HDC 11.52 12 Tahattawan, our Concord sachem, called his Indians together, and bid them not oppose the courses which the English were taking, for their good; for, said he, all the time you have lived after the Indian fashion, under the power of the higher sachems, what did they care for you?

HDC 11.59 4...when [King Philip] he was told that his sentence was death, he said he liked it well that he was to die before his heart was soft...

HDC 11.59 20 A nameless Wampanoag who was put to death by the Mohicans, after cruel tortures, was asked by his butchers, during the torture, how he liked the war?—he said, found it as sweet as sugar to Englishmen.

HDC 11.61 10...the mantle of [Peter Bulkeley's] piety and of the people's affection fell upon his son Edward, the fame of whose prayers, it is said, once saved Concord from an attack of the Indian.

HDC 11.66 23 The ninth allegation [against Daniel Bliss] is That in praying for himself...he said, he was a poor vile worm of the dust, that was allowed as Mediator between God and his people.

HDC 11.72 18 It is said that all the services of that day [March 13, 1775] made an impression on the people of Concord...

HDC 11.77 17...[William Emerson]...is said to have deeply inspired many of his people with his own enthusiasm [for the Revolution].

EWI 11.100 7 The subject [emancipation] is said to have the property of making men eternal.

EWI 11.100 18...[the opponent of slavery] feels that none but a stupid or a malignant person can hesitate on a view of the facts. Under such an impulse...I had almost said, Creep into your grave, the universe has no need of you!

EWI 11.104 2 We sympathize very tenderly here with the poor aggrieved [West Indian] planter, of whom so many unpleasant things are said;....

EWI 11.113 25 The apprenticeship system [in the West Indies] is understood to have proceeded from Lord Brougham, and was by him urged on his colleagues, who, it is said, were inclined to the policy of immediate emancipation.

EWI 11.122 1 I said, this event [emancipation in the West Indies] is a signal in the history of civilization.

EWI 11.125 22 Many planters have said, since the emancipation [in the West Indies], that, before that day, they were the greatest slaves on the estates.

EWI 11.135 20 [Emancipation in the West Indies] was the master's revolt from their mastery. The slave-holder said, I will not hold slaves.

EWI 11.136 61 was a slave, said the counsel of [George] Somerset, speaking for his client, for I was in America....

EWI 11.140 20 In the case of the ship Zong, in 1781, whose master had thrown one hundred and thirty-two slaves into the sea...the first jury gave a verdict in favor of the master and owners: they had a right to do what they had done. Lord Mansfield is reported to have said on the bench, The matter left to the jury is...Was it from necessity?

EWI 11.142 2 I have said that this event [emancipation in the West Indies] interests us because it came mainly from the concession of the whites;....

EWI 11.147 8 There have been moments, I said, when men might be forgiven for doing what they ought not do (emancipation).

War 11.156 21...Fontenelle expressed a volume of meaning when he said, I hate war, for it spoils conversation.

War 11.157 12...all history is the picture of war, as we have said....

War 11.157 19...[Assacombuit] appeared at court, he lifted up his...and said, this Hand has slain a hundred and fifty of your majesty's enemies within the territories of New England.

War 11.167 21...chiefly it is said,—Either accept [John Brown's] own account of the...or else...give up the principle...

JBB 11.266 22...Old Brown,/ Osawatome Brown./ Said, Boys, the Lord will aid us! and he shoved his ramrod down./ Edmund Clarence Stedman, John Brown.

JBB 11.267 3 Gentlemen who have preceded me have well said that no wall of separation could here exist.

JBB 11.270 21 Said John Brown was an idealist.

JBB 11.270 23...[John Brown] said he did not believe in moral suasion, he believed in putting the thing through.

JBS 11.277 7 Everything that is said of [John Brown] leaves people a little dissatisfied;....

JBS 11.277 21 [John Brown] said that he loved rough play...I incline to accept [John Brown’s] own account of the matter at Charlestown, which makes the date a little older, when he said, This was all settled millions of years before the world was made.

TPar 11.289 15 [Theodore Parker] was capable, it must be said, of the most unparalleled eloquence on those he esteemed...

TPar 11.292 2...every sound heart loves a responsible person, one who...says one thing...always...because he sees that, whether he speak or refrain from speech, this is said over him;....

