Collins, Elmo
1.5 linear feet, 1892-1993
Elmo Collins' collection concerns the International Typographical Union’s Printers Home in Colorado Springs. Collins (born in 1926) is a retired printer, and resident of the Printers Home, who worked at the Toledo Blade and served as the chief contract negotiator with the newspaper management in the Union’s heyday, the 1950's and ‘60's. In the 1990's, Collins has been working on a history of the International Typographical Union. The Union Printers Home, built in 1892, is often described as a red sandstone “castle” for Union members to retire or recuperate from illness or financial hardship. It originally sat on 300 acres of land, and contained a hospital and sanatorium for the treatment of tuberculosis, a disease common to printers, who frequently had to work with carbon and lead. The Printers Home once provided members with free lodging, food, and medical services, paid for by Union dues and donations. However, as the Union’s membership decreased (largely due to technological changes) the costs became too high and the surrounding land was sold, leaving 27 acres. In 1987, the ITU merged with the Communications Workers of America, whose members and their spouses are now entitled to live in the home, which, although it is no longer free, boasts lower costs than a nursing home.

CU Cosmopolitan Club
6 linear feet, 1922-1988
The Cosmopolitan Club is one of the oldest student clubs still in operation. Organized in 1922, the Club was intended to be a social welcoming organization for international students in the face of a rising tide of anti-immigrant sentiment. By the late 1930s the Cosmo Club had developed into the only international and consciously multi-ethnic organization on campus, heavily influencing the early CU civil rights efforts (1938-1945). After WWII a proliferation of academic and student international and ethnic clubs severely quieted the Cosmo Club’s influence. 1960s and 1970s activism was reflected in the Cosmo Clubs name change to the Foreign Student Alliance. The Club has since returned to its less political roots since 1981. The Collection consists of Club records, minutes, correspondence, and activity files.

CU Cyclotron Files
90 linear feet, 1958-2008
The Cyclotron building was initially built with Colorado state funds in 1957, matched with an Atomic Energy Commission grant to build the cyclotron in 1958. Later to be called the Nuclear Physics Laboratory, Science Learning Laboratory, in 1960 it was the first such device between St. Louis and the West Coast. In 1962, the cyclotron produced a beam of hydrogen nuclei. The cyclotron's 85 ton magnet accelerated particles of hydrogen, carbon and other matter and hurled them against the nucleus of atoms to smash them. Physicists were exploring the means and manner in which atoms could be smashed. The machine also produced radioactive materials for other research. Research was funded by AEC and NSF grants, employed CU physics faculty. The collection includes their entire office files.

CU Executive Vice President
113 linear feet, 1960s-1992
Papers of the University of Colorado Central Administration, Executive Vice President. The office of Executive Vice President has only been of intermittent tenure (1973-1975, 1989-1993, and 1994-), growing out of, and retiring back into, other Vice Presidential offices. Includes substantial consolidated papers (1960s-1974, 1970s-1992) as the three Executive Vice Presidents, Roland C. Rautenstraus, J. Russell Nelson and Theodore Volsky, Jr., tended to carry forward papers from previous administrative posts. The position of Executive Vice President appears to have been less consistent than those of other vice presidencies. The position was of a delegatory nature - presidents selecting EVPs who would best perform such administrative, budgetary, or personnel tasks the presidents deemed necessary. EVPs acted as chiefs of staff in the central administration, and in a supernumery fashion during the president's absence. When either a president or an executive vice president left for another position, or retired, the post of Executive VP would cease to exist.

CU Faculty Council
19.5 linear feet, 1967-1993
The Faculty Council Collection contains papers from the Executive Committee, Chair’s records, secretary’s records, agendas and minutes, correspondence, and alphabetical files. The Faculty Council was formed in 1967 as a result of a growing campus, a greatly enlarged number of faculty and lack of participation in the Faculty Senate. The questions facing faculty governance had grown in complexity and did not match the cumbersome structure of the Faculty Senate. The Faculty Council worked with the students and gave more power to the faculty over university governance. In 1974, when the University of Colorado split into four campuses, Boulder, Colorado Springs, Denver, and the Health Sciences Center, the Faculty Council was dominated by the Boulder campus. The Colorado Springs, Denver, and Health Sciences Center all formed their own faculty assemblies. In 1976, the Faculty Council formed the Boulder Faculty Assembly, which assumed many of the duties previously performed by the Council.

