GLOBAL STUDY

in East Africa: Understanding Public Management and Public Health Practices

UGANDA & RWANDA | May 21-June 6, 2019

Since 2009, the GLI has been engaging students and community leaders in the United States and East Africa to Listen. Think. Act.

The overarching learning objective is to bring a set of policy and practice issues to life in an applied setting. Students will achieve this by accessing a range of relevant stakeholders and agencies in action.

Throughout the course, students will be exposed to a series of dialogues, conversations, and interactions with the grassroots leaders of several distinct communities, government officials, entrepreneurs, university professors, public sector agencies, and many others throughout East Africa. We hope that these conversations will prepare students to think globally and act locally.

During their time in East Africa, students will travel to a both Uganda and Rwanda and visit places like Kampala, Kabale, Lake Bunyonyi, Musanze, and Kigali. These sites are specifically selected to highlight the distinct challenges for and successes by urban and rural communities in the developing world.
