ET6 5.115 2 ...at an English dress-dinner one meets now and then with polished men who know every thing...

ET7 5.116 20 Private men [in England] keep their promises...

ET7 5.120 26 In the power of saying rude truth...no men surpass [the English].

ET8 5.121 26 [The English] require the same adherence, thorough conviction and reality, in public men.

ET7 5.161 20 [The English] are very liable in their politics to extraordinary delusions; thus to believe...that the movement of 10 April, 1848, was urged or assisted by foreigners: which, to be sure, is paralleled by the democratic whimsey in this country which I have noticed to be shared by men sane on other points, that the English are at the bottom of the agitation of slavery...

ET8 5.130 10 [The English]...in all things very much steeped in their temperament, like men hardly awakened from deep sleep, which they enjoy.

ET8 5.132 7 The young [English] men have a rude health which runs into peccant humors.

ET8 5.134 10 ...here [in England] exists the best stock in the world...men of alopmb and reserves...

ET8 5.136 2 Great men, said Aristotle, are always of a nature originally melancholy.

ET8 5.137 26 [The English] are...curious as men sometimes please to be who do not forget a debt...

ET8 5.139 9 Even the scale of expense on which people live, and to which scholars and professional men conform, proves the tension of [English] muscle.

ET8 5.143 14 No nation was ever so rich in able men [as England];...men of such temper, that, like Baron Vere, had one seen him returning from a victory, he would by his silence have suspected that he had lost the day; and, had he beheld him in a retreat, he would have collected him a companion by the cheerfulness of his spirit.

ET8 5.144 2 King Harold gave [Haldor] this testimony, that he, among all his men, cared least about doubtful circumstances...

ET8 5.145 3[The English] nation discloses, at every turn, this prodigious indifference for private independence, and however this inclination may have been disturbed by the bribes with which their vast colonial power has warped men out of orbit, the inclination endures...

ET9 5.145 14 A much older traveller...says...[The English] think that there are no other men than themselves.

ET9 5.146 2 I suppose that all men of English blood in America, Europe or Asia, have a secret feeling of joy that they are not French natives.

ET9 5.146 18 A man’s personal defects will commonly have, with the rest of the world, precisely that importance which they have to himself. If he makes light of them, so will other men.

ET9 5.150 6 [The English] have no curiosity about foreigners, and answer any information you may volunteer with Oh, Oh! until the informant makes up his mind that they shall not relieve their ignorance, for any help he will offer. There are really no limits to this conceit, though brighter men among them make painful efforts to be candid.

ET9 5.151 20 Aesop and Montaigne, Cervantes and Saadi are men of the world...

ET10 5.153 20 [The English] do not wish to be represented except by opulent men.

ET10 5.158 21 Hargreaves invented the spinning-jenny, and died in a workhouse. Arkwright improved the invention, and the machine dispensed with the work of ninety-nine men.

ET10 5.158 23 Hargreaves invented the spinning-jenny, and died in a workhouse. Arkwright improved the invention, and...one spinner could do as much work as one hundred had done before. The loom was improved further. But the men would sometimes strike for wages and combine against the masters...

ET10 5.159 19 The power of machinery in Great Britain, in mills, has been computed to be equal to 600,000,000 men...

ET10 5.159 21 The power of machinery in Great Britain, in mills, has been computed to be equal to 600,000,000 men, one man being able by the aid of steam to do the work which required two hundred and fifty men to accomplish fifty years ago.

ET10 5.161 20 Steam has enabled men to choose what law they will live under.

ET10 5.162 16 ...old energy of the Norse race [in England] arms itself with these magnificent powers [of steam]; new men prove an overmatch for the land-owners.

ET10 5.166 14 [England’s] worthies are ever surrounded by as good men as themselves;

ET10 5.166 15 [England’s] worthies are ever surrounded by as good men as themselves; each is a captain a hundred strong, and that wealth of men is represented again in the faculty of each individual.

ET10 5.167 20 The incessant repetition of the same hard-work dwarfs the man...to make a pin-polisher, a buckle-maker, or any other specialty; and presently...whole towns are sacrificed...when cotton takes the place of linen...or when commons are enclosed by landlords. Then society is admonished...that the best political economy is care and culture of men;

ET11 5.174 27 The things these English have done were not done...without wisdom and conduct; and...were often challenged to show their right to their honors, or yield them to better men.

ET11 5.197 3 He that will be a head, let him be a bridge, said the Welsh chief Benegridran, when he carried all his men over the river on his back.

ET11 5.176 2 [French and English nobles] were looked on as men who played high for a great stake.

ET11 5.183 21 ...with such interests at stake, how can these men [English peers] afford to neglect them?

ET11 5.184 5 It was remarked, on the 10th April, 1848 (the day of the Chartist demonstration),...[that men of rank were sworn special constables with the rest].

ET11 5.185 19 The English nobles are high-spirited, active, educated men...

ET11 5.185 22 The English nobles are high-spirited, active, educated men and, when men of any ability or ambition, have been consulted in the conduct of every important action...

ET11 5.186 8 ...if [English nobility] never hear plain truth from men, they see the best of everything...

ET11 5.186 24 [The English upper classes] have...the power to command...the presence of the most accomplished men in their festive meetings.

ET11 5.187 16 On general grounds, whatever tends to form manners or to finish men, has a great value.

ET11 5.190 11 Penshurst still shines for us, and its Christmas revels, where logs not burn, but men.

ET11 5.190 20 In the roll of [English] nobles are found...men of solid virtues and of lofty sentiments;...

ET11 5.191 12 Prostitutes taken from the theatres were made duchesses, their bastard dukes and earls. The young men sat uppemost, the old served them who were out of favor.

ET11 5.192 15 They...the splendor of the titles, and the apathy of the nation; are instructive, and...make the reader pause and explore the firm bounds which [in England] confined these vices to a handful of rich men.

ET11 5.193 13 English peers who are most of worth and public spirit [in England] are overtaken and embarrassed by their vast expense, I suppose...that feeling of self-respect is driving cultivated men out of this society [of English noblemen].