ACiv 11.300 5 A democratic statesman said to me, long since, that, if he believed in putting the thing through, his friends came to Washington to a duel by one of these [Southern] madcaps, his friends came forward with prompt good sense and said such a thing was not to be thought of;....

AsSu 11.248 2 ...for evil word shall evil word be said,/ For murder-shout you must prefer it to the cannon.

FSLC 11.180 22 In Boston, we have said with such lofty confidence, no fugitive slave can be arrested;....

FSLC 11.182 9 Just now a friend came into my house and said, If this [Fugitive Slave] law shall be repealed I shall be glad that I have lived; if not I shall be sorry that I was born.

FSLC 11.182 27 [The crisis over the Fugitive Slave Law]...showed that men are not sick, as they had said.

FSLC 11.191 16 Lord Mansfield...said, I care not for the supposed dicta of judges, however eminent, if they be contrary to all principle.

FSLC 11.192 5 Sire, said the brave Orte, governor of Bayonne, in his....

FSLC 11.205 6...one would have said that a Christian would not keep slaves;—but Christians keep slaves.

FSLC 11.228 2 Burke said he would pardon something to the spirit of liberty.

FSLC 11.228 13...when allusion was made to the question of duty and the sanctity of life and morality, [Webster] very frankly said...Some higher law, something existing somewhere between here and the third heaven,—I do not know where.

FSLC 11.228 19 I said I had never in my life up to this time suffered from the judicial investigation.

FSLC 11.234 8...one would have said that a Christian would not keep slaves;—but Christians keep slaves.

FSLC 11.235 4 Cromwell said, We can only resist the superior training of the King’s soldiers, by enlisting godly men.

ACiv 11.301 6 The petulance of Charles Stanhope, said to me, I have found there only good inhabitants and warriors in the garrison, and I have found there only good Christians, and brave soldiers; not one hangman...

ACiv 11.306 21 Better than happiness and security of life is attainable.

JBB 11.267 22 [John Brown] said that he loved rough play...I incline to accept [John Brown’s] own account of the matter at Charlestown, which makes the date a little older, when he said, This was all settled millions of years before the world was made.

HCom 11.343 11 A single company in the Forty-fourth Massachusetts Regiment contained thirty-five sons of Harvard. You all know as well as I the story of these dedicated men...whose fathers and mothers said of each slaughtered son, We gave him up when he enlisted.

SMC 11.365 2 [George Prescott writes] The major had tried to discourage me;—said, perhaps, if I carried [tent-poles] over, some other company would get them.

SMC 11.370 25 Being informed that he misunderstood the order, which was only to inform him how to retire when it became necessary, [George Prescott] was satisfied, and he and his command held their ground manfully. It was said that Colonel Prescott’s reply, when reported, pleased the Acting-Brigadier-General Sweitzer mightily.

NMW 4.238 15 Before he fought a battle, Bonaparte thought...a great deal about what he should do in case of a reverse of fortune. The same prudence and good sense marked all his behavior.

NMW 4.238 24 It was a whimsical economy of the same kind which dictated [Bonaparte's] practice, when general in Italy, in regard to his burdensome correspondence.

NMW 4.253 13 ...is that the fatal quality which we discover in our pursuit of...it was bought by the breaking or weakening of the sentiments; and it is inevitable that we should find the same fact in the history of this champion [Napoleon].

NMW 4.258 16 It was...the eternal law of man and of the world which bakshied and ruined [Napoleon]; and the result, in a million experiments, will be the same.

GoW 4.265 7 Society has, at all times, the same want...

GoW 4.269 16 There have been times when [the writer] was a sacred person...Every word was carved before his eyes into the earth and the sky; and the sun and stars were only letters of the same purport and of no more necessity.

GoW 4.276 15 Goethe would have no word that does not cover a thing. The same measure will still serve the Devil.

GoW 4.281 19 If [the writer] can not rightly express himself to-day, the same things will subtend and will open themselves to-morrow.

GoW 4.287 3 [Goethe's] Daily and Yearly Journal...and the historical part of the Theory of Colors, have the same difficulty in making a social or moral estimate of England, that the sheriff finds in drawing a jury to try some cause which has agitated the whole community.

ET1 5.6 8 ...[Grenoueh] thought art would never prosper until we left our shy jealous ways and worked in society as [the Greeks]. All his thoughts breathed the same generosity.

ET1 5.6 17 I have a private letter from [Grenoueh],--later, but respecting the same period...

