February in the Greenhouse

Although February is a short month, we have plenty to share.

As we hit the midpoint of the semester, we start welcoming more classes to the greenhouse. We had the design of coffee, nature in Japanese art, plant ecology, and plants, evolution and agriculture classes visit this month. That puts us at nearly 150 student visitors this month!

In addition to our student tours, we have had nearly 50 guests visit for public tours with more coming up in the coming days!

On Wednesday, 2/25, staff came in to our beautiful Sansevieria masoniana toppled over in the hallway. It had grown so big that it burst out of its pot. This was one of Janice's pride and joy plants.

Super student Spartak and volunteer Abby helped us divide it up. Many went around campus and a whole wheelbarrow was set aside for Denver Botanic Gardens.

This month was filled with action as well as surprises (water leaks, broken parts, and more) but we are excited for March as it will bring us a new RO system and shade cloth for Ramaley greenhouse
