

HONR 3900-880: Honors Internship Class

Dr. Ali Hatch

Meets every other Monday

Engage in hands-on work in the community and gain practical knowledge and real-world experience. The course is designed to help you combine professional experiences with an academic component that involves critical thinking and interdisciplinary approaches to problem-solving.

Benefits include:

- Acquiring professional skills and knowledge
- Building a network of connections
- Developing insights on possible career options
- Applying classroom material to real-world experiences

Check out what students are saying about the course:

"I found this internship course challenged me to try things I didn't think I was capable of. I left this internship feeling more prepared for my future field and with connections I can learn more from!"

-Luce Gibbs

"I found the class to be extremely beneficial - especially the career skills and internship opportunity. Everyone always talks about things that are important for their future (like having an internship), but that's where the conversation usually stops. I found it really beneficial to go through my first internship with an entire class of people, and having Dr. Hatch there to help us through it was very helpful. She also gave us information about our future careers throughout the class which was very helpful."

-Alyson Ayers

Learn more at:

<https://www.colorado.edu/honors/honors-internship-course>

Questions? Email Dr. Hatch (alison.hatch@colorado.edu)