UGM 4.10 12 I count him a great man who inhabits a higher sphere of thought...he has but to open his eyes to see things in a true light...
UGM 4.18 9 Behmen and Swedenborg saw that things were representative.
UGM 4.20 10 Men are...representative; first, of things, and secondly, of ideas.
UGM 4.10 14 The eye repeats every day the first eulogy on things...He saw that they were good.
UGM 4.11 11 Each material thing...has its translation, through humanity, into the spiritual and necessary sphere where it plays a part as indestructible as any other. And to these, their ends, all things continually ascend.
UGM 4.13 12 Looking where others look, and conversing with the same things, we catch the charm which lured them.
UGM 4.13 17 Talk much with any man of vigorous mind, and we acquire very fast the habit of looking at things in the same light...
UGM 4.20 10 These [leaders and law-givers]...admit us to the constitution of things.
UGM 4.20 19...if persons and things are scores of a celestial music, let us rest off the strains.
UGM 4.24 24 Not one [person] has a misgiving of being wrong. Was it not a bright thought that made things cohere with this bitumen, fastest of cements?

PPh 4.76 14...[Plato’s] writings have not...the vital authority which...the sermons of unlettered Arabs and Jews possess. There is an interval; and to cohesion, contact is necessary. I know not what can be said in reply to this criticism but that we have come to a fact in the nature of things: an oak is not an orange.
PPh 4.77 14...countries, and things of which countries are made...have passed through this man [Plato] as bread into his body, and become no longer bread, but body...
PPh 4.78 7...admirable texts can be quoted on both sides of every great question from [Plato]. These things we are forced to say if we must consider the effort of Plato or of any philosopher to dispose of nature,--which will not be disposed of.
PPh 4.86 6 [Plato] was born to behold the self-evolving power of spirit...a power which is the key at once to the centrality and the evanescence of things.
PPh 4.86 17...all things have symmetry in [Plato’s] tablet.
PPh 4.87 1 The names of things, too, [to Plato] are fatal, following the nature of things.
PPh 4.87 2 The names of things, too, [to Plato] are fatal, following the nature of things.
PPh 4.87 18 [Plato] describes his own ideal, when he paints, in Timaeus, a god leading things from disorder into order.
SwM 4.94 1 For other things, I make poetry of them; but the moral sentiment makes poetry of me.
SwM 4.96 6 The soul having been often born...having beheld the things which are here, those which are in heaven and those which are beneath, there is nothing of which she has not gained the knowledge...SwM 4.96 12...all things in nature being linked and related...nothing hinders but that any man who has recalled to mind...one thing only, should of himself recover all his ancient knowledge...
SwM 4.96 23...by being assimilated to the original soul, by whom and after whom all things subsist, the soul of man does then easily flow into all things.
SwM 4.96 25...by being assimilated to the original soul...the soul of man does then easily flow into all things, and all things flow into it...
SwM 4.102 25 [Swedenborg’s] superb speculation, as from a tower, over nature and facts, without losing sight of the rule of things, or sequence of things, almost realizes his own picture...of the original integrity of man.
SwM 4.106 20 The thoughts in which [Swedenborg] lived were, the universality of each law in nature...the centrality of man in nature, and the connection that subsists throughout all things...
SwM 4.109 8...every thing at the end of one use is lifted into a superior, and the ascent of these things climbs into daemonic and celestial natures.
SwM 4.113 2 [Swedenborg] noted that in [nature] proceeding from first principles through her several subordinations, there was no state throughout which she did not pass, as if her path lay through all things.

SwM 4.116 21 [Swedenborg says] I intend hereafter to communicate a number of examples of such correspondences, together with a vocabulary containing the terms of spiritual things, as well as of the physical things for which they are to be substituted.

SwM 4.117 16 [Correspondence] required an insight that could rank things in order and series;

SwM 4.117 26 ...literature has no book in which the symbolism of things is so clearly opened.

SwM 4.118 3 ...whether it be that these things will not be intellectually learned, or that many centuries must elaborate and compose so rare and opulent a soul;--there is no comet, rock-stratum...that, for itself, does not interest more scholars and classifiers than the meaning and upshot of the frame of things.

