

Strategy and Politics

- Course and Section Number: 3225-581
- Instructor: Dalton Dorr
- Course Description: How many decisions do we make on a whim? This class examines how political actors consider the potential choices and preferences of other actors before strategically making their own decisions. This course introduces students to the tools and concepts of game theory, a powerful and generalized approach to understanding how people make politically strategic decisions like while voting, lawmaking, and in international conflict.
- Additional Information: Meets Online. Continuing Education is Billed separately. Will cost 460$ Per Credit Hour on top of any Main Campus Tuition. Please talk with your academic advisor for more information

American Political Thought

- Course and Section Number: 3054-581
- Instructor: Kimberly Killen
- Course Description: Highlights the development of American political theories and ideas from colonial period to present. Can also be taken for American field credit
- Additional Information: Meets Online. Continuing Education is Billed separately. Will cost 460$ Per Credit Hour on top of any Main Campus Tuition. Please talk with your academic advisor for more information