

Johanna Bond is the Sydney and Frances Lewis Professor of Law at Washington and Lee University School of Law. An expert in international human rights law and gender and the law, Bond joined the W&L law faculty in 2008. Her forthcoming book, Global Intersectionality and Contemporary Human Rights, will be published by Oxford University Press in 2021. Bond's scholarship has appeared in the Southern California Law Review, the Emory Law Journal, the Columbia Journal of Gender and Law, the Yale Human Rights and Development Law Journal, and many other journals and other outlets. Bond was twice selected as a Fulbright Scholar, first in 2001 and again in 2015. In 2001, her Fulbright award enabled her to travel to Uganda and Tanzania to conduct research that resulted in her edited book, Voices of African Women: Women's Rights in Ghana, Uganda, and Tanzania (Carolina Academic Press, 2005).

Professor Bond previously served as the Associate Dean for Academic Affairs. As part of a small senior leadership team, she helped to position the school for continued success. Bond has worked to make the promotion of diversity, equity, and inclusion at the law school an institutional priority. Bond is an affiliate faculty member of the Women's, Gender and Sexuality Studies Program and the Africana Studies Program. She served on the Presidential Search Committee, the Provost Search Committee, the Law Dean Search Committee, and a number of other university-wide committees. Bond also served as the only law school representative on the President's Strategic Planning Steering Committee and served as Chair of that Committee's Subcommittee on Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion.

Professor Bond teaches the International Human Rights Practicum, Gender & the Law, and Torts. In her International Human Rights Practicum, students partner with Tanzanian lawyers to conduct fact-finding investigations and advocate on behalf of human rights victims. Highlights of her work beyond the classroom include organizing a group of students to accompany her to provide legal and humanitarian services to migrants at the US/Mexico border in Tijuana, Mexico in December 2018 and organizing a two-day visit to campus for Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg on the 20th anniversary of her decision mandating the admission of women to the Virginia Military Institute (VMI) in February 2017.

Before coming to W&L, Professor Bond was an Associate Professor of Law at the University of Wyoming and a Visiting Associate Professor of Law at Georgetown University Law Center. She also served as the Executive Director of the Women's Law and Public Policy Fellowship Program, a non-profit organization housed at Georgetown. Bond's human rights experience includes substantial travel and collaboration with non-governmental organizations and human rights lawyers around the world. She also served as a law clerk for United States District Judge Ann D. Montgomery in Minnesota. Bond graduated from Colorado College and the University of Minnesota, where she earned a J.D. and a master's degree in Public Policy. She also holds an LL.M. from Georgetown University Law Center.