SwM 4.118 20 ...there is no comet...or fungus, that, for itself, does not interest more scholars and classifiers than the meaning and upshot of the frame of things.

SwM 4.119 25 ...[Swedenborg] affirms that he sees, with the internal sight, the things that are in another life, more clearly than he sees the things which Swedenborg 4.119 27 are here in the world.

SwM 4.120 13 The correspondence between thoughts and things hitherto occupied [Swedenborg]...

SwM 4.120 19 The reason why all and single things, in the heavens and on earth, are representative, is because they exist from an influx of the Lord, through heaven [said Swedenborg].

SwM 4.123 13 ...[Swedenborg] is a rich discoverer, and of things which most must be known.

SwM 4.123 16 [Swedenborg] saw things in their law.

SwM 4.124 1 [To Swedenborg] All things in the universe arrange themselves to each person anew, according to his ruling love.

SwM 4.127 14 The book [Swedenborg's Conjugal Love] had been grand if the Hebraism had been omitted and the law stated...with that scope for ascension of state which the nature of things requires.

SwM 4.133 17 All [Swedenborg]’s types mean the same few things.

SwM 4.136 23 The Lutheran bishop’s son, for whom the heavens are opened, so that he sees with eyes and in the richest symbolic forms the awful truth of things...with all these grandeurs resting upon him, remains the Lutheran bishop’s son...

SwM 4.143 19 It is unparalleled that this man [Swedenborg], who, by his perception of symbols, saw the poetic construction of things...remained entirely devoid of the whole apparatus of poetic expression...

MoS 4.150 7 One class [predispersed to Sensation]...is conversant with...cities and passions, and the bringing certain things to pass;...MoS 4.152 9 Things always bring their own philosophy with them, that is, prudence.

MoS 4.157 8 [The skeptic says] Why think to shut up all things in your narrow coop.

MoS 4.157 10 [The skeptic says] Why think to shut up all things in your narrow coop, when we know there are not one or two only, but ten, twenty, a thousand things, and unlike?

MoS 4.169 3 Montaigne...likes pain because it makes him feel himself and realize himself...MoS 4.170 11 We are persuaded that a thread runs through all things...

MoS 4.171 8 The nonconformist and the rebel say all manner of unanswerable things against the existing republic...

MoS 4.180 15 Can you not believe that a man of earnest and burly habit may...want a rougher instruction, want men, labor, trade, farming, war, hunger, plenty, love, hatred, doubt and terror to make things plain to him;...MoS 4.181 26...[the spiritualist] is forced to say, O, these things will be as they must be...

MoS 4.185 9 Things seem to say one thing, and say the reverse.

MoS 4.185 11 Things seem to tend downward...

MoS 4.186 6...[a man] learn to bear the disappearance of things he was wont to reverence without losing his reverence...

ShP 4.197 2 Other men say wise things as well as [the poet]...

ShP 4.197 3 Other men say wise things as well as [the poet]; only they say a good many foolish things, and do not know when they have spoken wisely.

ShP 4.213 12 This power...of transferring the inmost truth of things into music and verse, makes [Shakespeare] the type of the poet...

ShP 4.213 17 Things were mirrored in [Shakespeare’s] poetry without loss on the knitting and contexture of things.

ShP 4.214 11 No recipe can be given for the making of a Shakspere; but the possibility of the translation of things into song is demonstrated.

ShP 4.217 3 Shakspere, Homer, Dante, Chaucer...knew that a tree had another use than for apples...and the ball of the earth, than for tillage and road...

NMW 4.226 25...[Mirabeau]...felt that these things which his presence inspired were as much his own as if he had said them...

NMW 4.229 4 [Napoleon] has not lost his native sense and sympathy with things.

NMW 4.229 7 To be sure there are men enough who are immersed in things...

Exp 3.70 12 In the growth of the embryo, Sir Everard Home I think noticed that the evolution was not from one central point...

Exp 3.71 13 When I converse with a profound mind...I am at first apprised of my vicinity to a new and excellent region of life.

