

Sex, Power, and Politics: U.S. Perspectives–Term B

Instructor: Zoe Moss

Course Number: 3174

Description: Explores how norms of sex, gender, race and sexuality find expression in institutions and policies in ways that legitimize only certain individuals as political actors, certain identities as politically relevant, and certain relationships as important. Critically examines how norms may be exposed, resisted, and changed by studying the politics of the women's, gay liberation, and men's movements in the U.S.

Recommended prerequisite: PSCI 2004

