2005 Conference

CONSCIENCE AND THE FREE EXERCISE OF RELIGION

The Constitution enshrines freedom of religion but says nothing about conscience. Yet the framers made many references to conscience in describing their aspirations for constitutional liberty, and religious duties are often articulated in terms of conscience. The Twelfth Rothgerber Conference brings together prominent scholars to probe this enduring enigma and to explore other issues about religious freedom.

The Byron White Center

The Byron R. White Center for the Study of American Constitutional Law was founded in 1990 through the generous bequest of one of the Law School's most outstanding graduates and patrons, Ira. C. Rothgerber, Jr. Named in honor of the former Supreme Court Justice and C.U. alumnus, the Byron White Center is an important educational resource for the Law School, for the University, and for the citizens of Colorado.

The purposes of the Center are to enhance the study and teaching of constitutional law, and to stimulate public debate and understanding of our constitutional system. The Center's programs are designed to integrate the perspectives of the practicing lawyer and the legal scholar and to bring to bear on constitutional law other relevant disciplines, including history, philosophy, psychology, and political science. The Center's Advisory Board comprises Anne N. Costain, Professor of Political Science and Associate Vice President for Human Relations and University Risk Management; Jeffrey N. Cox, Professor of Comparative Literature and Humanities and Director, Center for Humanities and the Arts; David R. Mapel, Associate Professor of Political Science and Director, Keller Center for the Study of the First Amendment; and Robert Trager, Professor, Journalism and Mass Communication.

The Byron White Center Director—Richard B. Collins
University of Colorado law faculty since 1982; Associate Dean 1996-98. Co-author, The Colorado State Constitution; Cohen's Handbook of Federal Indian Law.
Director of the White Center since 2001

University of Colorado School of Law

The University of Colorado School of Law was established in 1892 and is a charter member of the Association of American Law Schools, organized in 1901. The School has been on the American Bar Association's list of approved law schools since 1923.

The School of Law maintains high standards of academic performance with total enrollment of about 500. The strong student body ranks among the nation's top 20. Recent studies of legal scholarship conclude that the University of Colorado has one of the most prolific and influential faculties in the nation.

Keller First Amendment Center

The Keller Center for the Study of the First Amendment is part of the Political Science Department of the University of Colorado, Boulder. The Center was endowed in 1993 by Mr. Leroy Keller, Vice President and general manager of UPI's International Service and a CU graduate. The Center supports and encourages teaching, research and public service on topics and issues relating to the nature, meaning, and contemporary standing of First Amendment rights and liberties. The Center seeks to sponsor activities that educate and inform the public about the historical meaning and philosophical justification of First Amendment rights and about contemporary threats to those rights. Professor David R. Mapel is Keller Center Director.

University of Colorado Law Review

The University of Colorado Law Review, under the leadership of Editor-in-Chief Brooke McKinley, will publish the conference papers in Volume 76. The Law Review has published the proceedings of many Byron White Center conferences, including Constitutional Conflicts on Public Lands, Conservative Judicial Activism, Constitutional Law and the Experience of Judging, Law and Character, and Colorado's Amendment 2.