Exp 3.78 13...men never speak of crime as lightly as they think;...Exp 3.84 25 I know that the world I converse with in the city and in the farms, is not the world I think.

Chr 3.99 13 I revere the person who is rich; so that I cannot think of him as alone, or poor, or exiled, or unhappy, or a client...

Chr 3.99 21...if I go to see an ingenious man I shall think myself poorly entertained if he give me nimble pieces of benevolence and etiquette;...Chr 3.108 23 I look on Sculpture as history. I do not think the Apollo and the Jove impossible in flesh and blood.

Chr 3.109 23 I should think myself very unhappy in my associates if I could not credit the best things in history.

Mrg 3.130 1 We sometimes feel that the moral sentiment rules man and nature. We think all other distinctions and ties will be slight and fugitive...

Gts 3.159 4 I do not think this general insolvency [of the world]...to be the reason of the difficulty experienced at Christmas and New Year and other times, in bestowing gifts.

Gts 3.160 11 If a man should send to me to come a hundred miles to visit him and should set before me a basket of fine summer-fruit, I should think there was some proportion between the labor and the reward. Gts 3.161 11 I can think of many parts of Christ that I should prefer playing to that of the Furies.

Gts 3.162 22 Some violence I think is done...then I rejoice or grieve at a gift.

Nat 3.172 4 The blue zenith is the point in which romance and reality meet. I think if we should be reconciled into all that and dream of heaven...

Nat 3.183 6...we think we shall be as grand as [natural objects] if we camp out and eat roots...Nat 3.189 21...no man can write anything who does not think that what he writes is for the time the history of the world;...Nat 3.189 26...no man can...do anything well who does not esteem his work to be of importance. My work may be of none, but I must not think it of none, or I shall not do it with impunity.

Poll 3.216 26 We think our civilization near its mergerian...

Poll 3.217 14 The gladiators in the lists of power feel...the presence of worth. I think the very strife of trade and ambition is confession of this divinity...

Pol1 3.218 15 Senators and presidents have climbed so high with pain enough, not because they think the place specially agreeable, but as an apology for real worth...

Pol1 3.221 15 I do not call to mind a single human being who has steadily denied the authority of the laws, on the simple ground of his own moral nature. Such designs...are not entertained except avowedly as air-pictures. If the individual who exhibits them dare to think them practicable, he disgusts scholars and churchmen...

UGM 4.24 7 The worthless and offensive members of society...invariably think themselves the most ill-used people alive...

UGM 4.19 9 Children think they cannot live without their parents.

PPh 4.8 8 This range of Plato instructs us what to think of the vexed question concerning his reputed works...

PPh 4.44 24 ...the writings of Plato have preoccupied...every church, every poet...making it impossible to think, on certain levels, except through him.

PPh 4.48 7 Oneeness and otherness. It is impossible to speak or to think without embracing both.

PPh 4.78 23 A chief structure of human wit...it requires all the breath of human faculty to know [Plato]. I think it is truestill seen when seen with the minds respect.

SwM 4.94 25 In the language of the Koran, God said, The heaven and the earth and all that are between them, think ye that we created them in jest, and that ye shall not return to us?

SwM 4.97 3 ...by being assimilated to the original soul...the soul of man does then easily flow into all things, and all things fill into it: they mix; and he is present and sympathetic with their structure and law. This path is difficult, secret and beset with terror. The ancients called it ecstasy or ascendant over another;...

MoS 4.157 8 [The skeptic says] Why think to shut up all things in your narrow coop?

MoS 4.159 1 ...once let [the savage] read in the book, and he is no longer able not to think of Plato's heroes.

MoS 4.165 10 ...nobody can think or say worse of [Montaigne] than he does.

MoS 4.167 11 [I seem to hear Montaigne say]...I think an undress and old shoes that do not pinch my feet...the most suitable.

MoS 4.173 27 'T is of no importance what bats and oxen think.

MoS 4.175 81 think that the intellectual and moral sentiment are unanimous;...

MoS 4.175 12 I think that the wiser a man is, the more stupendous he finds the natural and moral economy.