ET12 5.203 3 [English nobles] were...in every species of equitation, to the most dangerous practices, and this down to the accession of William of Orange. But graver men appear to have trained their sons for civil affairs.

ET11 5.195 27 Fuller records the observation of foreigners, that Englishmen, by making their children gentlemen before they are men, cause they are so seldom wise men.

ET11 5.196 10...advantages once confined to men of family are now open to the whole middle class.

ET11 5.197 25 Whilst...the privileges of nobility are passing to the middle class [in England]...the titles of lordship are getting musty and cumbersome. I wonder that sensible men have not already impatiently of them.

ET12 5.199 20 I saw several faithful, high-minded young men [at Oxford].

ET12 5.200 2 The Oxford students' affectionate and gregarious ways reminded me...at once of the habits of our Cambridge men.

ET18 5.307 16 ...the American people do not yield better or more able men...than the English.

ET18 5.315 16 ...it was given to understand in my childhood that the British island from which my forefathers came was...a cold, foggy, mournful country, where nothing grew well in the open air but robust men and virtuous women...

ET18 5.319 14 ...four or five noted men were each reading a discourse...on the Spirit of the Times.

F 6.2 Briefly, these men or women are unable to understand that F 6.3 21 We are fired with the hope to reform men.

F 6.3 5 Great men, great nations, have not been boasters and buffoons...

F 6.3 23 Wise men feel that there is something which cannot be talked or voted away.

F 6.7 18 At Lisbon an earthquake killed men like flies.

F 6.7 23 ...the sword of the climate...at New Orleans, cut off men like a massacre.

F 6.10 18 Men are what their mothers made them.

F 6.38 20 ...Shakespear was theatre-manager and used the labor of many young men, as well as the playbooks.

F 6.43 14 The ultimate aim...the correlation by which planets subside and new men come.

F 6.45 10 ...[Englishmen’s] speech seems destined to be the universal language of men.

F 6.47 1 Personal pride is the soul of proper kind, Be so parfit as men find./ That it dot what is to come ...

F 6.46 21 ...year after year, we find two men, two women, without legal or carnal tie, spend a great part of their best time within a few feet of each other.

F 6.48 25 If we thought men were free in the sense that in a single exception one fantastical could prevail over the law of things, it was all one as if a child’s hand could pull down the sun.

Pow 6.53 4 There are men who by their sympathetic attractions carry nations with them...

Pow 6.53 9 ...if there be such a tie that wherever the mind of man goes, nature will accompany him, perhaps there are men whose magnetisms are of that force to draw material and elemental powers...

Pow 6.54 4 All successful men have agreed in one thing...--they were caustionists.

Pow 6.54 15 The most valiant men are the best believers in the tension of the laws.

Pow 6.54 23 ...the key to all ages is--Imbecility; imbecility in the vast majority of men at all times...

Pow 6.56 18 A man who knows men, can talk well on politics, trade, law, war, religion.

Pow 6.56 19 ...everywhere men are led in the same manners.

Pow 6.57 7 So a broad, healthy, massive understanding seems to lie on the shore of unseen rivers, of unseen oceans, which are covered with bars that night and day are drifted to this point. That is poured into its lap which others men lie plotting for.

Pow 6.57 27 ...in both men and women [there is] a deeper and more important sex of mind, namely the inventive or creative class of both men and women, and the uninvigoring or accepting class.

Pow 6.58 20 ...Shakespear was theatre-manager and used the labor of many young men, as well as the playbooks.

Pow 6.63 14 Men expect from good whigs put into office by the respectability of the country, much less skill to deal with Mexico...than from some strong transgressor, like Jefferson or Jackson.

Pow 6.65 4 ...churchmen and men of refinement, it seems agreed, are not fit persons to send to Congress.

Pow 6.65 7 Men in power have no opinions...

Pow 6.68 11 Men of this surcharge of arterial blood cannot live on nuts, herba, and elegies...

Pow 6.68 21 Some men cannot endure an hour of calm at sea.

Pow 6.72 7 Of the sixty thousand men making [Napoleon’s] army at Eylau, it seems some thirty thousand were thieves and burglars.

Pow 6.72 9 The men whom in peaceful community we hold if we can with iron at their legs...this man [Napoleon] dealt with hand to hand...

Pow 6.76 16 Many men are knowing, many are apprehensive and tenacious, but they do not rush to a decision.

Cour 7.250 4 There is no permanently wise man, but men capable of wisdom.

Cour 7.253 9 Self-love is, in almost all men, such an over-weight, that they are incredulous of a man’s habitual preference of the general good to his own;

Cour 7.254 1 Men admire the man who can organize their wishes and thoughts into stone and wood and steel and brass.

Cour 7.254 23 ...here is one who, seeing the wishes of men, knows how to come at their end;

Cour 7.254 26 ...here is one who, seeing the wishes of men, knows how to come at their end;...looks at all men as wax for his hands;

Cour 7.258 8 ...any man who puts his life in peril in a cause which is esteemed becomes the darling of all men.

Cour 7.256 10 ...any man who puts his life in peril in a cause which is esteemed becomes the darling of all men. The very nursery-books...the romances which delight men...may testify.

Cour 7.256 18 We have had examples of men who, for showing effective courage on a single occasion, have become a favorite spectacle to nations.

Cour 7.256 22 Men are so charmed with valor that they have pleased themselves with being called lions.

Cour 7.257 23 A large majority of men...never come to the rough experiences that make the Indian, the soldier or frontiersman self-substantive and fearless.

Cour 7.258 27 The political reigns of terror have been...a total perversion of opinion; society is upside down, and its best men are thought too bad to live.

Cour 7.259 14 ...the aggressive attitude of men who will have right done...that part, the of the leader and soul of the vigilance committee, must be taken by stout and sincere men;

Cour 7.259 19 ...the part of the leader and soul of the vigilance committee, must be taken by stout and sincere men.

