LS 11.7 11 In years to come [says Jesus to his disciples], as long as your people shall come up to Jerusalem to keep this feast [the Passover], the common enemies of the world shall be divided between January and December, and the eyes of the national festival, as the anniversary of my death.

LS 11.10 16 The reason why St. John does not repeat [Jesus’s] words on this occasion [the Last Supper] seems to be that he had reported a similar discourse of Jesus to the people of Capernaum more at length already.

LS 11.35 14 In all the east...will contain abundance of people.

HDC 11.35 7 [The Concord settler’s pastor said] If we look to number, we are the fewest;...if to wealth and riches, we are the poorest of all the people of God through the whole world.

HDC 11.40 10 [The Concord settler’s pastor said] If we look to number, we are the fewest;...if to wealth and riches, we are the poorest of all the people of God through the whole world. We cannot excel nor so much as equal other people in these things.

HDC 11.40 14 [The Concord settler’s pastor said] If we look to number, we are the fewest;...if to wealth and riches, we are the poorest of all the people of God through the whole world. We cannot excel nor so much as equal other people in these things; and if we come short in grace and holiness too, we are the most despicable people under heaven.

HDC 11.40 17 The sermon [to the settlers of Concord] fell into good and tender hearts; the people conspired with their teacher.

HDC 11.49 12...the people of Concord truly feel that they are lords of the soil.

HDC 11.54 23 Captain Underhill, in 1638, declared, that the new plantations of Dedham and Concord...will contain abundance of people.

HDC 11.55 22...the people of Concord became uneasy, and looked around for new seats.

HDC 11.55 27 In 1643, one seventh or one eighth part of the inhabitants [of Concord] went to Connecticut with Reverend Mr. Jones, and settled in Fairfield. Weakened by this loss, the people begged to be released from a part of their rates.

HDC 11.56 6 The people...would strive to excel in something. What can we make a jest of pumpkins, for with this fruit the Lord was pleased to feed his little flock of exiles, but will strive to excel in something.

HDC 11.58 12...the people of Concord were uneasy, and looked around for new seats.

HDC 11.61 22...the Indian seemed to inspire such a feeling as the wild beast inspire in the people near his den.

HDC 11.66 25 The ninth allegation [against Daniel Bliss] is That in praying for himself...he said, he was a poor vile worm of the dust, that was allowed as Mediator between God and his people.

HDC 11.66 26 [Mr. Daniel Bliss replied.] I was filled with wonder, that such a sinful and worthless worm as I am, was allowed to represent Christ; even so far as to be bringing the petitions and thank-offerings of the people unto God.

HDC 11.67 7...Mr. [Daniel] Bliss replied...I was filled with wonder, that such a sinful and worthless worm as I am, was allowed to represent Christ; even so far as to be bringing the petitions and thank-offerings of the people unto God, and God’s will and truths to the people.

HDC 11.67 17 In 1764, [George] Whifflett preached again at Concord, on Sunday afternoon. Mr. [Daniel] Bliss preached in the morning, and the Concord people thought their minister gave them the better sermon of the two.

HDC 11.68 22...it gives life and strength to every attempt to oppose [unconstitutional taxes], that not only the people of this, but the neighboring provinces are remarkably united in the important and interesting opposition...

ET16 5.279 15 My philosopher [Carlyle] was subdued and gentle [at Stonetenge].

SW 7.87.1 I have seen many a philosopher whose world is large enough for only one person.

WD 7.178 10 A poor Indian chief of the Six Nations of New York made a wiser reply than any philosopher, to some one complaining that he had not enough time. We said Red Jacket. I suppose you have all there is.

Bok 7.198 12 You find in [Plato] that which you have already found in Homer...the poet converted to a philosopher...

Boks 7.201 8 Plato’s [definition of Athenian manners] has merits of every kind...containing that ironical eulogy of Socrates which is the source from which all the portraits of that philosopher current in Europe have been drawn.

PI 8.10 6 Sonnets of lovers...are valuable to the philosopher...for their potent symbolism.

Plu 8.15 11 The critic, the philosopher, is a failed poet.

Come 8.159 21 ...a prophet...or a philosopher...these do not joke...

Come 8.163 16 Plutarch happily expresses the value of the jest as a legitimate weapon of the philosopher.

PC 8.216 14...ever one has heard the remark...that the philosopher was above his audience.

PC 8.220 17 How much more are...the wise and good souls...Alfred the king may be a poet or a philosopher...Newton the philosopher...the foolish and sensual millions around them!