ET1 5.9 4 Landor despised entomology, yet, in the same breath, said, the sublime was in a grain of dust.

ET1 5.14 15 ...find it impossible to recall the largest part of [Coleridge's] name, which was often like so many printed paragraphs in his book.,--perhaps the same...

ET2 5.25 4 The occasion of my second visit to England was an invitation from some Mechanics' Institutes in Lancashire and Yorkshire, which separately are organized much in the same way as our New England Lyceums...

ET2 5.32 27 When their privilege was disputed by the Dutch and other junior marines, on the plea that you could never anchor on the same wave...the English did not stick to claim the channel, or the bottom of all the main...

ET3 5.36 19 ...we have the same difficulty in making a social or moral estimate of England, that the sheriff finds in drawing a jury to try some cause which has agitated the whole community.

ET3 5.40 22 I have seen a kratometric chart designed to show that the city of Philadelphia was in the same thermic belt, and by inference in the same belt of empire, as the cities of Athens, Rome and London.

ET3 5.40 23 I have seen a thermic chart designed to show that the city of Philadelphia was in the same thermic belt, and by inference in the same belt of empire, as the cities of Athens, Rome and London.

ET4 5.45 4 The British Empire is reckoned to contain (in 1848)...perhaps forty of these millions are of British stock. Add the United States of America, which reckon (in the same year), exclusive of slaves, 20,000,000...and you have a population of English descent and language of 60,000,000...

ET4 5.46 23 We anticipate in the doctrine of race something like that law of physiology that whatever bone, muscle, or essential organ is found in one healthy individual, the same part or organ may be found in or near the other individual of the same species, as is the same part or organ in the same species.

ET4 5.66.9 The bronze monuments of crusaders lying cross-legged in the Temple Church at London...please by beauty of the same character...which is clearly seen in the streets of London.

ET4 5.68.21 Even for [the English] highwaymen the same virtue is claimed, and Robin Hood comes described to us as mitissimus praedonum; the gentlest thief.

ET5 5.77.23 A man of that [English] brain thinks and acts thus; and his neighbor, being afflicted with the same kind of brain...thinks the same thing...

ET5 5.77.24 A man of that [English] brain thinks and acts thus; and his neighbor, being afflicted with the same kind of brain...thinks the same thing.

ET5 5.89.15 When Thor and his companions arrive at Utgard, he is told that nobody is permitted to remain here, unless he understand some art, and excel in it all other men. The same question is still put to the postastery of Thor.

ET5 5.90.22 Private persons [in England] exhibit...the same pertinacity as the nation showed in the coalitions in which it yoked Europe against the empire of Bonaparte...

ET5 5.91.24 In the same [English] spirit, were the excavation and research by Sir Charles Followes for the Xanthian monument....

ET5 5.94.3 The climate and geography [of England], I said, were factitious, as if the hands of man had arranged the conditions. The same character pervades the whole kingdom.

ET6 5.106.25 The power and possession which surround [the English] are their own creation, and they exert the same commanding industry at this moment.

ET6 5.107.22 ...with the national tendency to sit fast in the same spot for many generations, [the Englishman's house] comes to be, in the course of time, a temple of heritlooms.

ET6 5.110.14 Wordsworth says of the small freeholders of Westmoreland, Many of these humble sons of the hills had a consciousness that the land which they tilled had for more than five hundred years been possessed by...the same name and blood.

ET6 5.114.19 English stories, bon-mots and the recorded table-talk of their wits, are as good as the best of the French. In America, we...have not yet attained the same perfection...

ET7 5.121.25 [The English] require the same adherence, thorough conviction and reality, in public men.

ET7 5.122.11 The ruling passion of Englishmen in these days is a terror of hubrug. In the same proportion they value honesty, stoutness, and adherence to their own.

ET7 5.122.21 [The English] attack their own politicians every day, on the same grounds, as adventurers.

ET8 5.129.7 A Yorkshire mill-owner told me he had ridden more than once all the way from London to Leeds, in the first-class carriage, with the same persons, and no word exchanged.

ET9 5.146.20 The same insular limitation pinches [the Englishman's] foreign politics.

ET9 5.150.27 The English dislike the American structure of society, whilst yet trade, mills, public education and Chartism are doing what they can to create England the same social condition.

ET10 5.162.13 Of course [steam] draws the [English] nobility into the competition...in the application of steam to agriculture, and sometimes into trade. But it also introduces large classes into the same competition...