Cour 7.260 14 ...the measure of our sincerity and therefore of the respect of men is the amount of health and wealth we will hazard in the defence of our right.

Cour 7.264 22 The general must stimulate the mind of his soldiers to the perception that they are men, and the enemy is no more.

Cour 7.265 4 ...men with little imagination are less fearful;

Cour 7.266 25 Undoubtedly there is...a warlike blood...does not feel itself except in a quarrel, as one sees...cats. The like vein appears in certain races of men and in individuals of every race.

Cour 7.267 1 In every school there are certain fighting boys; in every society, the contradicting men;

Cour 7.267 17 It was told of the Prince of Conde that there being no more a furious man in the world, danger in fight never disturbs him more than justice, which makes him civil, and to command in words of great obligation to his officers and men;

Cour 7.270 17 ...for a settler in a new country, one good, believing, strong-minded man is worth a hundred, nay, a thousand men without character;

Cour 7.270 18 ...the right men will give a permanent direction to the fortunes of a state.

Cour 7.270 25 [John Brown] said, As soon as I hear one of my men say, Ah, let me only get my eye on such a man, I’ll bring him down, I don’t expect much aid in the fight from that talker.

Cour 7.271 2 T is the quiet, peaceable men, the men of principle, that make the best soldiers.

Cour 7.271 4 T is still observed those men most valiant are/ Who are most/ Of good George Nidiver/ Now the tale will tell.

PC 8.209 19 Men come hither by nations.

PC 8.209 21 Men are now to be astonished by seeing acts of good nature...proposed by statesmen...

PC 8.210 21 Consider...what masters, each in his several province...the novel and powerful philanthropies, as well as...manufactures, the very inventions...have evoked!—all implying the appearance of gifted men.

PC 8.211 11 Steffens said, The religious opinions of men rest on their views of Nature.

PC 8.213 16 ...we have not on the instant better men to show than Plutarch’...heroes.

PC 8.214 6 ...if these [romantic European] works still survive and multiply, what shall we say of...names of men who have left remains that certify a height of genius...which men in proportion to their wisdom still cherish...

PC 8.215 26 ...from time to time in history, men are born a whole age too soon.

PC 8.215 27 The founders of nations, the wise men and inventors who shine afterwards as their gods, were probably martyrs in their own time.

PC 8.216 6 I think I have seen two or three great men who, for that reason, were of no account among scholars.

PC 8.217 20 If a man know the laws of Nature better than other men, his nature is a continual and inexhaustible source of power.

PC 8.218 7 If [a man] can converse better than any other, he rules the minds of men...

PC 8.218 26 ...if [a man] has imagination, he intoxicates men.

FSLN 11.227 15 [The Fugitive Slave Law] was the question...whether the Negro shall be...a piece of money? Whether this system, which is a kind of mass factory for converting men into monkeys, shall be upheld and enlarged?

FSLN 11.227 18...Mr. Webster and the country went for the application to this poor men [negroes] of quadrupled law.

FSLN 11.228 9 [Webster] did as immoral men usually do, made very low boons to the Christian Church.

FSLN 11.229 7 The way in which the country was dragged to consent to this [Fugitive Slave Law], and the disastrous defection...of the men of letters...was the darkest passage in the history.

FSLN 11.229 8 The way in which the country was dragged to consent to this [Fugitive Slave Law], and the disastrous defection...of educated men...was the darkest passage in the history.

FSLN 11.229 19...I suppose that liberty is an accurate index, in men and nations, of general progress.

FSLN 11.229 22... theory of personal liberty must always appeal...to the men of the rarest perception...

FSLN 11.230 18 The plea on which freedom was resisted was Union. I went to certain serious men, who had a little more reason than the rest, and inquired why they took this part?

FSLN 11.232 16 Events roll, millions of men are engaged, and the result is the enforcing of some of those first commandments which we heard in the nursery.

FSLN 11.234 22 Covenants are of no use without honest men to keep them.

FSLN 11.235 6 Cromwell said, We can only resist the superior training of the King’s soldiers, by enlisting godly men.

FSLN 11.238 19...when the Southerner points to the anatomy of the negro, and asks to be told what he is,—I recall Montesquieu’s remark, It will not do to say that negroes are men, lest it should turn out that whites are not.

FSLN 11.238 25...the spasm of Nature are centuries and ages, and will tax the faith of short-lived men.

FSLN 11.241 6...when one sees how fast the rot [of slavery] spreads...I think we demand of superior men that they be superior in this,—that the mind and the virtue shall give their verdict in their day.

FSLN 11.241 24 It is a potent support and ally to a brave man standing single, or with a few, for the right...to know that better men in other parts of the country approve the service.

FSLN 11.242 2...the lovers of liberty may with reason tax the coldness and indifference of scholars and literary men.

FSLN 11.244 3...Liberty is the Crusade of all brave and conscientious men.

FSLN 11.244 16...the Fugitive Slave Law did much to ungle the eyes of men.

AsSu 11.249 20 [Charles Sumner] meekly bore...the pity of the indifferent, cheered by the love and respect of good men with whom he acted;...AsSu 11.250 22...I find [Sumner] accused of publishing his opinion of the Nebraska conspiracy in a letter to the people of the United States, with discourtesy. Then, that he is an abolitionist; as if every sane human being were not...a believer that all men should be free.

AsSu 11.252 6...if our arms at this distance cannot defend [Charles Sumner] from assassins, we confide the defence of a life so precious to all honorable men and true patriots...AsSu 11.252 5...if our arms at this distance cannot defend [Charles Sumner] from assassins, we confide the defence of a life so precious...to the Almighty Maker of men.

AKan 11.254 1 And ye shall succor men;/ ’T is nobleness to serve;/...And ye shall succor men;/ ‘T is nobleness to serve;/...the lovers of liberty may with reason tax the coldness and indifference of scholars and literary men.

AKan 11.257 5 I think we are to live largely, lavishly, to these [Kansas] men.

