

HONORS DEVELOPMENTAL PSYCHOLOGY PSYC 3684-880

The study of human development allows us ask some of life's most fundamental questions. Why are we the person we are today? Will we be the same person by the time we reach old age? In this class you will be introduced to the science of human development and how it captures the ways that our journeys are both similar to, and different from, one another. Theory and research in developmental psychology help organize our exploration of these questions and provide methods to help us discover answers.