ET10 5.167.9 The incessant repetition of the same hand-work dwarfs the vigorous computation...

ET10 5.185.24 Oenipodes...each had the same tense geometrical brain...Copernicus, Newton...are not...a new kind of men, but that Thales...

ET10 5.187.10 No one can read the history of astronomy without perceiving that Copernicus, Newton...are not...a new kind of men, but that Thales...

ET10 5.205.6...in the summer solstice, the sun rises exactly over the top of that [astronomical] stone [at Stonehenge], at the Druidical temple at Aubry, there is also an astronomical stone, in the same relative position.

ET10 5.212.12 Just before entering Winchester we stopped at the Church of the Ancient Cross, and...we demanded a piece of bread and a draught of beer, which the founder, Henry de Blois, in 1136, commanded should be given to every one who should ask it at the gate. We had both, from the old couple who take care of the church. Some twenty people every day, they said, make the same demand.

ET15 5.222.15 When [the Englishman] is intellectual, a poet or a philosopher, he carries the same hard truth and the same keen mentality into the mental sphere.

ET15 5.234.7 Hudibras has the same hard mentality...

ET15 5.241.2 Plato had signified the same sentiment when he said, All the great arts require a subtle and speculative research into the law of nature...

ET15 5.246.6...in Hallam, or in the former intellectual nerve of Mackintosh, one still finds the same type of English genius.

ET15 5.248.19 Sir David Brewster sees the high place of Bacon, without finding Newton indebted to him, and thinks it a mistake. Bacon occupies it...as an effect of the same cause which showed itself more pronounced afterwards in Hooke, Boyle and Halley.

ET15 5.250.26...a master of such confidence that he will adhere to his convictions and give his present studies always the same high place.

ET15 5.253.3 1 fear the same fault [lack of inspiration] lies in [English] science.

ET15 5.257.22...he who aspires to be the English poet must be as large as London, not in the same kind as London, but in his own kind.

ET15 5.271.7 Punch is equally an expression of English good sense, as the London Times. It is the comic version of the same sense.

ET16 5.275.25 I told Carlyle that...I like the [English] people...but meantime, I surely know that as soon as I return to Massachusetts I shall lapse at once into the feeling...that no skill or activity can long compete with the prodigious natural advantages of that country, in the hands of the same race.

ET16 5.277.12 It was pleasant to see that...[Stonehenge]--two upright stones and a lintel laid across...were like what is most permanent on the face of the planet: these, and the barrows--mounds...like the same mound on the plain of Thessaly.

ET16 5.281.6...at the summer solstice, the sun rises exactly over the top of that [astronomical] stone [at Stonehenge], at the Druidical temple at Aubry, there is also an astronomical stone, in the same relative position.

ET16 5.306.21 am...here...to speak...of that which is good in holidays and working-days, the same in one century and in another century.

ET16 5.310.26 I...thinks the same thing that...the English Church...has the seal of...a ritual marked by...the same type of English genius.

ET16 5.312.21...everywhere men are led in the same manners.

ET16 5.319.9...the subject [the Spirit of the Times] had the same prominence in some remarkable pamphlets and journals issued in London in the same season.

ET16 5.326.14 By the same obedience to other thoughts we learn [their power]...

ET16 5.326.26...by firmly stating all that is agreeable to experience on one [topic], and doing the same justice to the opposing facts in the others, the true limitations will appear.

ET16 5.326.21...as Englishmen have seen in the last generation.

ET16 5.330.10 The Greek Tragedy expressed the same sense [of Fate].

ET16 5.330.10 No one can read the history of astronomy without perceiving that Copernicus, Newton...are not...a new kind of men, but that Thales...

ET16 5.330.11...had the same general mental faculty.

Chr 10.100 1 Some men’s words I remember so well that I must often use them to express my thought. Yes, because I perceive that we have heard the same truth.

Chr 10.106 9 Our ancestors spoke continually of angels and archangels with the same good faith as they would have spoken of their own parents or their late minister.

Chr 10.106 16 Calvinism was one and the same thing in Geneva, in Scotland, in Old and New England.

Chr 10.108 24 . . . the stern determination . . . to be chaste and humble, was substantially the same, whether under a self-respect, or under a vow made on the knees at the shrine of Madonna.

Chr 10.114 12 We will learn to put back the emphasis peremptorily on pure morals, always the same.