AKan 11.260 19 Is it to be supposed that there are no men in Carolina who dissent from the popular sentiment now reigning there?

JBB 11.266 3 John Brown in Kansas settled, like a steadfast Yankee farmer,/Brave and godly, with four sons—all stalwart men of might/ JBB 11.268 8...[John Brown] is so transparent that all men see him through.

JBB 11.268 22 [John Brown] believes in two articles,—two instruments, shall I say?—the Golden Rule and the Declaration of Independence; and he used this expression in conversation here concerning them, Better that a whole generation of men, women and children should pass away by a violent death than that one word of either should be violated in this country.

JBB 11.269 1 Great wealth, great position, men of talent in the executive, on the bench,—all the forms right...

JBS 11.279 16 [In John Brown’s boyhood] was formed a romantic character...living to ideal ends, without any mixture of self-indulgence or compromise, such as lowers the value of benevolent and thoughtful men we know.

JBS 11.279 20...as happens usually to men of romantic character, [John Brown]’s fortunes were romantic.

JBS 11.280 16 I am not a little surprised at the easy effrontery with which political gentlemen, in and out of Congress, take it upon them to say that there are not a thousand men in the North who sympathize with John Brown.

JBS 11.280 27 All gentlemen, of course, are on [John Brown’s] side. I do not mean by gentlemen, people of scented hair and perfumed handkerchiefs, but men of gentle blood and generosity...

JBS 11.281 9 Nothing is more absurd than...to complain of a party of men united in opposition to slavery.

TPar 11.286 8 Theodore Parker was...a man of study...rapidly pushing his studies so far as to leave few men qualified to sit as his critics.

TPar 11.287 22 The opinions of men are organic.

TPar 11.288 27 The vice charged against America is the want of sincerity in leading men.

TPar 11.289 20...[Theodore Parker] insisted beyond all men in puppets...that the essence of Christianity is its practical morals.

TPar 11.291 3 There are men of good powers who have so much sympathy that they must be silent when they are not in sympathy.

TPar 11.292 9...you [Theodore Parker] will already be consoled in the transition to your genius, knowing well that the nature of the world will affirm to all men, in all times, that which for twenty-five years you valiantly spoke...

TPar 11.292 24 We have few such men [as Theodore Parker] to lose:...ACiv 11.297 9...now here comes this conspiracy of slavery...this stealing of men and setting them to work...

ACiv 11.298 4 All honest men are daily striving to earn their bread by their industry.

ACiv 11.302 14 We want men of original perception and original action...

ACiv 11.307 2...no doubt, there will be discreet men from that section [the South] who will earnestly strive to inaugurate more moderate and fair administration of the government.

ACiv 11.308 8 Men require themselves very fast to a bold and good measure when once it is taken...

ACiv 11.310 7...ideas must work through the brains and the arms of good and brave men...

EPro 11.319 8...all men of African descent who have faculty enough to find their way to our lines are assured of the protection of American law.

EPro 11.322 16...this taxation, which makes the land wholesome and habitable, and will draw all men unto it, is the best investment in which property-holder ever lodged his earnings.

Alin 11.328 27 Here [in Lincoln] was a type of the true elder race. / And one of Plutarch’s men talked with us face to face./ Lowell, Commemoration Ode.

Alin 11.329 3 We meet under the gloom of a calamity [death of Lincoln] which darkens down over the minds of good men in all civil society...

Alin 11.330 2 [Lincoln] was the most active and hopeful of men;...Alin 11.331 4...men naturally talked of [Lincoln]’s chances in politics as incalculable.

Alin 11.332 2 In a host of young men that start together and promise so many brilliant leaders for the next age, each fails on trial;...Alin 11.336 6...who does not see, even in this tragedy [death of Lincoln] so recent, how fast the terror and ruin of the massacre are already burning into glory around the victim? Far happier this fate than...to have seen mean men preferred.

Alin 11.336 9 Had [Lincoln] not lived long enough to keep the greatest promise that ever man made to his fellow men,—the practical abolition of slavery!

HCom 11.339 8 These boys we talk about like ancient sage! Are the same men we read of in old pages—/ The bronze recast of dead heroic ages!/

HCom 11.342 15 [The war] charged with power, peaceful, amiable men...HCom 11.342 22 It is easy to recall the mood in which our young men went to the war.

HCom 11.344 10 A single company in the Forty-fourth Massachusetts Regiment contained thirty-five sons of Harvard. You all know as well as I the story of these dedicated men...

HCom 11.344 16 These [Harvard] men...were always in the front and always employed.

HCom 11.345 3 We shall not again disapparge America, now that we have seen what men it will bear.

HCom 11.345 7 We see...a new era...worth to the world the lives of all this generation of American men, if they had been demanded.

SMC 11.347 1 They have shown what men may do./ They have proved how men may die,—/ Count, who can, the fields they have pressed,/ Each face to the solemn sky! Brownell.

SMC 11.347 2 They have shown what men may do./ They have proved how men may die,—/ Count, who can, the fields they have pressed./ Each face to the solemn sky! Brownell.

SMC 11.348 23...manhood is the one immortal thing/ Beneath Time’s changeful sky./ And, where it lightened once, from age to age./ Men come to learn, in grateful pilgrimage./ That length of days is knowing when to face to the solemn sky! Brownell.

SMC 11.353 6 A thunder-storm at sea sometimes reverses the magnets in the ship, and south is north. The storm of war works the like miracle on men.

SMC 11.354 24 The opinions of masses of men...the [Civil] war discovered...

SMC 11.356 22 On the second of July [the Thirty-second Regiment] had to cross the open wheat-field, under fire from the rebels in front and on both flanks. Seventy men were killed or wounded out of seven companies.

SMC 11.356 10 The Colonel [George Prescott] took evident pleasure in the fact that he could account for all his men.

SMC 11.371 7 After Gettysburg, the Thirty-second Regiment saw hard service—crossing the Rapidan, and suffering from such extreme cold, a few days later, at Mine Run, that the men were compelled to break rank and run in circles.