ShP 4.195 19 In Henry VIII. I think I plainly cropping the out original rock on which [Shakespeare's] other finer stratum was laid.

ShP 4.199 5 As Sir Robert Peel and Mr. Webster vote, so Locke and Rousseau think, for thousands;...

ShP 4.201 7 Vedas, Aesop's Fables, Pilpary, Arabian Nights, Cid, Iliad, Robin Hood, Scottish Minstrelsy, are not the work of single men. In the composition of such works...the mason, the carpenter, the merchant, the farmer, the top, all think for us.

ShP 4.203 3 Three centuries had passed, after [Shakespeare's] death, did any criticism which we think adequate begin to appear.

ShP 4.210 9 Some able and appreciating critics think no criticism on Shakespeare valuable that does not rest purely on the dramatic merit;...

ShP 4.210 12 Some able and appreciating critics think...[that Shakespeare] is falsely judged as poet and philosopher. I think as highly as these critics of his dramatic merit, but still think it secondary.

ShP 4.210 14 Some able and appreciating critics think...[that Shakespeare] is falsely judged as poet and philosopher. I think as highly as these critics of his dramatic merit, but still think it secondary.

ShP 4.212 1 A good reader can, in a sort, nestle into Plato's brain and think from thence; but not into Shakespeare's.

ShP 4.217 27 One remembers again the trumpet-text in the Koran...The heavens and the earth and all that is between them, think ye we have created them in jest?

NMW 4.247 7 I think all men know better than they do;...

GoW 4.269 6 ...the writer does not stand with us on any commanding ground. I think this to be his own fault.

ET1 5.14 21 [Coleridge]...could not bend to a new companion and think with him.

ET2 5.32 19 ...I think the white path of an Atlantic ship the right avenue to the palace front of this seafaring people [the English].

ET4 5.82 23 ...what we think of when we talk of English traits really narrows itself to a small district.

ET4 5.70 6 [The English] think, with Henri Quatre, that many exercises are the foundation of that elevation of mind which gives one nature ascent over another...

ETS 5.84 21 [The English] think him the best dressed man whose dress is so fit for his use that you cannot notice or remember to describe it.

ET6 5.105 4 ...not that [the Englishman] is trained to neglect the eyes of his neighbors;--he is really occupied with his own affair and does not think of them.

ET6 5.105 17 In a company of strangers you would think [the Englishman] deaf;...

ET6 5.113 13 ...[the English] think, says the Venetian traveller of 1500, no greater honor can be conferred or received, than to invite others to eat with them, or to be invited themselves.

ET7 5.117 17 The English are blunt in saying what they think...

ET7 5.120 21 ...one cannot think this festival [of St. George in Montreal] fruitless, if, all over the world, on the 23d of April, wherever two or three English are found, they meet to encourage each other in the nationality of very.

ET8 5.128 7 As compared with the Americans, I think [the English] cheerful and contented.

ET8 5.131 22 [The English] are good at storming redoubts...but not, I think, at enduring the rack.

ET8 5.141 12 ...[The English] think humanely on the affairs of France, of Turkey...

ET9 5.145 13 A much older traveller...says...[The English] think that there are no other men than themselves.

ET11 5.196 14 ...advantages once confined to men of family are now open to the whole middle class. The road that grandeur levels for his coach, can be enjoyed in his cart. This is more manifest every day, but I think it is true throughout English history.

ET12 5.207 10 [The Englishman] has enough to think of...

ET12 5.212 22 ...I should as soon think of quarrelling with the janitor for not magnifying his office by hostile scaffles into the street...of quarrelling with the professors for not admiring the young neologists who pluck the beards of Euclid and Aristotle.

ET14 5.236 16 There is a hygienic simplicity...I think, in the common style of the [English] people...

ET15 5.237 13 A man must think that age well taught and thoughtful, by which masques and poems, like those of Ben Jonson...were received with favor.

ET14 5.254 7 [Natural science in England] stands in strong contrast with the genius of the Germans, the French-Greeks, who...by means of their highly intellectual view, preserve their enthusiasm and think for Europe.