Chr 10.116 24 . . . a few clergymen, with a more theological cast of mind, retain the traditions, but they carry them quietly. In general discourse, they are not the same, I construe the spirit of the clergyman who treated he might have locked up in the same closet with his occasional sermons.

Edcl 10.126 10 . . . when one and the same man passes out of the torpid into the perceiving state . . . all limits disappear.

Edcl 10.136 6 Let us apply to this subject [education] the light of the same torch by which we have looked at all the phenomena of the time; the infinite, namely, of every man.

Edcl 10.138 15 I like . . . boys, who have the same liberal ticket of admission to all shops . . . as flies have.

Edcl 10.143 9 Let [the youth]. . . read Tom Brown at Oxford. —better yet, read Hodson’s Life—Hodson who took prisoner the king of Delhi. They teach the same truth.

Edcl 10.147 6 Teach [a boy] the difference the more the similar and the same.

Edcl 10.156 7 Can you not keep for [child’s] mind and ways, for your secret, the same curiosity you give to the squirrel, snake, rabbit?

P3t 3.83 27 I say to the Genius,—In for a mill, in for a million.

P3t 3.85 10 ...I have not found that much was gained by manipular attempts to realize the world of thought. Many eager persons successively make an experiment in this way, and make themselves ridiculous. ...Worse, I observe that in the history of mankind there is never a solitary example of success—in-taking their own tests of success. I say this polemically...

P3t 3.86 1 ...in the soliloquy to which every man is always returning, he has a sanity and revelations which in his passage into new worlds he will carry with him. Never mind the ridicule, never mind the defeat; up again, old heart—it seems to say.

EWI 11.144 27 I say to you, you must save yourself, black or white, man or woman.

War 11.155 13 ...whilst this principle [of self-help], necessarily, is inwrought into the fabric of every creature, yet it is but one instinct; and though a primary one, or we may say the very first, yet the appearance of the other instinct immediately modifies and controls this.

War 11.162 1 This is a poor, tedious society of yours, [sensible men] say: we do not see what good can come of it.

War 11.168 8 Will you stick to your principle of non-resistance...when your children and babes are insulted and slaughtered in your sight? If you say yes, you only invite the robber and assassin.

War 11.168 13 In reply to this charge of absurdity on the extreme peace doctrine, as shown in the supposed consequences, I wish to say that such deductions consider only one half of the fact. War 11.169 21 ...as far as [the charge of absurdity on the extreme peace doctrine] respects individual action in difficult and extreme cases, I will say, such cases seldom or never occur to the good and just man;...War 11.169 23 ...as far as [the charge of absurdity on the extreme peace doctrine] respects individual action in difficult and extreme cases, I will say, such cases seldom or never occur to the good and just man;...nor are we careful to say, or even to know, what in such crises is to be done. EWSL 11.198 5 What shall we say of the functionary by whom the recent rendition of [the Fugitive Slave Law] was made?

EWSL 11.202 5 I need say how much I have enjoyed [Webster’s] fame.

EWSL 11.205 1 It is neither praise nor blame to say that [Webster] has no moral perception, no moral sentiment...

EWSL 11.206 22 I pass to say a few words to the question, What shall we do?

EWSL 11.208 20 It is really the great task fit for this country to accomplish, to buy that property of the planters, as the British nation bought the West Indian slaves. I say buy,—never conceding the right of the planter to own, but that we deny all right to buy, and that is the beauty of the country.

EWSL 11.211 15 Massachusetts is little, but, if true to itself, can be the brain which turns about the behemoth [slavery]. I say Massachusetts, but I mean Massachusetts in all the quarters of her dispersion.

EWSL 11.219 7 I say Mr. Webster, for though the [Fugitive Slave] Bill was not his, it is yet notorious that he was the life and soul of it.

EWSL 11.219 13 ...under the shadow of [Webster’s] great name inferior men, making their names great, threw their ballots for [the Fugitive Slave Law] and made the law. I say inferior men. There were all sorts of what are called brilliant men...but men without self-respect...

ShP 1.196 4 The first play [Shakespeare’s Henry VIII] was written by a superior, thoughtful man, with a vicious ear. I can mark his lines, and know their cadence. See Wolsey’s soliloquy, and the following scene with Cromwell, where instead of the metre of Shakspere, whose secret is that the thought constructs the tune, so that reading for the sense will best bring out the rhythm,—here the lines are constructed on a given tune...

