

PSCI-3924: Identity Politics - Tamar Malloy

This class is being taught as a synchronous remote class. All course meetings will occur synchronously via Zoom during the scheduled class time. Classes will generally consist of a brief lecture followed by extended discussion. Students are expected to attend these sessions and participate regularly, and attendance and participation are graded components of the class. Classes will not be recorded in order to foster students' ability to ask questions and speak openly. Therefore, recordings of the class will not be available to students who are not in attendance. There is no in-person component to this class and there is no regular required asynchronous online component to this class, though students who are temporarily too ill to attend will be provided with an asynchronous written option.