SMC 11.371 17 June fourth is marked in [George Prescott's] diary as An awful day;—two hundred men lost to the command;

SMC 11.372 19 June fourth is marked in [George Prescott's] diary as An awful day;—two hundred men lost to the command; and not until the fifth of August comes at last a respite for a short space, during which the men drew shoes and socks.

SMC 11.373 18 One of [George Prescott's] townsmen and comrades...uses these words: He was one of the few men who fight for principle.

SMC 11.375 7 I hope the disuse of such medals or badges in this country only signifies that everybody knows these men [veterans of the Civil War]...

Milt1 12.276 6 Shall we say that in our admiration and joy in these wonderful poems [of Homer and Shakespeare] we have even a feeling of regret that the men knew not what they did...

Milt1 12.279 4 ...are not all men fortified by the remembrance of the bravery...of this man [Milton]...

ACri 12.287 9 ...all able men have known how to import the petulance of the street into correct discourse.

ACri 12.288 11 ...some men smear with genius.

ACri 12.288 16 ...some men smear with genius. I knew a poet in whose talent Nature carried this freak so far that his only graceful verses were pretty blasphemies. The better the worse, you will say; and I own it reminds one of Vathek’s collection of monstrous men with humps of a picturesque peac.

ACri 12.289 3 We were educated in horror of Satan, but Goethe remarked that all men like to hear him named.

ACri 12.289 22 Goethe, who had collected all the diabolical hints in men and men’s customs, or traits from the great spirit of Wagner, continued the horror of collecting such hovers after this first occasion had passed.

ACri 12.299 9 ...[in Carlyle’s History of Frederick II] we see the eyes of the writer looking into ours, whilst he is...superficially apparent and only...were, had and did...

ACri 12.299 12 ...[Carlyle’s History of Frederick II is] withal a book that is a judgment-day for its moral verdict on the men and nations and manners of modern times.

ACri 12.299 19 ...the secret interior wits and hearts of men take note of [Carlyle’s History of Frederick II].

MLit 12.303 2 ...this is the ball that is tossed...in the history of every mind by sovereignty of thought to make facts and men obey our present humor or belief.

MLit 12.310 26 ...[the library of the Present Age] vents...books for which men and women peak and pine...

MLit 12.314 24 ...small and...handsome, by the hand...furnished us we must always to themselves.

MLit 12.317 9 ...the street seems to be built, and the men and women in it moving, not in reference to pure and grand ends, but rather to very short and sordid ones.

MLit 12.317 19 There are facts on which men of the world superciliously smile, which are worth all their trade and politics.

MLit 12.317 21 There are facts...which drive young men into gardens and solitary places.

MLit 12.322 10 ...of all men he who has united in himself...the tendencies of the era, is the German poet, naturalist and philosopher, Goethe.

MLit 12.322 24 ...a thousand men seemed to look through [Goethe’s] eyes.

MLit 12.322 25 [Goethe] learned as readily as other men breathe.

MLit 12.322 26 Of all the men of this time, not one has seemed so much at home in it as [Goethe].

MLit 12.327 12 In these days and in this country...where men read easy books and sleep after dinner, it seems as if no book could so safely be put in the hands of young men as the letters of Goethe, which attest the incessant activity of this man...

MLit 12.327 15 In these days and in this country...it seems as if no book could so safely be put in the hands of young men as the letters of Goethe, which attest the incessant activity of this man.

MLit 12.329 12 ...that we do not seem to dodge the question which all men ask...let us honestly record our thought upon the total worth and influence of this genius [Goethe].

MLit 12.329 1 All great men have written proudly.

MLit 12.343 20 We can fancy [Goethe] saying to himself: There are poets enough of the Ideal; let me paint the Actual, as, after years of dreams, it will still appear and reappear to wise men.

MLit 12.345 15 [We can fancy Goethe saying to himself] I have given my characters [in Wilhelm Meister] a bias to error. Men have the same.

MLit 12.340 17 I find there [in Wilhelm Meister] actual men and women even too faithfully painted.

MLit 12.339 10 When one of these grand monads is incarnated whom Nature seems to design for eternal men and draw to her bosom, we think that the old weariness of Europe and Asia, the trivial forms of daily life will now end.

MLit 12.333 25 ...all the hints of omnipresence and energy which we have caught, this man [the poet] should unfold, and constitute facts. And this is the insatiable craving which alternately saddens and gladdens men at this day.

MLit 12.336 1 [The Genius of the time] will describe...the now unbelieved day.

ACri 12.299 9 ...Carlyle’s History of Frederick II...is...to describe...the now unbelieved day.

MLit 12.323 18 Versatility of talent in men of undoubted ability always awakens the liveliest interest...

MLit 12.227 19 ...not only was this discoverer of Beauty [Michelangelo], and its teacher among men, rooted and grounded in those severe laws of practical skill, which genius can never teach...but he was one of the most industrious men that ever lived.

MLit 12.227 23 ...[Michelangelo] was one of the most industrious men that ever lived.

MLit 12.232 21 ...such was [Michelangelo’s] own mastery that men said, the marble was flexible in his hands.

MLit 12.233 16 ...let no man suppose...that this profound soul [Michelangelo]...be held in the chains of superficial beauty. To him, of all men, it was transparent.

MLit 12.235 1 When the Pope suggested to him that the [Sistine] chapel would be enriched if the figures were ornamented with gold, Michael Angelo replied...the characters I have painted were...holy men, with whom gold was an object of contempt.

MLit 12.238 18 Michael Angelo was of that class of men who are too superior to the multitude around them to command a full and perfect sympathy.

MLit 12.238 23 It has been the defect of some great men that they did not duly appreciate or did not confess the talents and virtues of others...

MLit 12.253 14 ...[Milton]...occupies a more imposing place in the mind of all men, in the power to inspire.

MLit 12.253 16 ...[Milton]...stands foremost of all men in literary history, and so (shall we not say?) of all the possessors of the power he...in the possession of the power in his inspiration.