ShP 4.215 13 Cultivated men often attain a good degree of skill in verse; but it is easy to read, through their poems, their personal history: and when acquainted with the parties can guess every figure; this is Andrew and that is Rachel. The sense thus remains prosaic.

NMW 4.224 15 [Napoleon] is so saint...and he is no hero, in the high sense.

ShP 4.192 20 The sure possession, by the stage, of the public mind, is of the first importance to the poet who works for it. He loses no time in idle experiments. Here is audience and expectation prepared. In the case of Shakspeare there is much more.

ShP 4.193 21 Shakspeare...estemed the mass of old plays waste stock... ShP 4.195 6...it appears that Shakspeare did owe debts in all directions... ShP 4.195 13...the amount of [Shakspeare’s] indebtedness may be inferred from Malone’s laborious computations in regard to the First, Second and Third parts of Henry VI, in which, out of 6043 lines, 1771 were written by some author preceding Shakspeare.

ShP 196 10 Shakspeare knew that tradition supplies a better fable than any invention can.

ShP 4.201 22 We have to thank the researches of antiquaries, and the Shakspeare Society, for ascertaining the steps of the English drama, from the Mysteries...down to the possession of the stage by the very pieces which Shakspeare altered, remodelled and finally made his own.

ShP 4.202 2...[the antiquaries] have left no bookstall unsearched...so keen was the hope to discover whether the boy Shakspeare pouched or not... ShP 4.203 8 Sir Henry Wotton was born four years after Shakspeare.

ShP 4.203 20...I find, among [Wotton’s] correspondents and acquaintances...Paul Sarpi, Arminius, with all of whom exists some token of his having communicated, without enumerating many others whom doubtless he saw...Shakspeare, Spenser...

ShP 4.204 5 It was not possible to write the history of Shakspeare till now...

ShP 4.204 7...it was with the introduction of Shakspeare into German...that the rapid burst of German literature was most intimately connected. ShP 4.204 14 Did Shakspeare owe any stretch to the German drama...the genesis of that delicate creation [A Midsummer Night’s dream]?

ShP 4.205 5 Shakspeare is the only biographer of Shakspeare... ShP 4.207 8 Shakspeare is the only biographer of Shakspeare; and even he could tell nothing, except to the Shakspeare in us...

ShP 4.208 21...with Shakspeare for biographer...we have really the information [about Shakespeare] which is material;... ShP 4.210 10 Some able and appreciating critics think no criticism on Shakspeare valuable that does not rest purely on the dramatic merit;... ShP 4.211 3...the occasion which gave the saint’s meaning the form...of a code of laws, is immaterial compared with the universality of its application. So it fares with the wise Shakspeare and his book of life. ShP 4.211 24 Shakspeare is as much out of the category of eminent authors, as he is out of the crowd.

ShP 4.212 3 For executive faculty, for creation, Shakspeare is unique. ShP 4.212 4...Shakspeare has no peculiarity, no important topic;... ShP 4.214 10 No recipe can be given for the making of a Shakspeare... ShP 4.215 18 In the poet’s mind the fact has gone quite over into the new element of thought, and has lost all that is exuvial. This generosity abides with Shakspeare.

ShP 4.216 10 Not less sovereign and cheerful,—much more sovereign and cheerful, is the tone of Shakspeare.

ShP 4.216 21...[solitude] weighs Shakspeare also, and finds him to share the hallowed and imperfection of humanity. ShP 4.216 24 Shakspeare, or the parish rookery, the part of the Shakspeare that is mortal, has the every-day of Shakspeare, the every-day of letting the genius of Shakspeare out in the world... ET 4.234 20 The Saxon materialism and narrowness, exalted into the sphere of intellect, makes the very genius of Shakspeare and Milton.

ET 4.236 6 The union of Saxon precision and Oriental souring, of which Shakspeare is the perfect example, is shared in less degree by the writers of two centuries.

ET 4.237 18 The unique fact in literary history, the unsurprised reception of Shakspeare...seems to demonstrate an elevation in the mind of the people. ET 4.237 20 A few generalizations always circulate in the world...and these are in the world constants, like the Copernican and Newtonian theories in physics. In England these may be traced usually to Shakspeare, Bacon, Milton, or Hooker...

