You are entitled to receive information from your therapist about the methods of therapy, the techniques used, the duration of your therapy, if known, and the fee structure. You can seek a second opinion from another therapist or terminate therapy at any time.

In a professional relationship, sexual intimacy is never appropriate and should be reported to the board that licenses, registers, or certifies the licensee, registrant or certificate holder.

Generally speaking, the information provided by and to the client during therapy sessions is legally confidential and cannot be released without the client’s consent. There are exceptions to this confidentiality, some of which are listed in the Notice of Privacy Rights you were provided as well as other exceptions in Colorado and Federal law. These exceptions are listed in the Colorado statutes (C.R.S. 12-43-218). Such requirements include situations when a psychologist or counselor determines that you may inflict harm on yourself or others, or situations in which child abuse/neglect or elder abuse/neglect have taken place. If a legal exception arises during therapy, if feasible, you will be informed accordingly. We share cases within our team for clinical planning and support and all of our counselors are bound to the same confidentiality laws. We destroy all records after 7 years.

In situations when imminent threat or harm to self or others is a concern of your counselor, your personal information and details of the situation/concern will be provided to the CU-Boulder faculty/staff-specific Threat Assessment Team.

III. My Clinical Approach
I utilize an integrative model for counseling. My fundamental approach to therapy is collaborative and inclusive. I use a variety of techniques and methods drawn from Cognitive Behavior Therapy, Mindfulness Practice, Brief/Solution Focused Therapy, Existential Therapy, and Motivational Interviewing in working with individuals, couples, families, and groups. I am available to meet with you for seven sessions per year free of charge and will provide you with external referrals if additional therapy is desired. If at any point you would like additional information and/or have questions about any aspect of your therapy with me, please feel free to ask.

I have read the preceding information, it has also been provided verbally, and I understand my rights as a client or as the client’s responsible party.