MLit 12.252 4 ...[Milton]...occupies a more imposing place in the mind of men at this hour than ever before.

MLit 12.253 11 It is the prerogative of this great man [Milton] to stand at this hour foremost of all men in literary history...

MLit 12.253 16 It is the prerogative of this great man [Milton] to stand at this hour foremost of all men in literary history, and so (shall we not say?) of all the possessors of the power in his inspiration.

MLit 12.254 1 Milton stands erect...still visible as a man among men...

MLit 12.260 19 The world, no doubt, contains many of that class of men whom Wordsworth denominates silent poets...

MLit 12.262 17 [Milton] is rightly dear to mankind, because in him, among so many perverse and partial men of genius,—in him humanity rights itself...

MLit 12.264 25 In like spirit, [Milton] replies to the suspicious calumny respecting his morning haunts. Those morning haunts are where they should be, at home...up and stirring, in winter, often ere the sound of any bell awake men to labor or devotion...

MLit 12.266 5 Few men could be cited who have so well understood what is peculiar to the Christian ethics [as Milton], and the precise aid it has brought to men, in being an emphatic affirmation of the omnipotence of spiritual laws...

MLit 12.270 6 [Milton] told the Parliament that the imputations of Lambeth House had been written in Latin, which was the language of men ever famous and foremost in the achievements of liberty, will not easily find servile letters enow to spell such a dictatory presumption.

MAnl 12.223  1  Seeing these works [of art], we appreciate the taste which led Michael Angelo...to cover the walls of churches with unclothed figures...

MAnl 12.223  13  ...it is an essential fact in the history of Michael Angelo that his love of beauty is made solid and perfect by his deep understanding of the mechanics of art.

MAnl 12.224  3  When the Florentines united themselves with Venice, England and France, to oppose the power of the Emperor Charles V., Michael Angelo was appointed Military Architett and Engineer, to superintend the erection of the necessary works.

MAnl 12.224  15  On the 24th of October, 1529, the Prince of Orange, general of Charles V., encamped on the hills surrounding the city [Florence], and his first operation was to throw up a rampart to storm the bastion of San Miniato. His design was frustrated by the providence of Michael Angelo.

MAnl 12.224  15  Michael Angelo called himself under such circumstances the true architect; but distrusted his capacity as an architect, at first refused [to build the bastion]...

MAnl 12.225  15  Michael Angelo is represented as having ordered his servants, that person remarked that Michael [Angelo] might well grieve that one who was incessant in his creative labors should have no restoration.

Edc1 10.134 7 Is not the Vast an element of the mind?

Edc1 10.135 11 [The great object of Education] should be a moral one...to acquaint [the youthful man] with the resources of his mind...to reveal to him the secret of the new things in nature, and to teach him the use of these new things in the business of life.

Edc1 10.137 1 Nature, when she sends a new mind into the world, fills it with the traditions that NP tells him, and planting with it in the receiving mind a fury to impart it.

Edc1 10.142 9 Nature provided for the communication of thought, by planting with it in the receiving mind a fury to impart it.

Edc1 10.149 7 Happy the natural college thus self-instituted around every natural teacher; the young men of Athens around Socrates...in short the whole natural sphere of every leading mind.

Edc1 10.150 27 Every man should be enabled to make his own statement in action.

SIHr 10.440 23 The strength and the beauty of the man [Samuel Hoar] lay in the natural goodness and justice of his mind.

SIHr 10.45 23 [Samuel Hoar] retained to the last the earnestness of his tall but slender form, and not the full strength of his mind.

SIHr 10.443 25 Such was, in old age, the beauty of [Samuel Hoar's] person and carriage, as if the mind radiated, and made the same impression of probability on all beholders.

SIHr 10.444 24 Mr. Hoar was distinguished in his profession by the grasp of his mind...

SIHr 10.445 18 The useful and practical super-abounded in [Samuel Hoar's] mind.

SIHr 10.446 2 ...so entirely was [Samuel Hoar's] respect to the ground-plan and substructure of society a natural ability, and from the order of his mind...that it was admirable...

SIHr 10.447 2 ...the farmers greeted [Samuel] Hoar as one of themselves, while he, paid homage to his powers of mind and to his virtues.

SIHr 10.448 4 There was no elegance in [Samuel Hoar's] reading or tastes beyond the crystal clearness of his mind.

Thor 10.461 16 [Thoreau's] senses were acute...his hands strong and skilful in the use of tools. And there was a wonderful fitness of body and mind.

Thor 10.462 2 ...the relation of body to mind...[Thoreau] was still finer than we have indicated.

Thor 10.463 17 [Thoreau] said...Nature knows very well what sounds are worth attending to, and has made up her mind not to hear the railroad-whistle.

Thor 10.463 18 [Thoreau said]...Nature knows very well what sounds are worth attending to, and has made up her mind not to hear the railroad-whistle. But things respect the devout mind, and a mental ecstasy was never interrupted.

Thor 10.471 6 [Thoreau's] interest in the flower or the bird lay very deep...in his mind.

Thor 10.471 11 [Thoreau] would not offer a memoir of his observations to the Natural History Society. Why should it? To detach the description from its connections in my mind would make it no longer true or valuable to me...

Thor 10.471 20 ...none knew better than [Thoreau] that it is not the fact that impresses...but the impression on the fact of yesterday.

Thor 10.471 21 Every fact lay in glory in [Thoreau's] mind...

Thor 10.476 2 [Thoreau]...likened to throw every thought into a symbol. The fact you tell is of no value, but only the impression. For this reason his valuable, but the impression of the fact on your mind.

Thor 10.478 15 [Thoreau] thought that without religion or devotion of some kind nothing great was ever accomplished: and he thought that the biggest sectarian had better bear this in mind.

Carl 10.493 8 If a Tory takes heart at [Carlyle's] hatred of stump-ornatory and model republics, he repels, Yes, the idea of a pig-headed soldier who will obey orders, and fire on his own father at the command of his officer, is a great comfort to the aristocratic mind.

