Getting the Most Out of Summer

Students can create a class schedule that fits their needs.

- Choose from approximately 850 class sections.
- Register for one or more classes during convenient, short terms.
- Get into high-demand classes that are difficult to get into the rest of the year.

Save time and money.

All students pay by credit hour for Summer Session classes. This means they may be able to shorten their time to graduation and save money on tuition, housing and food by taking summer classes!

Summer offers an academic advantage. Students can:

- Focus on fewer classes.
- Enjoy small class sizes.
- Add a second major, minor or certificate.

Registration Information

Enrollment Limits

Summer Session classes provide students with flexible options not available the rest of the academic year. However, there are limits to certain sessions that you need to keep in mind.

- Maximum credit load allowed for most colleges and schools: 16 credit hours
- Maximum credit load for Law School students: 8 credit hours

Three-Week Intensive Sessions

It is recommended students enroll in no more than one Maymester and/or Augmester class each summer. However, they may be enrolled in both an Augmester AND a B or D term class if the class times do not overlap.

Independent Study & Thesis Hours

Any class with a 700- or 800-level section number has controlled enrollment. If students try to register for one of these classes in Buff Portal, they will receive an error message. Instead, they should contact the department administrator or advisor. Once their enrollment appointment starts, they can be manually enrolled.

Sessions E & F

Classes in Session E and Session F are considered intensives, and do not follow a typical session schedule. Refer to the Academic Dates and Deadlines section for details about these sessions.

Students with Holds

Students with S99 and CO1 holds can register in summer by filling out the online course request form at ce.colorado.edu/course-request.

Withdrawals

Dropping all summer classes in a given session—including the only Maymester or Augmester class—is considered a withdrawal. Summer Session withdrawals are unique because students can withdraw from each session in summer separately. For example, a student can withdraw from a Maymester class while staying enrolled in a Session B class.

Degree students seeking an exception to the drop or withdraw deadlines need to work with their advisor or college.