CU Faculty Council Privilege and Tenure Committee (Closed)
41 linear feet, 1966-2005
The Privilege and Tenure Committee is a constituent body of the Faculty Council that handles matters concerning faculty promotion and tenure at all campuses of the University of Colorado. In the University of Colorado’s history, tenure could be classified into two time periods: pre- and post-1966. Prior to 1966, the basis for tenure was discussed solely within the Board of Regents laws, existing as a concern of the Regents. Any documents related to pre-1966 tenure issues should be sought in the Regents’ Minutes and University of Colorado President’s Office Papers. After 1966 the Regents accepted the 1940 AAUP Proposal for Academic Freedom. It appears that the Privilege and Tenure Committee’s records date after the mid-1960s. The Collection contains specific P&T case files spanning 1966–2005, as well as internal Privilege and Tenure Committee communication. THIS COLLECTION IS CLOSED PER UNIVERSITY POLICY AND COLORADO OPEN RECORDS STATUTE.

CU Honors
405 linear feet, 1959-(1981-2002)
The University of Colorado Boulder College of Arts and Sciences’ Honors Program is one of the oldest honors programs in the United States. The undergraduate program has roots going back before the 1920s, with the first honors committee formed in 1928. The Honors Program underwent several changes until it assumed something similar to its present form in 1959. In 1959, a student could earn honors by maintaining a GPA of 3.0 or higher, scoring highly on GRE department exams, an oral test, and a three hour written test. Many students also wrote a thesis as part of their individual plan. In 1981, writing and defending a senior thesis was added as a requirement for achieving honors recognition. The Honors Program continued to expand over the ensuing decades, with a record-setting 300 students graduating with honors in 2012. This collection contains senior honors theses dating from 1959 through 2012, however there are very few theses before 1981.

Wolle, Muriel Sibell

28.5 linear feet, 1931-1976

Muriel Sibell Wolle (1898-1977) was a nationally known Western author, artist, historian and teacher. For more than 40 years she was a professor of fine arts at the University of Colorado. Her artistic career explored the subject and landscapes of deserted mountain towns. Her own paintings and lithographs provide an artistic record of Colorado's disappearing past. She wrote several books and articles about the history of these ghost towns to accompany her sketches. Ms. Wolle also designed backgrounds and stage sets for University theater productions. The collection includes correspondence, scrapbooks, photographs, manuscripts, notes, lectures, printed matter, personal memorabilia, approximately 2,000 slides of her paintings and of Western architecture, plus items belonging to Francis Wolle.

Women’s International League for Peace and Freedom, 2nd Accession
Organizational records of the International Headquarters in Geneva, Switzerland, 1915 – 1990, 86 Linear feet
Records documenting the activities of an international women’s peace organization. Established in 1915, in The Hague, the Women’s International League for Peace and Freedom (WILPF) was created to achieve world disarmament, full rights for women, racial and economic justice, an end to all forms of violence through peaceful means. WILPF’s goal was, and still is, to establish those political, social, and psychological conditions which can assure peace, freedom, and justice for all. This Archival collection is the Second Accession to the WILPF Collection. It contains correspondence, Executive Committee meeting minutes, headquarters papers, Triennial Congress logistical and informational documents, circular letters and newsletters, official WILPF resolutions, case files, section files, country files, topical research materials, United Nations documentation, seminar and symposium papers, as well as a variety of non-WILPF and WILPF peace-related publications.