Carl 10.496 12 Wellington [Carllye] respects...as having made up his mind...on this subject, and to have with any kind of mind...

GST 10.507 19 ...there is to my mind somewhat so absolute in the action of a good man that we do not, in thinking of him, so much as make any question of the future.

LS 11.2 7 ...The word by seers or sibyls told...In groves of oak, or fanes of gold...Still upon the morning wind. Still whispers to the willing mind/

LS 11.6 22 I have only brought these accounts [of the Last Supper] together so that you may judge whether it is likely that a solemn act, which would have been established...in a manner so slight, that the intention of commemorating it should not appear...to have...dwelt in the mind of the only two among the twelve who wrote down what happened.

LS 11.7 28 With presuming to fix precisely the purpose in the mind of Jesus, you will see that many opinions may be entertained of his intention, all consistent with the opinion that he did not design a perpetual ordinance [in the Lord's Supper].

LS 11.8 22 ...many persons are apt to imagine that the very striking and personal manner in which the eating and drinking [at the Last Supper] is described, indicates a striking and formal purpose to found a festival. And I admit that this impression might probably be left upon the mind of one who read only the passages under consideration in the New Testament.

LS 11.14 27 ...[St. Paul's] mind had not escaped the prevalent error of the primitive Church, the belief, namely, that the second coming of Christ would shortly occur.

LS 11.17 22 [The Lord’s Supper] is an expression of gratitude to Christ, enjoined by Christ. There is an endeavor to keep Jesus in mind, whilst yet the prayers are addressed to God.

LS 11.17 26 I fear it is the effect of this ordinance [the Lord’s Supper] to clothe Jesus with an authority which he never claimed and which distracts the mind of the worshipper.

LS 11.18 3 ...I believe the human mind can admit but one God...

LS 11.18 14 I appeal, brethren, to your individual experience. In the mysterious act which you make, that do you, not in the very act, necessarily exclude all other beings from your thought? In that act...Jesus is no more present to your mind than your brother or your child.

LS 11.19 23 If I believed [the Lord’s Supper] was enjoined by Jesus on his disciples, and that he even contemplated making permanent this mode of commemoration, every way agreeable to an Eastern mind, and yet on trial it was disagreeable to my own feelings, I should not adopt it.

LS 11.21 16 What I revere and obey in [Christianity] is its reality...the rest is done to the mind...

HDC 11.35 27 ...the pilgrims had the preparation of an armed mind...

LVB 11.88 2 Say, what is honour? "It is the finest sense/ Of justice which the human mind can frame!"

LVB 11.92 23 Sir [Van Buren], does this government think that the people of the United States are become savage and mad? From their mind are the sentiments of love and a good nature wiped clean out?

LVB 11.95 15 ...a letter addressed as mine is [to Van Buren], and suggesting to the Executive the plain obligations of man, has a burthen character in his eyes...do you not, in the very act, necessarily exclude all other beings from your thought? In that act...Jesus is no more present to your mind than your brother or your child.

War 11.152 4 ...in the infancy of society...when hunger, thirst, ague and frozen limbs universally take precedence of the wants of the mind and the heart...the necessities of the strong will certainly be satisfied at the cost of the weak...

War 11.163 27 ...always we are daunted by the appearances; not seeing that their whole value lies at bottom in the state of mind.

War 11.164 7 Observe how every error, every truth, every precept, every comparison and every error, each a thought of some man’s mind...clothes itself with societies, houses, cities...

War 11.166 27 At a certain stage of his progress, the man fights, if he be of sound body and mind.

War 11.167 14 Since the peace question has been before the public mind, those who affirm its right and expediency have naturally been met with objections more or less weighty.

War 11.170 2 The question naturally arises, How is this new aspiration of the human mind [towards peace] to be made yiseful to the world?

War 11.171 11 [peace] is to hear the voice of God, which bids the devils that have rendered and torn [the man] come out of him and let him now be clothed and walk forth in his right mind.

War 11.175 7 ...the mind, once prepared for the reign of principles, will easily find modes of expressing its will.

FSLC 11.183 21 I question the value of our civilization, when I see that the public mind had never less hold of the strongest of all truths.

FSLC 11.184 16 The levity of the public mind has been shown in the past year by the most extravagant actions.

FSLC 11.185 8 Because of this preoccupied mind, the whole wealth and power of Boston...are thrown into the scale of crime...

FSLC 11.199 13 There is not a man of thought or of feeling but is conscious of the mind that once by some means will have been completely lured.

FSLC 11.204 19 [Webster] praises Adams and Jefferson, but it is a past Adams and Jefferson that his mind can entertain.

FSLC 11.205 6 The scraps of morality to be gleaned from [Webster's] speeches are reflections of the mind of others...

Koss 11.400 15 ...I speak the sense not only of every generous American, but the law of mind, when I say that it is not those who live idly in the city called after his name, but those who...think and act like him, who can claim to explain the sentiment of Washington.

Wom 11.405 3 Among those movements which seem to be, now and then, endemic in the public mind...is that which has urged on society the benefits of action having for its object a benefit to the position of Woman.

PLT 12.12 27 ...just in proportion to the activity of thoughts on the study of philosophy, the student shall learn to appreciate the miracle of the mind;...and this disclosure that the mind as it opens, the mind as it shall be, comprehends and works thus...

PLT 12.6 13 The armies mustered in the North were as much missionaries to the mind of the country as they were carriers of material force.

NHI 12.1 4 Bacon's perfect mode of inquiry after truth was that...nothing should take place as evidence in life which did not also exist as truth in the mind.

PLT 12.24 21 In all sciences the student is discovering that Nature...is always working...after the laws of the human mind.

PLT 12.24 23 Every creation...is on the method and by the means which our mind approves as soon as it is thoroughly acquaintance with the facts...

PLT 12.5 1 ...[science] adopts the method of the universe as fast as it appears; and this disclosure of the mind as it opens, the mind as it shall be, comprehends and works thus...

