Director's Notes:

The Learned Ladies was Molière's next-to-the-last play (followed only by The Imaginary Invalid) and the last of his great rhyming-couplet comedies such as The School for Wives, Tartuffe and The Misanthrope. It is thought by many to have been Molière's favorite play. Freyda Thomas brings us a translation/adaptation replete with hints of contemporary resonance, but maintaining the rhyming-couplet verse style so appropriate to the play's theme of intellectual pretension. We have had a bit of fun with our approach to the period and style. We hope Molière would forgive us.