Women’s International League for Peace and Freedom, Swarthmore College Accession
23.5 linear feet, 1915 – 1990
The Women’s International League for Peace and Freedom (WILPF) is an organization presently headquartered in Geneva, Switzerland. The League was established at The Hague, Netherlands in 1915; its name at the time was the International Committee of Women for Permanent Peace (ICWPP). Since that time the organization’s members have been involved in diverse issues ranging from human rights to disarmament and virtually everything in between. The Swarthmore College Peace Collection accession of WILPF records, formerly housed at the Swarthmore College Peace Collection in Pennsylvania, is comprised of documents pertaining to the League’s activities; including Executive Committee Meetings and Triennial Congresses, internal correspondence and correspondence with outside parties, and documents from WILPF national and branch sections. The dates of these documents range from the League’s beginnings in 1915 through the year 2000. However, the majority of the documents are dated in the earlier years of this timeframe. Women’s International League for Peace and Freedom, 3rd, 4th, 5th Accessions
60, 54, and 11 linear feet respectively, 1970s-2000s
The Women’s International League of Peace and Freedom is a nonprofit peace advocacy group founded in 1915, whose aim is to achieve full rights for women, world disarmament, racial and economic justice, and an end to all forms of violence through non-violent practices. WILPF is devoted to uniting women in the cause rooting out the causes of war and promoting peace. The 3rd Accession of the WILPF collection consists of papers from 1987-2001. These papers consist of financial records and correspondence, and include materials concerning the International Executive Committee (IEC) from 1993 to 2001, the Jane Addams Peace Association (JAPA), the Peace Train, disarmament, the Committee on the Status of Women for the years 1993 to 2002, and publications such as the “International Peace Update.” The 4th Accession includes a variety of informational documents concerning the national and international efforts of the WILPF organization. As is true for the fifth accession, there is small mention of the International Executive Committee (IEC), the Jane Addams Peace Association (JAPA), and cover art for the International Peace Update (IPU). Various internal organizational files can also be found in this accession, including financial matters, mailing lists, and general correspondence. This specific accession is also characterized by a large number of audio-visual materials. These documents are unorganized to poorly organized with what seems to be a miscellaneous spattering of information that needs to be incorporated into the processed collection. The 5th Accession includes files concerning the 25th International Congress; various correspondence, publications, and conference materials; documents concerning the International Executive Committee from 1985-2000, and the year 2002; and information about the Jane Addams Peace Association (JAPA). There are documents available for the years 2003 and 2004 on the International Officer’s Meeting (IOM), as well as information about Pax et Libertas, for the years 1950-1969 and 1979-1994.

Women’s International League for Peace and Freedom - Audio Visual

2 linear feet, 1915-1960s.

The photograph collection of the Women’s International League for Peace and Freedom came from the office in Geneva, Switzerland in 1997. These constitute the major holding of photos from 1915 to the present for the WILPF organization. The photos show images of Congress attendees and officers, including Jane Addams, Gertrude Baer, and many other outstanding WILPF leaders and members. They have been arranged chronologically by Congress or meeting, or alphabetically by person, country, or subject. Most identifications were provided by the staff of WILPF in Geneva, but some were identified by research into old congress programs and WILPF publications.

Women’s International League for Peace and Freedom, UN Office, 1st and 2nd Accessions

6 and 36 linear feet, 1934-1951-2005

These records document the peace and human rights related work of the Women’s International League for Peace and Freedom (WILPF). The documents are primarily concerned with WILPF’s involvement in United Nations in New York. WILPF’s goal has been, and continues to be, to establish those political, social, and psychological conditions which can assure peace, freedom, and justice for all. WILPF has had consultative status with the U.N. through the Economic and Social Council since 1948. Its work pertaining to the U.N. includes lobbying for democratization of all U.N. organizations and agencies, monitoring the activities of the Security Council in order to promote reforms, opposing corporatization of the U.N., and advocating for the abolition of the Security Council veto. This collection includes WILPF publications, circular letters and newsletters, symposium papers, correspondence, and WILPF’s U.N. office logistical and informational documents from 1951-2005.

World Peace Council

25.5 linear feet, 1978-1990

Files contain the papers of Rob Prince during his membership (1978 – 1990) in the Soviet sponsored peace movement, World Peace Council (WPC). The WPC was quite active in the anti-war movement during the Vietnam era and played a significant role in the opposition to nuclear arms. The WPC further provided a counter narrative to US hegemony and an alternative for activists in the West unmoved by anti-Soviet propaganda. The collection of papers does include a great deal of the World Peace Council’s documents, notes and memos, but also a substantial amount of Prince’s personal diaries and correspondence from that time. The bulk of the material comes from the mid to late 1980s, immediately prior to the collapse of the Soviet Union. The diaries are closed to the public until December 31, 2002 unless prior written consent is obtained from Rob Prince.