ET15 5.266 5 Our entertainer [at the London Times] confided us to a courteous assistant to show us the establishment, in which, I think, they employed a hundred and twenty men.

ET15 5.269 27 One would think the world was on its knees to The [London] Times office for its daily breakfast.

ET16 5.283 17 I chanced to see, a year ago, men at work...in Boston, swinging a block of granite of the size of the largest of the Stonehenge columns, with an ordinary derrick. The men were common masons...nor did they think they were doing anything remarkable.

ET16 5.289 21 I think I prefer this church [Winchester Cathedral] to all I have seen, except Westminster Abbey and St. Paul's.

ET17 5.295 21 said, if Plutarch's Republic were published in England as a new book-to-day, do you think it would find any readers?--[Wordsworth] confessed it would not...

ET19 5.311 25 You will think me very pedantic, gentlemen, but holiday though it be, I have not the smallest interest in any holiday except as it celebrates real and not pretended joys.

ET19 5.312 1 ...I think it just, in this time of gloom and commercial disaster...that...you should not fail to keep your literary anniversary.

F 6.23 16 ...nothing is more disgusting than...the flipant mistake for freedom of some paper preamble...by those who have never dared to think or to act...

F 6.27 4 ...now we are as men in a balloon, and do not think so much of the point we have left...as of the liberty and glory of the way.

F 6.31 8 ...in politics, [men] think they come under another [domain]; Pow. 6.57 11 [A broad, healthy, massive understanding]...anticipates everybody's discovery...and if it do not command every fact of the genius and the scholar, it is because it...does not think them worth the exertion which you do.

Wlh 6.98 25 I think sometimes, could I only have music on my own terms; could I live in a great city and know where I could go whenever I wished the ablation and inundation of musical waves,--that were a bath and a medicine.

Wlh 6.104 16 An apple-tree, if you take out every day for a number of days a load of loam and put in a load of sand about its roots, will find it out. An apple-tree is a stupid kind of creature, but if this treatment be pursued for a short time I think it would begin to mistrust something.

Wlh 6.111 7 ...we have to pay, not what would have contented [the immigrants] at home, but what they have learned to think necessary here;...

Wlh 6.112 23 I think we are entitled here to draw a straight line and say that society cannot be at the same time that must always be bankrupt, until every man does that which he was created to do.

Wlh 6.116 24 Sir David Brewster gives exact instructions for microscopic observation: Lie down on your back, and hold the single lens and object between it and your eye...the microscopical world has a thousand centuries to be explored and a thousand years to be lived.

Wlh 6.119 13 You think farm buildings and broad acres a solid property;... Ctr 6.141 7 I think it the part of good sense to provide every fine soil with such culture that it shall not, at thirty or forty years, have to say, This which I might do is made hopeless through my want of weapons.
Civ 7.21 23 "T is wonderful how soon a piano gets into a log hut on the frontier. You would think they found it under a pine stump.
Artz 7.47 3 We hesitate at doing Spenser so great an honor as to think that he intended by his allegory the sense we affix to it.
Artz 7.47 8 Even Shakspeare...we think indebted to Goethe and to Coleridge for the wisdom they detect in his Hamlet and Antony.
Artz 7.48 27 ...[the artist] is not to speak his own words, or do his own works, or think his own thoughts.
Elo1 7.66 12 There are many audiences in every public assembly, each one of which rules in turn. If anything comic and coarse is spoken, you shall see the emergence of the boys and rowdies, so loud and vivacious that you might think the house was filled with them.
Elo1 7.66 16 If anything comic and coarse is spoken, you shall see the emergence [in the audience] of the boys and rowdies, so loud and vivacious that you might think the house was filled with them. If new topics are started heavier and higher, these roosters recede; a more chaste and wise attention takes place. You would think the boys slept, and that the men have any degree of profundity.
Elo1 7.80 25 Does [any one] think that not possibly a man may come to him who shall persuade him out of his most settled determination?
CIV 7.122 3 I think the vice of our housekeeping is that it does not hold man sacred.
DL 7.124 27 We...are still villagers, who think that every thing in their petty town is a superior to the same thing anywhere else.
DL 7.125 13 We are too easily pleased. I think this sad result appears in the manners.
CIV 7.129 25...[a man] not think that a property in beautiful objects is necessary to his apprehension of them.
DL 7.130 26...I think the public museum in each town will one day relieve the private house of this charge of owning and exhibiting [statues and pictures].
DL 7.133 13 I think that the heroism which at this day would make on us the impression of Emanipondas and Phocion must be that of a domestic conqueror.