ET 4.244 1 The latest English want the faculty of Plato and Aristotle, of grouping men in natural classes by an insight of general laws, so deep that the rule is deduced with equal precision...from one, as from multitudes of lives, Shakspeare is supreme in that, as in all the great mental energies. ET 4.247 20 Milton, who stands high above all, got his information from the English genius from the summits of Shakspeare, used this privilege [of generalization] sometimes in poetry, more rarely in prose.

MAngl 12.242 16 Michael [Angelo] adorns them [Vasari]...that we ought not to show that joy when a child is born, which should be reserved for the death of one who has lived well.

Milt 12.259 3 ...as far as possible [writes Milton], I aim to show myself equal in thought and speech to what I have written, if I have written anything well.

Milt 12.264 13 [Milton] states these things, he says, to show that...a certain reservation of natural disposition and moral discipline...was enough to keep him in disdain of far less incontinences that those that had been charged on him.

Milt 12.276 15 Like prophets, [Homer and Shakespeare] seem but imperfectly aware of the import of their own utterances. We hesitate to say such things, and say them only to the unpleasing dualism, when the man and the poet show like a double consciousness.

Milt 12.313 15 Accustomed always to behold the presence of the universe in every part, the soul will not condescend to look at any new part as a stranger, but saith,—I know all already and what art thou? Show me thy relations to me, to all, and I will entertain thee also.

Pray 12.353 9 These duties are not the life, but the means which enable us to show forth the life.

Pray 12.354 16 That my weak hand may equal my firm faith./ And my life practise more than my tongue saith/ That my low conduct may not show./ Nor my relating lines./ That I thy purpose did not know./ Or overrated thy designs.

Pray 12.355 15 Wilt thou give me strength to persevere in this great work of redemption. Wilt thou show me the true means of accomplishing it.

EurB 12.368 19 [Wordsworth]...wrote Hevelyn and Windermere and the dim spirits which these haunts harbored. MoS 4.170 2 This book of Montaigne the world has endorsed by translating it into all tongues and printing seventy-five editions of it in Europe; and that also, a circulation so copious, that chosen, namely among courtiers, soldiers, princes, men of the world and men of wit and generosity.

NMW 4.236 11 To a regiment of horse-chasseurs at Lobenstein...Napoleon said, My lords, you must not fear death; when soldiers brave death, they drive the enemy into the enemy’s ranks...

NMW 4.245 4 Seventeen men in [Napoleon’s] time were raised from common soldiers to the rank of king, marshal, duke, or general;...

NMW 4.245 7 When soldiers have been baptized in the fire of a battle-field [said Napoleon], they have all one rank in my eyes.

ET 7.51 21 The horse has more uses than Buffon noted. If you go into the streets, every driver in ‘bus or dray is a bully, and if I wanted a good troop of soldiers, I should recruit among the stables.

ET 5.75 27 A nobility of soldiers cannot keep down a commonality of shameful and scabby persons.

ET 5.86 4 When Wellington, he came to the army in Spain, had every man weighed, first with accoutrements, and then without: believing that the force of an army depended on the weight and power of the individual soldiers...

ET 13.522 6 Wellington esteems a saint only as far as he can be an army chaplain: Mr. Briscoll, by his admirable conduct and good sense, got the better of Methodism, which had appeared among the soldiers and one among the officers.

ET 14.523 4 A strong common sense...marks the English mind for a thousand years; a rude strength newly applied to thought, as of sailors and soldiers who had lately learned to read.

CW 6.252 2 Without war, no soldiers:...

II 6.317 21 ...the best soldiers, sea-captains and railway men have a gentleness when off duty...

Elo 7.65 24 ['Elloquent'] is that despotism which poets have celebrated in the Punic wars of Hamelin, whose music...drew soldiers and priests...

Elo 7.76 9 It is easy to illustrate this overpowering personality by these examples of soldiers and kings:...

Farm 7.140 3 This hard work [of the farm] will always be done by one kind of man; not...by soldiers, nor professors...

Cour 7.264 21 The general must stimulate the mind of his soldiers to the perception that they are men, and the enemy is no more.

Cour 7.268 10 Merchants recognize as much gallantry, well judged too, in the conduct of a wise and upright man of business in difficult times, as soldiers in a soldier.

Cour 7.271 3 ’T is the quiet, peaceable men, the men of principle, that make the best soldiers.

PI 8.61 1 In society you have this figure [of thyme]...in a regiment of soldiers in uniform.

PI 8.84 14 Soldiers can march better and fight better for the drum and trumpet.
