Supporting a Friend

Sexual assault affects not only the survivor, but also the people closest to them. If someone you know has been sexually assaulted, the resources listed in this brochure are available to you as well. Here are some helpful ways to support a person impacted by sexual assault:

- Listen.
- Take the situation seriously.
- Reassure your friend that they are not to blame for the assault.
- Avoid questioning the survivor; do not ask "why" questions.
- Address safety and validate feelings.
- Inform your friend about the resources available and encourage them to seek support.
- Inform your friend they have rights and options to report to the police and/or the university.
- Support your friend in doing what they decide is best for them regarding reporting.
- Find a safe place to get support for yourself so you are able to talk about what has happened and how you feel about it.

What is Sexual Assault?

Sexual assault is unwanted, non-consensual sexual contact ranging from unwanted sexual touching to unwanted penetration. People can be assaulted by someone they know — a date, a classmate, a family member, an intimate partner or a friend. Non-stranger sexual assault accounts for the majority of sexual assaults on college campuses. CU Boulder has policies that prohibit sexual misconduct. [colorado.edu/dontignoreit]

Alcohol and Other Drugs

Nationally, alcohol is involved in many campus sexual assaults. If people are physically or mentally incapacitated while intoxicated, they may not be able to provide consent for sexual contact, and such contact may be considered sexual assault. Alcohol is the substance most often used to commit drug-facilitated sexual assault. A variety of other drugs can be used in this way as well. Sexual assault also happens without any drugs or alcohol.

Possible Responses to Sexual Assault

There are many different responses a survivor may have to sexual assault. Some common reactions include, but are not limited to:

- Shock or disbelief
- Shame and embarrassment
- Sense of responsibility for the assault
- Fear of being blamed by others
- Loss of control
- Feeling overwhelmed
- Feeling vulnerable or unsafe

Although there may be similarities in how people respond to sexual assault, reactions and the process of recovery can vary. Recovery is very much one’s own process. Gathering as much information as possible may help people make decisions about what will be most beneficial for them.

How to Access Help

Every sexual assault is different and sometimes people are unsure if they were sexually assaulted. If someone is confused, frightened or upset by something that has happened, we encourage them to seek support.

Medical

Forensic evidence can be collected and saved by having a medical forensic exam performed by a Sexual Assault Nurse Examiner (SANE). SANE exams for Boulder County are done at Boulder Community Health Hospital, usually within 72-96 hours of the assault, but sometimes evidence can still be collected up to a week after the assault. You will not have to pay for the forensic exam. A medical forensic exam can be performed without reporting to police and there is also an option to have one done anonymously.

For more information, contact OVA or MESA or visit [ccasa.org/reportingoptions]

It is important to remember that it was not your fault; no matter what the circumstances, you did not deserve to be sexually assaulted.

Counseling Support

No matter how long ago the assault occurred, having a safe place to talk may be important for one’s recovery process. The Office of Victim Assistance (OVA) services are confidential and free. OVA provides advocacy and short-term counseling at no charge to all CU Boulder students, staff and faculty.

Advocacy

OVA advocates are confidential and can serve as a primary resource for victims of a sexual assault. Confidential advocates are available through OVA and Mesa (Boulder County’s rape crisis team). Advocates can serve as liaisons to other services, can accompany people to meetings and advocate for someone through systems.

Reporting

There are several options for reporting a sexual assault, and obtaining information about reporting may help with decisions. OVA can discuss reporting options confidentially.

- Reporting is not the same as pressing charges against an offender. An oral or written police report can sometimes be made to the police without proceeding to an investigation.
- If the accused person(s) is a CU student, staff or faculty member, campus disciplinary actions can be pursued by reporting to the Office of Institutional Equity and Compliance: [colorado.edu/institutionalequity]
- You can also visit the Don’t Ignore It website: [colorado.edu/dontignoreit]

To consult with OVA, call directly or complete an online confidential form at: [colorado.edu/confidentialreporting]. Completing this form does not constitute a report to the university and will not initiate any investigation.