MMEm 10.416 24 [Mary Moody Emerson] end days of fine health and cheerfulness without getting upward now. How did I use to think them lost?

MMEm 10.416 26 If more liberal views of the divine government make me...[Mary Moody Emerson] think nothing lost which carries me to His now hidden presence, there may be danger of losing and causing others the loss of that awe and sobriety so indispensable.

MMEm 10.417 6 [Mary Moody Emerson] was addressed and offered marriage by a man...whom she respected. The proposal gave her pause and much to think...

MMEm 10.422 21 To her nephew Charles [Mary Moody Emerson writes]: War: what do I think of it? Why in your ear I think it so much better than oppression that if it were ravaging the whole geography of despotism it would be an omen of higher political import.

SrHr 10.440 18 ...[Samuel Hoar] said it was his practice to pay whatever was demanded; for, though he might think the taxation large and very unequally proportioned, yet he thought the money might as well go in this way as in any other.

SrHr 10.442 27 [Samuel Hoar’s] character made him the conscience of the community in which he lived. And in many a town it was asked, What does Squire Hoar think of this?...

SrHr 10.448 21 [Samuel Hoar] was as if on terms of honor with those nearest him, nor did he think a lifelong familiarity could excuse any omission of courtesy from him.

Thor 10.456 17 I love Henry, said one of [Thoreau’s] friends, but I cannot like him; and as for taking his arm, I should as soon think of taking the arm of an elm-tree.

Thor 10.462 18 When I was planting forest trees, and had procured half a peck of acorns, [Thoreau] proceeded to... select the sound ones. But finding this took time, he said, I think if you put them all into water the good ones will sink;...

Thor 10.468 23 I think [Thoreau’s] fancy for referring everything to the meridian of Concord did not grow out of any ignorance or depreciation of other longitudes or latitudes.

Thor 10.469 3 I think [Thoreau’s] fancy for referring everything to the meridian of Concord...was...a playful expression of his conviction...that the best place for each is where he stands. He expressed it once in this wise: I think nothing is to be hoped from you, if this bit of mould under your feet is not sweetening to you to eat than any other in this world, or in any world.

Thor 10.479 2 I think the severity of [Thoreau’s] ideal interfered to deprive him of a healthy sufficiency of human society.

Carl 10.489 3 Thomas Carlyle is...as extraordinary in his conversation as in his writing.—I’ll think even more so...

Carl 10.492 12 [Carlyle says] I think if [Parliament] would give [the money] to me, to provide the poor with labor, and with authority to make them work or shoot them,—and I to be hanged if I did not,—I could find them in plenty of Indian meal.

GSt 10.505 17 When one remembers...his immovable convictions.—I think this single will [George Stearns] was worth to the cause ten thousand ordinary partisans.

EWT 11.101 5 If there were some man...who would not so much as part with his ice-cream, to save [a race of men] from rapine and manacles, I think I must not hesitate to satisfy that man that also his cream and vanilla are safer and cheaper by placing the negro nation on a fair footing than by robbing them.

EWT 11.118 10 We sometimes say...give [the planter] a machine that will yield him as much money as the slaves, and he will thankfully let them go. He has no love of slavery, but he wants luxury, and he will pay even this price of crime and danger for it. But I think experience does not warrant this conclusion.

EWT 11.127 15 On reviewing this history, I think the whole transaction [emancipation in the West Indies] reflects infinite honor on the people and parliament of England.

EWT 11.142 27 [The blacks] won the pity and respect which they have received [in the West Indies], by their powers and native endowments. I think this a circumstance of the highest import.

HDC 11.29 1 Fellow Citizens: The town of Concord begins this day, the third century of its history.

