

'Neither add to it nor take away from it': Theorizing Transmission in Biblical and Ancient Near Eastern Literature

Dr. Jacqueline Vayntrub
Yale University

Dr. Vayntrub's areas of expertise include the Hebrew Bible, wisdom literature, biblical poetry and poetics, philology, and the history of biblical scholarship. She is especially interested in the Hebrew Bible's genres and modes of discourse against the broader background of ancient Near Eastern literary production, and its reception in and impact on Western scholarship. Broadly, her work seeks to recover the values of ancient literary culture through the language of the texts and examines how these values were reshaped in their reception.