PC 8.224 4 The immeasurableness of Nature is not more astounding than [man’s] power to gather all her omnipotence into a manageable rod or wand, and presenting it to a hair’s breadth for the eye and hand of the philosopher.

Grs 8.305 25...there is not a piece of Nature in any kind but a man is born who...aims...to dedicate himself to that. Then there is the poet, the philosopher.

Imtl 8.324 24...Van Helmont, the philosopher of Holland, drew his sufficient proof [of immortality] purely from the action of the intellect.

Aris 10.44 6...the philosopher may well say, Let me see his brain, and I will tell you if he shall be poet, king...Schelling says...the goods men, and the brokers...are idealists, and only differ from the philosopher in the intensity of the charge.

Plu 10.315 26 A brother, embroiled with his brother, going to seek in the street a stranger who can take his place, resembles him who will cut off his foot to fit him in one of wood.

Plu 10.319 26...[Plutarch]...concludes...when I make an invitation, since it is hard to break the custom of the place, I give my guests leave to bring shadows,...

Plu 10.320 18...in recent reading of the old text [of Plutarch’s Morals], on considering anything absurd or unintelligible, I referred to the new text and found a clear and accurate statement in its place.

LLNE 10.328 4 in the law courts, crimes of fraud have taken the place of crimes of force.

LLNE 10.328 6 The stockholder has stepped into the place of the warlike baron.

LLNE 10.332 16 [Everett’s learning] was so coldly and weightily communicated...that this learning instantly took the highest place to our imagination.

LLNE 10.350 18 All these [the hyaena, the jackal, the gnat, the bug, the flea] shall be redressed by human culture, and the useful goat and dog and innocent poetical moth, or the wood-tick to consume decomposing wood, shall take their place.

LLNE 10.357 13 [Thoreau said] I have never got over my surprise that I should have been born into the most estimable place in all the world...

LLNE 10.358 2 The large cities are panharmonies; and the theorists drew all their argument from facts already taking place in our experience.

LLNE 10.359 25 The West Roxbury Association was formed in L.L., by a society of members...who bought a farm in West Roxbury...and took possession of the place in April.

LLNE 10.359 25 An old house on the place [Brook Farm] was enlarged...

HDC 11.318 9...after the bargain [for Concord] was concluded, Mr. Simon Willard, pointing to the four corners of the world, declared that they had bought three miles from that place, east, west, north and south.

HDC 11.63 24...nothing would satisfy [the country people] but that the government last be bound in chains or cords, and put in a more secure place...

HDC 11.74 26 A head-stone and a foot-stone, on this bank of the river, mark the place where these first victims [of the American Revolution] lie.

HDC 11.83 10 I have been greatly indebted, in preparing this sketch [of Concord], to the printed but unpublished History of this town, furnished me by the unhesitating kindness of its author [Lemuel Shattuck], long a resident in this place.

LVB 11.95 9...the steps of this crime [the relocation of the Cherokees] follow each other...at such fatally quick time, that the millions of virtuous citizens, whose agents the government are, have no place to interpose...

EWI 11.105 19 Granville Sharpe found [the West Indian slave] at his brother’s and procured a place for him in an apothecary’s shop.

EWI 11.139 23 The tendency of things runs steadily to this point, namely...to give [every man] so much power as he naturally exerts,—no more, no less. Of course, the timid and base persons...who owe all their place to the opportunities which the government has offered them, to deceive and defraud men, shudder at the change...

Farm 7.141 16 It be true that, not by votes of political parties but by the eternal laws of political economy, slaves are driven out of a slave state as fast as it is surrounded by free states, then the true abolitionist is the farmer, who...stands all day in the field...making a product with which no forced labor can compete.
In political economy, the term "political" often appears in discussions of economic policies and their impacts on society. For instance, when discussing the effects of slavery on the economy of a state, one might say, "slaves are driven out of a slave state as fast as it is surrounded by free states." This highlights the economic consequences of political decisions, such as the abolition of slavery.

Malthusian principles, which stress the importance of population control in relation to resources, have also been discussed in the context of political economy. The human mind was a factor that contributed to new solutions for difficult political problems, as Malthus suggested.

Political science is practiced in both mechanics and political society, and political agents are often involved in matters of international relations. The political reigns of terror have been reigns of madness and the fabled ring of Gyges is simply mischievous. A new political hack is needed to address political questions.