PLT 12.5 21 Every object in Nature is a word to signify some fact in the mind.

PLT 12.6 13 My belief in the use of a course of philosophy is that the student shall learn to appreciate the miracle of the mind...

PLT 12.7 7 ...these questions which really interest men, how few can answer. Here are learned faculties of law and divinity, but would questions like these come into mind when I see them?

PLT 12.8 24 ...was there ever prophet burdened with a message to his people who did not cloud our gratitude by a strange confounding in his own mind of private folly with his public wisdom?

PLT 12.11 22 I cannot myself use that systematic form which is reckoned essential in treating the science of the mind.

PLT 12.12 27 ...just in proportion to the activity of thoughts on the study of outward objects...in that proportion the faculties of the mind had a healthy growth.

PLT 12.13 2 ...just in proportion to the activity of thoughts on the study of outward objects...in that proportion the faculties of the mind had a healthy growth; but a study in the opposite direction had a damaging effect on the mind.

PLT 12.14 8 ...this watching of the mind, in season and out of season...is a little of the detective.

PLT 12.17 4 ...the metaphysician, dealing as it were with the mathematics of the mind, puts himself out of the way of inspiration;...and I add a rude list of some by-laws of the mind.

Bost 12.192 27 ...in that time [of the settlement of Massachusetts],...a certain degree of terror still clouded the idea of God in the mind of the pure.

Bost 12.193 2 The divine will descends into the barbarous mind in some strange disguise...

Bost 12.198 15 No external advantages...can bestow that delicacy and gracer of bearing which belong only to a mind accustomed to celestial conversation.

Bost 12.206 18 ...here [in Boston] was...a living mind agitating the mass...

Bost 12.208 20 ...the genius of Boston is seen in her real independence, productive power and northern acuteness of mind.

MANG1 12.213 5 Never did sculptor’s dream unfold! / A form which marble doth not hold! / In its white block; yet it therein shall find! / Only the hand secure and bold! / Which still obeys the mind! / Michael Angelo’s Sonnets.

MANG1 12.215 9 ...so true was [Michelangelo] to the laws of the human mind...that his character and his works...seem rather a part of Nature than arbitrary productions of the human will.

MANG1 12.217 13 Can this charming element [Beauty] be so abstracted by the human mind as to become a distinct and permanent object?

MANG1 12.228 1 The midnight battles, the forced marches, the winter campaigns of Julius Caesar or Charles XII do not indicate greater strength of body or of mind [than Michelangelo’s].

MANG1 12.232 20 He alone, [Michelangelo] said, is an artist whose hands cultivated in execute what his mind has conceived;

MANG1 12.236 12 The combined desire to fulfill, in everlasting stone, the conceptions of his mind, and to complete his worthy offering to Almighty God, sustained [Michelangelo] through numberless vexations with unbroken spirit.

MANG1 12.242 2 At the age of eighty years, [Michelangelo] wrote to Vasari...and tells him...that...no fancy arose in his mind but death was sculptured on it.

Milt 12.248 2 [New criticism] implied merit [in Milton] indisputable and illustrious; yet so near to the modern mind as to be still alive and life-giving.

Milt 12.249 22 ...the piece [a tract by Milton] shows all the rambles and resources of indignation, but he has never integrated the parts of the argument in his mind.

Milt 12.252 3 ...[Milton]...occupies a more imposing place in the mind of men at this hour than ever before.

Milt 12.253 20 ...no man can be named whose mind still acts on the cultivated intellect of England and America with an energy comparable to that of Milton.

Milt 12.254 10 [Milton] is identified in the mind with all select and holy inspirations of modern times.

Milt 12.256 25 Perfections of body and of mind are attributed to [Milton] by his biographers...

Milt 12.260 12 At nineteen years...[Milton] addresses his native language, saying to it that it would be his choice to leave trifles for a grave argument....Such where the deep transported mind may soot! Above the wheeling poles, and at Heaven’s door! Look in, and see each blissful deity! / How he before the thunderous throne doth lie./

Milt 12.267 17 Michael Angelo calls him alone an artist, whose hands can execute to what his mind has conceived;

Milt 12.269 22 ...Milton’s mind seems to have no thought or emotion which refused to be recorded.

Milt 12.262 5 ...[Milton] said...whose mind soever is fully possessed with a wild desire to know good things, and with the dearest charity to infuse the knowledge of them into others, when such a man would speak, his words...trip about him at command...

Milt 12.264 4 ...[Milton] declares that a certain niceness of nature, an honeyed sweetness and self-esteem...and a modesty, kept me still above those low descents of mind beneath which he must deport and plunge himself that can agree to such degradation.

Milt 12.266 4 His mind gave him, [Milton] said, that every free and gentle spirit, without that oath of charity, ought to be born a knight.

Milt 12.265 6 In like spirit, [Milton] replies to the suspicious calumny respecting his morning haunts. Those morning haunts are where he should be, at home...up and stirring...with useful and generous labors preparing for the body health and hardness, to render lightsome, clear and not lumphous obedience to the mind.

Milt 12.266 12 The indifferency of a wise mind to what is called high and low, and the fact that true greatness is a perfect humility, are revelations of Christianity which Milton well understood.

Milt 12.269 1 [Milton’s] birth fell upon the agitated years when the discontent of the English Puritans was fast drawing to a head against the tyranny of the Stuarts. No period has surpassed that in the general activity of soul.

Milt 12.271 4 Toland tells us...[Milton] used to tell those about him the entire satisfaction of his mind that he had constantly employed his strength and faculties in the defence of liberty.

Milt 12.276 5 [Milton] was an apostle of freedom;...yet in his own mind discriminated from savage license...

Milt 12.279 26 [Milton] maintained the doctrine of domestic liberty, or the liberty of divorce, on the ground that unfit disposition of mind was a better reason for the act of divorce than infirmity of body...

Milt 12.272 25 ...in Paradise Regained, we have the most distinct marks of the progress of the poet’s mind...