HDC 11.30 15 Here are set around me the lineal descendants of the first settlers of this town [Concord].

HDC 11.30 27...the town of Concord was settled by a party of non-conformists...

HDC 11.32 13...on the 2d of September, 1635...leave to begin a plantation at Musketaquid was given to Peter Bulkeley, Simon Willard, and about twelve families more. A month later, Rev. John Jones and a large number of settlers destined for the new town arrived in Boston.

HDC 11.33 27 Johnson...intimates that [the Pilgrims] consumed many days in exploring the country, to select the best place for the town.

HDC 11.35 22 A march of a number of families with their stuff, through twenty miles of unknown forest, from a little rising town that had not much to lose...must be laborious to all.

HDC 11.35 23 A march of a number of families with their stuff, through twenty miles of unknown forest...to an Indian town in the wilderness that had nothing, must be laborious to all.

HDC 11.40 27 We have records of marriages and deaths, beginning nineteen years after the settlement [of Concord]; and copies of some of the doings of the town in regard to territory, of the same date.

HDC 11.41 22 In 1638, 1200 acres were granted to Governor Winthrop, and 8000 to Thomas Dudley, of the lands adjacent to the town [Concord]...

HDC 11.42 2 At the same date, in 1654, the town [Concord] having divided itself into three districts...ordered that the North quarter are to keep and maintain all their highways and bridges over the great river, in their quarter.

HDC 11.42 13...this first recorded political act of our fathers, this tax assessed on its inhabitants by a town, is the most important event in their civil history...

HDC 11.42 17...this first recorded political act of our fathers, this tax assessed on its inhabitants by a town, is the most important event in their civil history, implying...the exercise of a sovereign power, and connected with all the immunities and powers of a corporate town in Massachusetts.

HDC 11.44 13...each little company [in the Massachusetts Bay colonies] organized itself after the pattern of the larger town...

HDC 11.44 21 In 1635, the [General] Court say...it is Ordered, that the freemen of every town shall have power to dispose of their own lands and woods, and choose their own particular officers.

HDC 11.46 4...[John Winthrop] advised, seeing the freemen were grown so numerous, to send deputies from every town once in a year to revise the laws and to assess all monies.

HDC 11.47 15 The moderator [of the New England town-meeting] was the pastorate-mouth-piece, and the voice of the town, like the vane on the turret overhead, free for every wind to turn...

HDC 11.48 17 In 1795, several town-meetings are called [in Concord], upon the compensation to be made to a few proprietors for land taken in making a bridle-road; and one of them demanding large damages, many offers were made him in town-meeting, and refused; which the town thought very unreasonable.

HDC 11.49 10 It is the consequence of this institution [the town-meeting] that every school-house, every market and meeting-place, and every called town...were looking behind that he was looking ahead, and therefore it was wise to speak.

HDC 11.49 25 The British government has recently presented to the several public libraries of this country, copies of the splendid edition of the Domesday Book, and other ancient public records of England. I cannot but think that it would be a suitable acknowledgment of this national munificence, if the records of one of our towns,—of this town [Concord], for example,—should be printed, and presented to the governments of Europe...

HDC 11.52 26 [The Indians] requested to have a town given them within the bounds of Concord...

HDC 11.53 3...[Tahitaowan] was asked, why he desired a town so near, when there was more room for them up in the country?

HDC 11.54 4 At the instance of [John Eliot, in 1651, [the Indians’] desire was granted by the General Court, and Nahashob, lying near Nagog Pond...became an Indian town.

HDC 11.54 16...Concord increased in territory and population. The lands were divided; highways were cut from farm to farm, and from this town to Boston.

HDC 11.55 7 In 1644, the town [Concord] contained sixty families.

HDC 11.57 17 In 1654, the four united New England Colonies agreed to raise 270 foot and 40 horse, to reduce Ninigret, Sachem of the Niantics, and appointed Major Simon Willard, of this town [Concord], to the command.
HDC 11.60 The historian of Concord [Lemuel Shattuck] has preserved an instance of the resolution of one of the daughters of the town.