The nervous system is crucial in political economy, and the need for a revitalizing influence is felt. Carlyle’s treatise on the influence of literature on politics is acknowledged with admiration.

When John Quincy Adams returned from Washington, his political friends deserted him, but many of his political enemies remained. His preservation of his political strength is attributed to his ability to change his political course as circumstances required.

In conclusion, political economy is not mean, and every significant political event is of great interest. The perspective of political economy is always forward-looking, and the solutions it offers are often creative and innovative. The role of political economists is to provide practical solutions to contemporary problems, ensuring that the human mind is not forgotten in the quest for practical solutions. Political economy, therefore, remains a vital and dynamic field of study, essential for understanding the complexities of modern society.

SwM 4.97 21 In the chief examples of religious illumination somewhat morbid has mingled, in spite of the unquestionable increase of mental power.
SwM 4.101 2 ...[Swedenborg] seems to have kept the friendship of men in power.
SwM 4.104 6 The robust Aristotelian method...skilful to discriminate power from form...had trained a...race of athletic philosophers.
SwM 4.107 12 In the plant, the gene or germinative point opens to a leaf, then to another leaf, with a power of transforming the leaf into radicle, stamen, pistil, petal, bract, sepal, or seed.
SwM 4.107 20 In the animal, nature makes a vertebra, or a spine of vertebrae, and helps herself still by a new spine, with a limited power of modifying its form.
SwM 4.130 14 Success, or a fortunate genius, seems to depend...on a due proportion, hard to hit, of moral and mental power.
SwM 4.133 3 Swedenborg’s system of the world...lacks power to generate life.
SwM 4.141 22 [Swedenborg’s spiritual world] is...very like, in its endless power of void and infinite power, to the manna of dreaming.
MoS 4.151 13 Having at some time seen that the happy soul will carry all the arts in power, [men predisposed to morals] say, Why cumber ourselves with superfluous realizations?...
MoS 4.152 6 ...to the men of practical power...the man of ideas appears out of his reason.
MoS 4.156 13 [The skeptic says] Why exaggerate the power of virtue? MoS 4.172 10 ...the interrogation of custom at all points...is the evidence of [the superior mind’s] perception of the flowing power which remains itself in all changes.
MoS 4.175 15 There is the power of moods.
MoS 4.175 17 There is the power of complexions...MoS 4.176 27 ...is no community of sentiment discoverable in distant times and places? And when it shows the power of self-interest, I accept that as part of the divine law.
MoS 4.177 9 We have too little power of resistance against this ferocity which charges us.
MoS 4.181 3 [The man of thought] can behold with serenity the yarning gulf between the ambition of man and his power of performance...
MoS 4.184 24...the incompleteness of the power is the universal grief of young and ardent minds.
MoS 4.184 12 ...to each man is administered a single drop, a bead of dew of vital power, per day...
MoS 4.185 2 In every house...this chasm is found...between the largest promise of ideal power, and the shabby experience.

ShP 4.190 26 ...[every master’s] power lay...in his love of the materials he worked on. What is an economy of power?...
ShP 4.191 10 Great general power, one would almost say, consists in not being original at all...
ShP 4.204 21...there is in all cultivated minds a silent appreciation of [Shakespeare’s] suggestive power and beauty.
ShP 4.212 9 With [Shakespeare’s] wisdom of life is the equal endowment of imaginative and of lyric power.
ShP 4.213 8 ...[Shakespeare] is strong, as nature is strong, who lifts the landscape of mountain slopes without effort and by the same rule as she floats a gulf between the ambition of man and his power of performance...
ShP 4.213 22 ...the interrogation of custom at all points...is the evidence of [the superior mind’s] perception of the flowing power which remains itself in all changes.
ShP 4.214 3 [Shakespeare] had the power to make one picture.
ShP 4.214 13 [Shakespeare’s] lyric power lies in the genius of the piece.
ShP 4.217 11 [Shakespeare]...never took the step which seemed inevitable to his predecessors, namely, to explore the virtue which resides in these [natural] symbols and imparts this power:--what is that which they themselves say? ShP 4.217 22 Are the agents of nature, and the power to understand them, worth no more than a street serenade...
ShP 4.218 2 As long as the question is of talent and mental power, the world of men has not [Shakespeare’s] equal to show.
NMW 4.223 14 Following [Swedenborg’s] analogy, if any man is found to carry with him the power and affections of vast numbers, if Napoleon is France, then it is because the people whom he sways are little Napoleons.
