

Happy Sunday! We hope you had a wonderfully fun and safe Halloween last week, and thank you so much to everyone who attended the Honors RAP Halloween Fun Fest! We enjoyed delicious treats, were in awe of everyone's costumes, and enjoyed a childhood favorite, Hocus Pocus!

Due to our spectacular all-hall symposium this Thursday, we will not be having our small flock events this week, but never fear they will return!

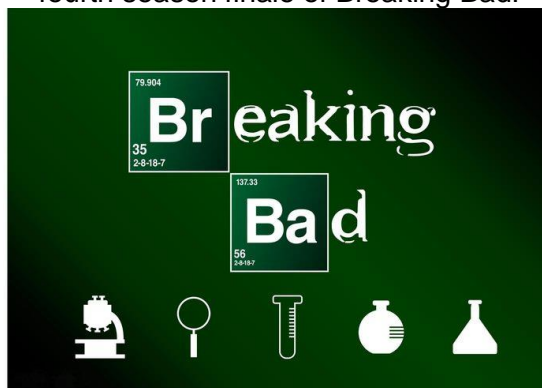

The flock leaders decked out in their Halloween costumes (left) and the costume contest winners (right)

Upcoming Events

Wednesday November 9, 6 pm
Breaking Bad TV with a Prof
Hellems 241

Attendance Tracker Punch: No

Enjoy the Big Short last week? Sad you missed it? Either way, you're in luck! Head to Hellems 241 this Wednesday, November 9th at 6:00 to enjoy watching and discussing the fourth season finale of Breaking Bad!

Thursday November 10, 7-8 pm
All-Honors RAP Symposium
Kittredge Central Multipurpose Room
Dessert Bar Follows

Attendance Tracker Punch: Yes

Head over to Kitt Central (the building right across the pond where we had our meeting at the start of the semester) Thursday at 7 pm for our first All-Hall Symposium this year! There will be delicious treats, intriguing faculty presentations, and all the information you'll need to apply to become a Flock Leader! Don't miss this event or leave your attendance tracker in your room, it is sure to be a remarkable event!

Look forward to December- we will be having a Gingerbread House contest on Thursday December 1st at 7 pm! Mark the date and get ready to celebrate the holidays!

Thank you so much to all our Dark Wing members (those who have been a part of the Honors RAP for at least a year) who RSVP'ed to attend the Dark Wing trip to the Cheesecake Factory tomorrow evening. We look forward to seeing you all!

Ecological Footprint Survey

Honors RAP student Brenna Wider is conducting research into the impacts that people have on the environment. She invites you to participate in an ecological footprint survey that asks questions about food consumption, travel, and electricity and water use. Participation is voluntary, anonymous, and should take but 7 minutes. Help out Brenna and her team by taking the survey, linked below. Thank you!
https://cuboulder.qualtrics.com/SE/?SID=SV_emOJN8TZHBv8cl

Deck the Doors with Anna's Drawings

By Chelsea Magyar

Anna Bodnar, a freshman, drew on the whiteboard attached to her door like most Smith Hall residents; however, her artwork has appeared on other doors as well. "The Creation of Patrick" on an east second door. The elvish script on a door on east first. Both Bodnar's. And she would happily draw on anyone else's door in exchange for chocolate.

"It's [drawing] sort of zen, in a way, and it's what I do in my free time to relax," said Bodnar.

A chemistry major, Bodnar is not pursuing art as part of her college career, but if she stopped drawing, she would feel as if she gave up a part of herself. "Just because I'm not majoring in it doesn't mean that I can't do it anymore. . . it's a great way to detach myself from my busy schedule.

Drawing helps Bodnar decompress after hours of coursework. "Nothing like aggressively attacking a piece of paper with a colored pencil to get out the stress."

Currently, Bodnar's drawing endeavors involve a set of three pieces for a friend: a snake made of obsidian, a bird made of silver, and a snake made of fire.

