Hello Global Development group –here is a list of courses that I have pulled from the course catalog. Please look through to make sure I am capturing the right courses from your department and to make sure your classes are listed if they are indeed development-centric courses and not courses that have some development content. That was the quasi-arbitrary line I am using. There are many more courses that obviously touch on development as many look at current-day socioeconomic contexts, such as several ANTH courses that are region-specific, Political Science courses that have a global but not development context, some RAP courses, “human diversity” core courses, methods courses, and courses that cover sustainability or global human ecology-related topics. However, unless development is a large part of the class, I did not list them. Some of these courses are closed to those outside the major.

If there is demand for a list of all courses that have a current international and or sustainable focus, that would be another project, but these represent the courses most closely aligned with a “traditional” development core.