HDC 11.61 It is the misfortune of Concord to have permitted a dishonorable outrage upon the friendly Indians settled within its limits, in February, 1676, which ended in their forcible expulsion from the town.

HDC 11.62 Before 1666, 15,000 acres had been added by grants of the General Court to the original territory of the town [Concord].

HDC 11.63 The public charity seems to have been bestowed in a manner now obsolete [in Concord]. The town lends its contents as pastures, to poor men;

HDC 11.64 The charges of education and of legislation, at this period, seem to have afflicted the town [Concord].

HDC 11.65 ...in 1712, the selectmen agreed with Captain James Minott, for his son Timothy to keep the school at the school-house for the town of Concord...

HDC 11.66 Mr. Whiting was succeeded in the pastoral office [in Concord] by Rev. Daniel Bliss, in 1738. Soon after his ordination, the town seems to have been divided by ecclesiastical discords.

HDC 11.67 From the appearance of the article in the Selectmen’s warrant, in 1765, to see if the town will give the Representative any instructions about any important affair to be transacted by the General Court, concerning the Stamp Act, to the peace of 1783, the [Concord] Town Records breathe a resolute and warlike spirit.

HDC 11.68 ...in answer to letters received from the united committees of correspondence...the town [of Concord] say: We cannot possibly view with indifference the...endeavors of the enemies of this...country, to rob us of those rights, that are the distinguishing glory and felicity of this land;...

HDC 11.69 ...we will not, in this town [Concord]...buy, sell, or use any of the East India Company’s tea...

HDC 11.70 ...we think it our duty...to return our hearty thanks to the town of Boston...

HDC 11.71 In August [1774], a County Convention met in this town [Concord], to deliberate upon the alarming state of public affairs;...

HDC 11.72 On the 26th of the month [September, 1774], the whole town [Concord] resolved itself into a committee of safety...

HDC 11.73 On the 26th of the month [September, 1774], the whole town [Concord] resolved itself into a committee of safety, to suppress all riots, tumults, and disorders in said town;...

HDC 11.74 ...the men of Acton, Bedford, Lincoln and Carlisle...remembering their parent town in the hour of danger, arrived [at Concord] and fell into the ranks so fast, that Major Buttrick found himself superior in number to the enemy’s party at the bridge.

HDC 11.75 ...when the smoke began to rise from the village where the British were burning cannon-carriages and military stores, the Americans resolved to force their way into town.

HDC 11.76 ...you, my fathers [veterans of battle of Concord]...may well bear a chief part in keeping this peaceful birthday of our town.

HDC 11.77 ...[William Emerson] asked, and obtained of the town [Concord], leave to accept the commission of chaplain to the Northern army at Ticonderoga.

HDC 11.78 In the whole course of the [Revolutionary] war the town [Concord] did not depart from this pledge it had given.

Art 7.40 14 I hasten to state the principle which prescribes...its firm law to the useful and the beautiful arts.

Art 7.47 17...to make anything useful or beautiful, the individual must be submitted to the universal mind. In the first place let us consider this in reference to the useful arts.

Art 7.47 34 It was said, in allusion to the great structures of the ancient Romans, the aqueducts and bridges, that their Art was a Nature working to munificence ends. That is a true account of all just works of useful art.

Art 7.47 41 The first and last lesson of the useful arts is that Nature tyrannizes over our works.

Art 7.47 8...in useful art, so far as it is useful, the work must be strictly subordinated to the laws of Nature.

Art 7.49 3 In speaking of the useful arts, I pointed to the fact that we do not dig, or grind, or hew, by our muscular strength.

vaticination, n. (2)

Nat 1.70 1 Every surmise and vaticination of the mind is entitled to a certain respect...

PLT 12.62 10 We have all of us by nature a certain divination and parturient vaticination in our minds of some higher good and perfection than either power or knowledge.

vats, n. (1)

Aris 10.43 12 When Nature goes to create a national man, she puts a symmetry between the physical and intellectual powers. She moulds a large brain, and joins it to a great trunk to supply it; as if a fine alembic were fed with liquor for its distillations from broad full vats in the vaults of the laboratory.

Vattel, Emmerichs, n. (2)
